LaRoe Charges Police Collusion With Gangland

Inquiry Brings Out Bootlegging Link

Illegal Liquor 'Allowed' to Pass Through, Committee Told.

By J. Bernard McDonnell.

Charges of collusion between police and "notorious" post-repeal bootleggers and underworld characters were placed before the House District Crime Committee yesterday by Wilbur H. LaRoe, jr., chairman of the District Parole Board and the civic committee of the Federation of Churches.

Evidence collected by the Parole Board itself, after police had given Harry Yudelevit a clean bill of health, disclosed the alleged collusion and the ramifications of underworld influence and caused the board to revoke Yudelevit's parole and send him back to prison, Mr. LaRoe testified.

"The police said they were unable to pin anything on Yudelevit," he said. "We did it ourselves and called Yudelevit back before us and revoked his parole on information from the Bureau of Internal Revenue."

The information referred to indicated District police even acted as escorts and lookouts for trucks driven into the District laden with bootleg alcohol.

Suspect Cleared by Police.

Police who appeared before the board and gave Yudelevit a clean bill of health at his first hearing were Lieut. George Little, head of the vice squad, and Detective Sergts. M. J. Mahaney, M. J. Dowd and Hubert E. Brody, Mr. LaRoe said. Later on, as his story developed he refused to name policemen reputed to have been in conference with Yudelevit and a man named Montgomery because he wasn't certain and did not want to do an injustice.

Montgomery ran much illegal alcohol into the Capital last summer, it was said. It was brought by truck from Trenton, N. J., Mr. LaRoe said, and gauged its amount by stating Montgomery, who had headquarters at 1350 U street northwest, paid as much as $12,000, $13,000 and $14,000 a month for it.

"There was no interference with the operation," he added.

No Interference by Police.

"Does that include the Police Department?" asked Representative William T. Schulte.

"Including the Police Department."

Yudelevit, Mr. LaRoe continued, had been telephoned by Montgomery to meet him and together they went to Fourteenth and P streets northwest where "almost immediately they were met by two policemen. Police had confiscated two trucks belonging to Montgomery and Yudelevit's aid had been solic-

Mob Threatens In Coast Strike

Vigilantes With Clubs on Guard; Governor Asked for Troops.

By the Associated Press.

Crockett, Calif., March 13.—Sheriff John Miller said tonight officials of the California & Hawaiian Sugar Co. had asked Gov. Frank Merriam in Sacramento for troops to protect life and property from a mob of 350 longshoremen and warehousemen surging in front of the plant's entrance. They were blocking entrance to nonunion workers.

Miller said the Governor had refused to send soldiers but had promised reinforcements of highway patrolmen.

Fist fighting broke out around the plant, where 700 employes were bottled up, unwilling to leave after completion of their shift, for fear of violence.

San Pedro, Calif., March 13.—(U.P.) Close-mouthed, angry seamen and a limited group of oil company operations were deadlocked tonight in an effort to hold their current marine labor strike within the confines of immediate issues—wage increases and union preferment in the hiring of men on oil tanker crews.

Ingrid and Frederick Plight Royal Troth

Copyright, 1935, by the United Press.

Stockholm, Sweden, March 13. The Royal Courts of Sweden and Denmark soon will announce officially the engagement of pretty Princess Ingrid, daughter of the Crown Prince Gustav Adolf of Sweden, to Crown Prince Frederick of Denmark.

Their wedding will eliminate practically the only remaining eligible princess for the Prince of Wales.

Princess Ingrid is 25, the third child and only daughter of the crown prince. Her mother was Princess Margaret of Connaught, who died when the princess was 10. Crown Prince Frederick was 36 Monday. He is tall and fair.

Boy, 16, Kills Jilted Suitor Of His Sister

Fort Myer Soldier Victim of Shot After Attack in K St. Home.

Seeking to protect his 19-year-old sister, Mrs. Pauline Havener, police said, Philip Zier, 16, last night shot and killed Private John H. Gully, a Fort Myer soldier, in their home at 3912 K street northwest.

Young Zier was arrested shortly afterward by Privates Ruby Downs and T. O. Montgomery, of the Seventh Precinct, and after quizzing by members of the homicide squad was removed to the Receiving Home. He was booked on a murder charge.

Mrs. Havener was taken into custody and after questioning was removed to the House of Detention, pending the decision of Coroner A. Magruder MacDonald.

According to the story of the shooting pieced together by police from statements of the boy and the young woman, Gully was choking Mrs. Havener when the boy entered the room in response to her cries and fired the fatal shot.

Gully and Mrs. Havener had kept company for some time, but broke off several weeks ago. Last night Gully went to the K street house to renew his suit.

Mrs. Havener said he attempted to kiss her and she screamed. Then, she said, the soldier grabbed her by the throat and began choking her, at the same time declaring:

"I'm going to kill you!"

At that point, young Gully ran into the room, armed with a .22-caliber rifle. He fired and the soldier fell.

Mrs. Havener, however, was particularly disturbed when police led her from the house. At that stage of the proceedings she turned and ran back into the house, crying:

"Oh, I must see my baby. I can't leave without saying good-by."

Uruguay Defies League on Arms

By the Associated Press.

Geneva, March 13.—Little Uruguay, next-door neighbor of Paraguay, defied the League of Nations today, informing that assemblage that she did not intend to impose the league's arms embargo against Paraguay unless neighboring South American nations enforced a similar embargo against Bolivia.

A league committee encharged with the study of the war in the Chaco between Paraguay and Bolivia decided in January to lift the embargo against Bolivia but to maintain it against Paraguay on the grounds that the latter nation had not fulfilled its league obligations.

Housing Seen Business Aid By President

States FHA's Program Will Generate Trade, Jobs This Spring.

Predicts Wide Agreement That Act Points Way to Prosperity.

By Leon Dure, Jr.

President Roosevelt yesterday gave the opinion that "an immense volume of business and employment will undoubtedly be generated" this spring because of the far-flung activities of the Federal Housing Administration.

In a letter to James A. Moffett, the Federal housing administrator, he made the further prediction that "the American people will clearly see that the housing act provides for the Nation a way back to recovery and prosperity."

His letter, which was in reply to an "encouraging memorandum submitted by Mr. Moffett, took an optimistic view of operations of the Housing Administration, which has been criticized by some for not producing more new construction.

Turning his attention to another financing agency designed to stimulate business, the President named former Senator Herbert D. Stephens, of Mississippi, and Charles T. Fisher, jr., of the Detroit automobile family, as directors of the RFC.

Stephens Cinfirmed.

In accordance with the usual courtesy extended former Senators, Mr. Stephens was confirmed almost immediately by the Senate, his former colleague, Pat Harrison, obtaining unanimous consent. Senator Theodore G. Bilbo, who defeated Mr. Stephens last fall, said several days ago he would not object.

The Stephens appointment, a Democratic one, was for the unexpired term of Harvey C. Couch, resigned. Mr. Fisher, who has served as the RFC representative at Detroit, was chosen to fill the Republican vacancy created by the death last year of John J. Blaine, of Wisconsin. Both appointments run to January 22, next year.

The RFC, seeking a new outlet for funds with which to thaw out the real estate mortgage market, is now engaged in formulating a subsidiary mortgage corporation. This agency, which under present plans will be called "the RFC Mortgage Company," will be set up in a few days to extend credit to distressed holders of mortgages.

Meantime, Mr. Roosevelt in his letter to the housing administration expressed "gratification" for the work of campaign committees in 6,174 communities. He recited figures submitted to him in Mr. Moffett's memorandum, which said that between 250,000 and 300,000 canvassers are busy in 2,100 towns and cities.

Job Pledges Cited.

"I note," he wrote, "that to date calls have been made on over 6,000,000 properties and that the property owners have pledged 1,100,000 jobs for modernization and repair for a total value of $275,000,000, and that, in addition, you estimate there has already been spent since last August approximately $250,000,000 for modernization and repair."

Critics of the housing administration, on the other hand, have expressed "disappointment" with results so far, pointing out that less than $50,000,000 in modernization loans actually have been insured by the FHA so far. The difference is the FHA "estimate" of the amount of repair work generated, but not financed, by the FHA.

"In regard to construction of new homes," Mr. Roosevelt wrote, "I am glad to know that enabling legislation has been passed during the last 60 days in 26 States and that you anticipate prompt action by the remaining States where enabling legislation is necessary to permit the mutual mortgage insurance plan to operate.

"That you already have received applications for millions of dollars of mortgage insurance, with approximately 30 per cent of the applications covering the construction of new homes, plainly indicates we may expect a decided improvement

British Find Archives Corroborating Names Of Biblical Israelites

By the Palcor Agency.

Jerusalem, March 13.—One of the most important corroborations of the Bible during the period of the Kingdom of Judah was made known here today with the discovery at Tel Adduweir, midway between Beersheba and Gaza, of archives with Hebrew inscriptions which give the names of the most famous Israelites mentioned during that period in Scriptures.

The discovery was the work of a British archeological expedition headed by J. L. Starkey. The find is regarded as of unique importance because hitherto discovery of written documents of the biblical period has been rare and pottery usually has been the only available witness of the Bible stories. Hitherto the archeology of the period of the kings has disclosed only two or three inscriptions.

The British expedition has been seeking light on biblical history for some time at Tel Adduweir, which was known in ancient times a Lachish.

The remains of the Kingdom of Judah period would date back to between 900 and 600 B. C. The outstanding discoveries are the archives with Hebrew inscriptions, apparently belonging to the leading Prince of Judah, which were engraved on porcelain and in the ancient Hebrew script in choice biblical language and of a date prior to the first temple era.

Theologian Joyful At 'Great Discovery'

By the Associated Press.

New York, March 13.—The disclosure of archives said to bear important testimony to a pre-Solomon era of biblical history at Tel Adduweir, reported today in a dispatch from Jerusalem, was characterized by Dr. Julius August Bewer, of Union Theological Seminary, as a "great discovery."

Dr. Bewer, noted German theologian and professor of Hebrew and cognate languages at the seminary here, said:

"This is what we have been wishing for—longing for."

He pointed out that the first temple was built by Solomon in 970 B. C. The Jerusalem dispatch said the inscriptions brought to light at Tel Adduweir antedate the first temple era.

Plane Is Poised For Blind Hop Across Pacific

Copyright by the United Press.

Oakland, Calif., March 13.—A Douglas mystery ship, now undergoing tests which may stamp it the first self-flying plane in the world, will take off from Oakland Airport at midnight tomorrow for Honolulu, the United Press learned from unimpeachable sources tonight.

The only contingency, aside from weather, was that today's test of the plane's robot pilot and special directional compass be successful, it was said.

That these tests were successful on two separate flights today was evidenced by satisfaction expressed by those in charge of the twin-motored craft.

By Harris B. Hull.

The opening of the most ambitious aviation project yet undertaken, an 8,500-mile passenger, mail and express line across the Pacific Ocean, moved several steps closer yesterday.

Secretary of the Navy Swanson announced he had signed permits for the construction of landing facilities on three small islands in the Pacific to be used as refueling points. Swanson's order will allow Pan American Airways, contractors to the Government for the transportation of foreign air mail, to build hangars, radio stations and general airport facilities on Midway, Guam and Wake. The Navy reserved the right to take over the facilities "in an emergency."

A few hours after the Swanson announcement, Secretary of Commerce Roper stated that a new radio direction finder had been tested successfully on the West Coast by officials of the Bureau of Air Commerce working with Army pilots. The new finder, which experts believe will play an important part in future air-line operations over long stretches of the Way Is Cleared For 20 Billion In Bank Credit

Eccles Says Member Units of Reserve Are Ready for Expansion.

By the Associated Press.

An amendment to the omnibus banking bill to direct the Federal Reserve Board to stabilize production, employment and prices so far as possible "within the scope of monetary action," was proposed yesterday by Marriner S. Eccles, governor of the Reserve Board.

Testifying before the House Banking and Currency Committee, he opposed setting a definite price goal as an objective of the bill, reiterating his views that monetary action alone could not solve economic problems.

"We hear a great deal about inflation," he said. "But we don't see any signs of it in the markets. If people had a real fear of inflation they would be shifting money into equities and real estate, and commodities and prices would be going up."

Credit Expansion.

He explained, however, that the foundation had been laid for a greater expansion of credit than had been witnessed before the deflation.

He said member banks of the Federal Reserve system on the basis of their present excess reserves could extend more than $20,000,000,000 credit without having to borrow from Reserve banks.

Meanwhile, Treasury officials were viewing—apparently with considerable favor—a further refunding operation whereby upwards of $45,000,000 in interest charges could be saved annually on callable bonds.

Attention was known to be centered on $1,933,000,000 of First Liberties of 1932-47, callable on any quarterly interest payment date, and on the uncalled portion of the Fourth Liberties 4¼'s outstanding to the amount of about $1,300,000,000 and

Strachey to Fight Deportation; Cutting Joins Liberals' Protest

Will Demand Explanation From Federal Official; British Author Denies He's a Communist; Embassy Fails to Comment on Case.

By Karl Schriftgiesser.

While a storm of protest arose in liberal quarters all over America against the threatened deportation of John Strachey, the British economist and author found a champion yesterday in Senator Bronson Cutting, who announced that he would demand of Col. D. W. MacCormack, Commissioner of Immigration, an explanation of his actions against the man whom Cutting called a "distinguished political philosopher."

"Who are the people who have protested?" Cutting asked. "Mr. MacCormack says the courts have decided anyone who advocates Communism advocates overthrow of the Government by force. I've never seen them. But no matter how many decisions there are, it's preposterous. It doesn't follow that because a person follows some economic theory he wants to take a bomb and blow up the Capitol or the White House. Everyone was familiar with Mr. Strachey's views before he entered the country."

At the same time that the Labor Department was denying Strachey's arrest marked the beginning of an anti-Red drive, Secretary Swanson of the Navy Department announced he planned to rid American navy yards of Communist agitators and the House Immigration Committee started hearings on a bill designed to keep aliens from evading immigration bars by disguising themselves as seamen.

The Labor Department, through its press representative, announced that it would not give out the names of those who complained against Strachey. The same officials insisted the action against Strachey was not the beginning of a "Red drive." Senator Cutting said that it obviously was a part of the recent agitation against radicals and accused the Immigration Bureau of playing into the hands of the McCormack-Dickstein un-American activities committee which, he said, had suppressed its findings of pronounced Fascist activity while

Cut in Codes To 181 Asked By Richberg

Drastic Curtailment Is Agreed To in Face of Criticism.

New Deal Loses 2 More Decisions in U. S. Courts.

By Felix Bruner.

While Donald R. Richberg, New Deal coordinator, was suggesting to the Senate Finance Committee yesterday that the number of NRA codes be reduced by 550, from 731 to 181, two courts ruled New Deal legislation unconstitutional and one upheld a recovery law.

Pressed by congressional demand for reduction in NRA activities, the Administration, through Richberg, agreed to the most drastic curtailment yet suggested, short of complete abandonment of the recovery administration. At the same time, Richberg was emphatic in his insistence that NRA would not be abandoned.

Meanwhile, Francis Biddle, chairman of the National Labor Relations Board, told the Senate Committee on Education and Labor that Section 7(a) of the recovery act had broken down and was as good as dead. Biddle appeared in the hearing on the Wagner labor bill.

Court decisions, as reported by the Associated Press, were:

Federal Judge Merrill E. Otis, of Kansas City, upheld the Frazier-Lemke amendment to the bankruptcy act, providing for a five-year moratorium on farm debts.

Two New Deal Losses.

Federal Judge Guy L. Fake, of Newark, held that the recovery act was unconstitutional as applied to intrastate commerce. His decision was similar to the recent ruling in the Weirton case.

Federal Judge Ira Lloyd Letts, of Providence, R. I., held that the action of AAA in attempting to fix the price of milk in intrastate commerce was unconstitutional. This is the eighth adverse decision in similar cases and is leading to abandonment of the Government milk program.

Richberg made two principal suggestions for NRA legislation. These were in addition to 17 suggestions he made at the opening of hearings before the Senate Finance Committee. His first suggestion was:

"Withdraw the Federal Government from all compulsory action with reference to service trades. Require the Administration to furnish the best protection to labor and competitors in these trades that can practicably be furnished, on a voluntary basis so far as the Federal Government is concerned."

Cooperative Action.

Richberg explained that "this means the devising of standards cooperatively between the industry, the Federal Government and the States and the use of Presidential agreements and Federal administrative agencies to promote cooperation, but leaving any compulsory action to the States and local governments which so desire."

This proposal was taken as a means of meeting the numerous recent court rulings holding that NRA can not control intrastate business.

The suggestion that the number of codes be greatly reduced said:

"Require the Administration to consolidate all small codes.

"(a) with the appropriate larger codes (thereby eliminating annoyances of overlapping and separate efforts to administer); and

"(b) with a limited 'small industries' code, effective as to small industry only when the true representatives of that industry subscribe."

Richberg explained that if all codes covering less than 10,000 employes should be consolidated, 537 codes would be eliminated. In addition, he suggested, 13 major service codes could be dispensed with.

Richberg told the committee that business generally favored the NRA and that 90 per cent of the complaints came from "chiselers" and "sweat-shop operators."

Answering charges by Senator Borah that the steel code had permitted monopoly and had resulted in price increases, Richberg declared that it had only continued

Long Threatens Relief Filibuster; Defied by Glass

Too Many Jackasses; McGroarty Will Quit

After two months in Congress, Representative John S. McGroarty (Democrat), California, Townsend pension champion, told friends yesterday he would not run for reelection.

"I ought to like a fight because I'm Irish," he confided, "but I don't like all this contention. And I don't want to come back."

In support of his determination to retire he displayed a letter to a constituent. It read:

"One of the countless drawbacks of being in Congress is that I am compelled to receive impertinent letters from a jackass like you, in which you say I promised to have the Sierra Madre Mountains reforestated and that I've been in Congress two months and haven't done it. Will you please take two running jumps and go to hell?"

Utility Inquiry Delayed; Waits Vote in House

But Senate Acts Promptly; Holding Company Bill Meets Opposition.

By the Associated Press.

A parliamentary twist last night had snarled, at least temporarily, a Senate move for an investigation of utility company "propaganda" against the holding company bill, while opponents of the latter measure mustered their forces for a counterattack today.

The Senate, without a word of debate, swiftly passed the investigation resolution, introduced by Senator Norris (Republican), of Nebraska, and inspired by President Roosevelt's militant message of Tuesday in which he struck at what he called an organized "propaganda" campaign.

It developed, however, that the House also must act on the resolution before the Federal Trade Commission can push the projected inquiry into the "origin, purpose, methods and expense" of the "propaganda" lashed by Mr. Roosevelt.

Criticism of the bill to abolish utility holding companies within five years unless they prove their value to the satisfaction of the Government was in the making at the House end of the Capitol. The Interstate Commerce Committee, headed by Representative Rayburn (Democrat), of Texas, coauthor of the bill, was prepared to hear the first opposition witness today. He will be Wendell Willkie, of New York, president of the Commonwealth & Southern.

Representative Hoffman (Republican), Michigan, meanwhile told the House that the greatest holding company in the world "is that operated by the Brain Truster group."

"Let us abolish these Delaware corporations whose directors are Cabinet officers or their agents and whose business is the destruction of the enterprises of the individuals of our country," he said.

"Let the President start his house cleaning by the dissolution of these great holding companies, the greatest in the history of the world, organized under the laws of the State of Delaware by Cabinet officers or those in sympathy with them, and which holding companies are throttling American business."

Rayburn put into the record during the day copies of 23 suggested letters he said one holding company had asked to be sent out. This brought from Representative Snell, of New York, the Republican leader, the rejoinder:

"Can you put out any more propaganda than the President did yesterday after saying he was not going to take part in it?"

Norris said in connection with the Huey Hints Undercover Move to Frustrate His Pairing.

Robinson Planning To Invoke Cloture

Kingfish Asks Action on Votes of Overton and Mrs. Caraway.

By Robert C. Albright.

An old-time red-blooded filibuster, matching physical endurance against a vote on the McCarran prevailing wage amendment, put another pitfall in the path of the President's works and relief measure last night, as Huey Pierce Long served aggrieved notice of intention on a works-weary Senate.

The loud-spoken "Kingfish" charged an undercover movement to prevent getting "pairs" for the pro-prevailing wage votes of Senator Hattie W. Caraway and John H. Overton, both ill.

Unless "pairs" are found for these Senators, threatened Huey, "I'm perfectly capable of standing here until some other people get sick and won't be able to vote either."

But the threat was hurled back in his face by Senator Carter Glass, of Virginia, chairman of the Senate Appropriations Committee, whose patience has been tried by dilatory tactics against the works bill. Accepting the Long challenge, Glass asserted his willingness to "sit day and night" until a vote is forced on the measure.

Cloture Possible.

As a last resort, to prevent a long-drawn-out floor duel, leaders are prepared to invoke the infrequently used cloture proceedings, it was learned. Senate Democratic Leader Joseph T. Robinson intimated as much. On petition of 16 Senators, a motion to cut short debate could be forced. But a two-thirds vote of the Senate is needed to pass it.

Under the Senate's traditional "pairing" system, an absentee Senator is enabled to make his vote count, by offsetting his ballot against that of a Senator voting the other way. After two days' effort, Long announced he has been unable to "pair" the votes of either Senator Caraway or Senator Overton. As these two ballots alone may spell victory or defeat for the McCarran prevailing wage amendment, Huey and some of his fellows want to hold off a vote until "pairs" are had.

It was Huey's manipulation of Mrs. Caraway's "pair" that wrote the McCarran amendment originally into the bill by a one-vote margin, sent the measure spinning back to committee, and seriously threatened final enactment.

Floor Leader Robinson last night brushed aside Long's insinuations of an effort to block his two "pairs."

"'Pairing' is a personal thing between individual Senators," said Robinson. "Everybody but Huey Long understands that."

They May Vote Anyway.

Huey said both Mrs. Caraway and Senator Overton, even though they are sick, may personally cast their own vote if they have to.

Although leaders are confident of victory, prevailing wage advocates feel they may yet hand the Administration another licking on the labor issue if all absentee votes are counted. Their strength was further impaired yesterday by the reported switch of a Southern Democrat to the Administration fold, reputedly in return for assurances of a rivers and harbors allocation.

Despite every effort of Senator Glass to speed consideration of the bill, it was virtually at a standstill yesterday. Only one significant amendment was adopted. Prodded by Senators William E. Borah (Republican) Idaho, and Elbert D. Thomas (Democrat), Utah, a limitation was placed on expenditure of any part of the $5,000,000,000 fund for war purposes, except for Army or Navy "nonmilitary" construction.

The amendment was adopted, 70 to 12, after Senator Bennett Champ

Ax-Wielding Police Arrest 40 In H Street Bookie Haunt Raid

Police axes crashed through one of Washington's oldest and best-known horse-race gambling establishments on the fourth floor of the Maryland Building at 1410 H street, in the heart of the financial district, yesterday, vice squad officers arresting 40 men.

The raid, staged swiftly at the height of the late afternoon rush, drew hundreds of homeward-bound Government and office workers and tied up H street traffic while more than a dozen uniformed policemen herded patrons and operators into patrol wagons.

Then members of the vice squad, headed by Lieut. George Little, bashed in three heavy wooden doors where a cleverly arranged set of mirrors was to have been a guarantee of security. So quickly did they effect entry that none in the place had an opportunity to use a heavy, knotted rope that was supposed to have permitted patrons to drop to a second-story skylight and freedom in case of a raid.

Those arrested were being grilled by Lieut. Little and his assistants at police headquarters last night in an attempt to learn the identity of the operators of the place. No charges were placed.

Underworld sources attributed ownership of the establishment to a leading Capital gambler. This Lieut. Little and other police officials declined to confirm, though the vice squad chief admitted signing the raid warrant.

All equipment in the establishment was torn out, including four telephones, and the police seized a large quantity of racing sheets and other gambling paraphernalia, though scores of betting slips were torn up and tossed out windows of the three rooms while officers were

Horse and Mule Decline Found Adding to Food Surplus of U. S.

By the Associated Press

Despite a host of major problems, the AAA yesterday disclosed it is pretty worried about the horse situation, too. Experts have just added up and found a 10,000,000 horse and mule shortage.

J. O. Williams, senior animal husbandman for the Agriculture Department, figures that there were 21,500,000 horses on the farms and ranches of the United States when the war ended.

"Today this number has decreased to about 12,000,000, the lowest number of equines in this country for over 40 years," he said.

The decline in horse and mule population is largely attributed to the mechanization that set in, particularly in cities, during and after the World War.

Statisticians figure that more than 2,000,000 horses and mules used in transport work in cities a few years ago have been supplanted by trucks. There are only 1,500,000 animals used for that purpose now.

Experts also figure that the decrease has set some 18,500,000 acres of land that would be necessary to feed them free to produce foodstuffs, thus adding to the agricultural surplus.

Two remedies have been suggested. One calls for a subsidy for the maintenance of stallions. The other proposes an educational campaign, with the Government to furnish stallions and jacks for breeding work horses and mules.

Many officials incline toward the latter plan. They said it had worked successfully for the Army Remount Service in producing Cavalry mounts.

Experts Have Not Decided on New Legislation, Says Roosevelt.

By Franklyn Waltman, Jr.

Administration monetary and legal experts yesterday continued their study of the Supreme Court gold clause decision in an effort to determine as accurately as possible what loopholes remain through which the county's gold program might be attacked in the courts.

President Roosevelt at his semi-weekly press conference said no decision had been reached regarding the necessity for new legislation. He explained his advisers were still exploring the court decision and the possibility of further legal attacks under them.

The fact that a majority of the Supreme Court did not concur in any one opinion—although a majority joined in a conclusion—regarding the Government's obligations under the gold clause in Treasury bonds—has apparently added to the perplexity of the Government's law officers in their efforts to arrive at conclusions.

Stabilization Discussed.

The deliberations of Administration officers over the gold program this week has aroused the belief in some quarters that more has been under discussion than the question of shutting the doors of the Court of Claims on further suits against the Government under the gold clause.

In this connection, it is understood the possibilities of eventual stabilization of the dollar with foreign exchange has been discussed. Just as Associate Justice Harlan F. Stone in his individual opinion upholding the Government in the Liberty Bond case posed the question, the President's advisers are asking what the situation would be under the court's rulings if a stabilization agreement were consummated.

The question is whether stabilization would have the effect of creating for the American bondholders damages that could be demonstrated. Four of the five justices upholding the Government contended that in the case before them the bondholder had not shown any damages and therefore any payment to him in excess of the face value of his bond in legal tender would amount to an enrichment.

The recent fluctuation of the value of the pound measured against the franc—or the fluctuation of gold as valued in sterling, as Chancellor of the British Exchequer Neville Chamberlain has expressed it—again has brought about discussions of possible stabilization.

English Oppose Move.

Mr. Chamberlain last week told the House of Commons that stabilization of the pound with the dollar or the franc at this time was out of the question. The enormous gold resources of the United States and France would place England at a disadvantage under such an agreement, he said.

The chancellor's declaration has been taken here as virtually an announcement that the British will take no step to stop depreciation of their currency. A falling pound aids British foreign trade, with an adverse effect, not alone on American foreign trade, but also on American domestic interests. Thus if the course of the pound continues downward, this Government may take steps to offset it.

It has been suggested that the United States enter into an agreement with France for stabilization of the dollar and franc, thus strengthening the gold bloc. These developments and thoughts are being canvassed by the Administration's technical experts. But until its law officers decide exactly the meaning of the Supreme Court opinions it is unlikely that any further major monetary step will be taken.

Quiz Hears Charges Of Secret Burials

N. C. Prison Camp Officials Accused.

By the Associated Press.

Charlotte, N. C., March 13—A legislative investigating committee heard today that North Carolina prison camp officials had made a practice of secret burials for friendless victims of their disciplinary practices.

Withholding the identity of their informant, a former convict who is still under suspended sentence, members of the committee determined to visit the lonely graves he described.

The committee was told that when beatings, chained suspensions and other punishment proved fatal, bodies of the victims were carted to lonely mountain spots and buried and the true circumstances glossed over in official reports. The informant was quoted as claiming to have been a member of such burial parties.

Practices in Mecklenburg County were alleged to have resulted in the death of two prisoners and the loss of both feet by two others.

If Byrd Votes 'No' I Vote 'Aye'—Long

By the Associated Press.

Senator Long told the Senate yesterday that he disagreed with Senator Byrd (Democrat), of Virginia, more often than any other Senator.

He was remarking upon how strange it was to find himself in agreement with Senator Tydings (Democrat), of Maryland.

"We don't often agree," Long said. "I think the Senator from Maryland is wrong four times out of five. The only one I disagree with more often is the junior Senator from Virginia."

"When I walk into the chamber and hear the Senator from Virginia voting 'no,' I vote 'aye,'" Long added.

Between You and Me

The Strachey Scare And Old Publicity Tricks; Roosevelt Clamps Down; NRA Rulings.

By Raymond Clapper

ASK any newspaper reporter about the Labor Department's attempt to deport E. John Strachey, British parlor Communist whose new book is a best seller among the best people of Washington, and he probably would say it was bunk.

Strachey, out on bail, hastened on to fill his next lecture date at Cleveland with assurance of a better box office. One magazine editor, fortunate enough to have purchased one of Strachey's manuscripts recently, rushed to all newspaper offices the glad tidings that Strachey's views could be found in the April issue of his magazine. Strachey's book royalties will shoot up. His American publishers got busy as soon as they heard of the break the immigration officers had given their young author and began gleefully shedding crocodile tears over every city desk in New York, so that the names of his latest book and the publishing house would be sure to get into the morning papers. And after Strachey has gone back to England he should find it easier to get lecture dates and larger fees.

It is the same old story that every reporter knows. Publicity is so sure to add to box office receipts that the stirring up of such attacks by the law is one of the oldest tricks in the press agent industry. Fortunate is the theatrical manager with a friend in the police department who will order his show stopped until some of the jokes are laundered. When sales of the American Mercury began to fall off, the Boston Watch and Ward Society came to the rescue by banning it, and Henry Mencken eagerly seized the opportunity to go to Boston and sell a copy of his magazine on Boston Common, where by prearrangement the police seized him. For years it was standard practice among editors of a certain newspaper chain to try to be thrown in jail for contempt of court. That always was regarded as a sure circulation builder.

* * * *

The Strachey incident probably had a slightly different twist. Instead of his press agent instigating the arrest, it is possible that some newspaper interested in stirring up a red hunt began hounding a Government official and finally, two and a half months after this dangerous young foreigner began his way around the country, got action out of Washington.

* * * *

Few people will miss Strachey if he is sent home four months before his visa expires, and the only effect of the incident, aside from increasing his royalties, may be to stir up agitation against American citizens who want to talk about what ails us. One newspaper reporter yesterday received a telegram from a Western editor asking him to look into a dinner that Secretary Ickes was to attend last night and he probably would find reds at the bottom of it. The reporter looked into it and found it wasn't reds. Ickes was going to the annual dinner for Mordecai Johnson, head of Howard University.

A few hours before the Strachey incident, Representative Young, of Ohio, a Democrat, who apparently was under the impression that he was in tune with the Administration, discussed free speech. He said:

Now he's out of step.

* * * *

One reason President Roosevelt is keeping secret the subjects on which he is to send further messages to Congress probably is that one of them may deal with stopping up the right to file gold-clause suits against the Government, and he doesn't want to intimate any such action in advance.

* * * *

Federal district courts are setting up such a tattoo of adverse decisions against NRA and AAA that the United States Supreme Court can uphold the Government only by going against almost solidly massed judgment of the lower courts. The greatest unanimity among district judges is over the application of NRA and AAA to what the courts construe to be intrastate business, and therefore unconstitutional.

* * * *

The $4,880,000,000 works-relief bill is shrinking. It now is a $4,705,000,000 bill and may shrink another $80,000,000 at any minute. This comes about from the fact that the bill provides for reappropriation of unexpended emergency funds, plus $4,000,000,000 of new money. Since the bill was introduced the $880,000,000 in existing appropriations has been dipped into by current operations.

* * * *

The reason House leaders have decided to delay bringing up the bonus for a few days more is to give the American Legion more time to mobilize strength behind the Vinson bill, which has been picked as the one to put through. It leaves the problem of finding the money up to the Treasury. The Patman bill, which is being brushed aside, provides for an inflationary note issue.

* * * *

As was indicated by the temper of his utility message, President Roosevelt is not in the best of humor at the moment. In addition to other things he is tired. He finds it necessary to get away from Washington at intervals where he won't see so many of the old, familiar faces. He is going fishing off Florida soon. If by any chance Congress should pass a bill while he is away, it could be rushed down to him for signature.

* * * *

One story is that in a certain Vermont town some Democrats desired to set up a relief organization, but they could find no persons needing relief. Finally they did talk an elderly woman into going on relief and were able to launch their organization and draw Federal funds.

But in a short time the little old lady came into the relief office grumbling.

"Yes," she answered.

"And you're able to pay your rent?"

Robinson and Long Fight For Same Bill

By the Associated Press.

Senator Robinson, of Arkansas, the Democratic leader, and Senator Long (Democrat), of Louisiana, bitter foes on most issues, found themselves fighting side by side yesterday in the Senate.

Both urged passage of the House bill levying a processing tax on rice. Arkansas and Louisiana are the principal rice producing States. Senator Dickinson (Republican), of Iowa, opposed the measure as a bad precedent.

The Senate passed the measure.

Rails Held Liable For Surplus Rate

An opinion holding the Central Railroad of New Jersey and the Delaware, Lackawanna & Western, the Lehigh Valley and the Pennsylvania Railroads liable in varying amounts for overcharges on coal freight rates from the anthracite fields of Pennsylvania was handed down yesterday by Justice Daniel W. O'Donoghue in the District Supreme Court.

The decision brought to Lindeman Co., Inc., and a small group of coplaintiffs $109,000 outright, with interest running back to January, 1926.

The carriers were sued on the strength of a "reparations award" made by the Interstate Commerce Commission, which held that the rates complained of were "unreasonable for the past and the future." The commission adjusted the prospective rates and allowed refunds for the overcharges of the past.

Attorneys Homer L. McCormick, Willis Crane and Harry S. Elkins, who prosecuted the suit, explained the coal was carried by three of the defendants to Newark, N. J., where it was picked up by the Pennsylvania and hauled to its destination. Audrey Bogley, attorney for the rails, informed Justice O'Donoghue he would appeal the ruling.

Hurley Assails Profits of War At Senate Probe

Calls It Unpatriotic to Make One Fight, Let Another Gain.

By the Associated Press.

One of the strongest denunciations of war-time profits that the Senate Munitions Committee has heard in its long investigation was delivered yesterday by smartly dressed Patrick J. Hurley, President Hoover's Secretary of War.

"It is unpatriotic," Hurley earnestly told the committee, "to compel one man to endure the hardships of war, perhaps to give his life, while another is earning profits from war."

Hurley appeared at a session which was as quiet as a church service compared with the turbulent meeting of Tuesday when William B. Shearer was questioned.

Points to Authority.

The former Secretary said there was authority under the Constitution and under emergency war conditions for Congress to eliminate war profits and for the President to call into Government use not only man power but capital.

"Congress has the power to convert all profits of war into the Treasury of the United States," he said, commenting this was the finding of the war policies commission, of which he once was chairman.

"The power to require a citizen to enter military service, perhaps to be injured or killed, is unquestionably a greater inroad upon that citizen's rights than anything that could be done toward using that citizen's property in the service of the Government," Hurley asserted.

"War to Save Democracy."

He concluded with the assertion that "contrary to many views," the World War actually "made the world safe for democracy."

"I would have to go a long way to tear away the last shred of idealism from President Wilson, to say we entered the war to make profits for munitions makers. I think we entered the war to make the world safe for democracy," he said.

The committee today will hear James E. van Zandt, national commander of the Veterans of Foreign Wars, and James A. Drain, past national commander of the American Legion, both advocates of removing profits from war.

Shearer is expected to resume the stand tomorrow.

Justices Urged To Uphold Law

Value of Measure Cited; Carriers to Present Views Today.

By the Associated Press.

Government lawyers yesterday urged the Supreme Court to uphold the railroad pension act with the argument that efficiency and safety would be promoted through the compulsory retirement of elderly employes.

Harold M. Stephens, Assistant Attorney General, and Harry Shulman, counsel for the Railroad Retirement Board, also contended the measure would make possible the coordination of rail facilities with tremendous savings without increasing unemployment.

The nine judges listened in silence. They faced a packed courtroom reminiscent of the Gold Clause Case hearings.

No Questions Asked.

Although the case was considered so important that five hours were allotted for oral argument, in place of the customary two, not one question was asked during the 90 minutes the case was heard.

Today Emmett McInnis, general counsel for the Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe Railroad, and Jacob Aronson, general counsel for the New York Central, will present the contention of the railroads that the act is unconstitutional.

Affecting 1,000,000 railroad workers and providing for their compulsory retirement on pension at the age of 65, the act recently was held invalid by the District of Columbia Supreme Court. It was to have become operative February 1.

Purpose of Law.

Stephens held that in the law, Congress intended to "promote the efficiency and safety of transportation in interstate commerce, and to improve labor conditions." He denied that this was used as a "pretext for a gratuity."

"The efficiency of a man declines with the advancement of years," he told the elderly justices. "Such a decline on railroads has serious consequences. These superannuated employes also close the door to the normal advancement of younger men, who may contribute greater imagination and alertness."

He hit at the voluntary rail pension systems with the assertion that they "fail to give employes the mental attitude and freedom from worry through old age security" because they can be abandoned or changed at the will of the carrier.

Extended Pacts To Limit Navies Held Unlikely

Swanson Opinion Believed Prevailing Among World Powers.

By the Associated Press.

Secretary Swanson, gravely shaking his head, said yesterday he was not "sanguine" over prospects for the future extension of naval armament limitation, a feeling apparently reflected elsewhere in near-record military appropriations.

The view within the Administration seemed to be that the naval Secretary in commenting on French plans for two 35,000-ton battleships had voiced at least in part the opinion prevailing in many quarters of both the United States and other naval powers.

He added that plans for construction by the French of the two battleships indicated that France did not believe other agreements would be negotiated before the Washington and London treaties, denounced by Japan, expire on December 31, 1936.

Terms of Treaty.

Under the Washington Treaty, neither the United States, Great Britain nor Japan can build more battleships, and they agreed not to construct additional fortifications—with a few exceptions—on their Pacific possessions.

Italy and France still have sufficient unfilled quotas, officials said, to build two 35,000-ton battleships and stay within the treaty. But Secretary Swanson seemed fairly certain that views abroad were that the outlook for new naval treaties before the old expire are dark.

Privately, officials pointed to higher military budgets among the world's principal nations as evidence of the uneasiness over the world situation.

America's Budget.

America was no exception. A near-record peace-time Army appropriation bill was in conference yesterday, the House figure of $379,000,000 having been increased to $400,000,000 by the Senate.

The House Naval Committee had before it the Navy appropriation bill, carrying $489,871,347, an increase of $177,773,250.

Despite his misgivings as to the future of the limitation agreements Secretary Swanson insisted yesterday that no additional construction for this year was contemplated beyond the 24-ship program.

Next year, however, Swanson indicated he would recommend an additional PWA building allotment. The present $238,000,000 from PWA will be exhausted within 18 months, he said, adding that $100,000,800 already had been spent.

May Back Navy Plan.

A Senate step yesterday may interfere with Navy plans. An amendment to the $4,880,000,000 work relief bill was adopted which would prevent any part of the huge sum from going for "military" purposes.

The regular military appropriation bills are exclusive of $40,000,000 earmarked out of public works funds for strengthening the West Coast defenses.

The House Naval Committee has approved a $38,000,000 program, including an $11,000,000 floating dry dock at Pearl Harbor, large enough to repair battleships. It also would provide for strengthening fortifications at Hawaii and the Canal Zone and two dry docks on the West Coast.

A deficiency bill passed by the House yesterday would appropriate $1,091,238 to buy land for an Army air base at Hawaii, the ultimate cost of which would total $18,000,000. Other projects include $6,000,000 for modernizing Navy vessels.

AAA Plows Under Its Former Slogan

The Agricultural Adjustment Administration has a new slogan, Secretary Wallace said yesterday. It is: "Plenty Without Waste."

This slogan is going to take the place of the outworn expression, "balanced production," Wallace indicated.

"It is a shame," he said, "to use human energy to produce things that can't be used.

"The purpose of the AAA is to produce enough so that folks can have all they need, but so there will be no waste."

Straus, Laval Discuss Taxing U. S. Concerns

Wallace Spikes Rumored Shift In Cotton Rules

No Change Contemplated, He Says After Parley With President.

There is nothing in the cotton situation that would warrant any change in the Government's present policy, Secretary Wallace said yesterday, following a conference with President Roosevelt.

"If there have been rumors to the effect that we are going to change our policy they are untrue," Wallace added.

The conference was prompted by the serious break in the cotton market Monday. The market closed slightly higher yesterday, but was still far from recovering its early losses.

Wallace said he doubted if there was anything in the foreign cotton situation that would change present plans.

"Foreign countries have not been buying a normal amount of cotton," he said, "but we hope for a pick-up."

Reducing Carry-over.

Wallace said one of the first purposes of the Government was to cut down cotton carry-over and that it was succeeding in doing this. He said the carry-over had been cut from 13,000,000 bales in 1932 to 10,500,000 bales in 1934 and that the plan called for cutting it to 8,500,000 bales this year and 7,500,000 bales next year.

Wallace said the Government's program had increased the price of cotton to the farmer from 6 cents in 1932 to 10 cents in 1933 and 12 cents in 1934.

Questioned about continuation of cotton loans with the new season beginning next fall, Wallace said that "no precise statement" would be made at this time.

"It is obvious from our past policies," he continued, "that we are not going to allow the purchasing power of the Southern farmer to be wrecked. His purchasing power means much to the prosperity of the rest of the country."

Others at Parley.

Wallace said that reported plans to impound 5,500,000 bales of Government cotton had not been discussed. He added, however, that the question "no doubt will come to us in a formal way."

Discussing the Jones bill for Government control of cotton exchanges, he said such a law "might have some control over the rumor factory."

He pointed out that the Government now knows the positions of large dealers in the grain market and that similar information about the cotton market might assist in learning who is starting rumors.

Others attending the conference with the President were Chester C. Davis, AAA administrator; Senator Bankhead, Senator Smith and Representative Jones.

They repeated what Wallace said about there being no change in the Government's policy.

President Roosevelt declined to comment except to say that the Administration would continue its policy of gradually reducing the surplus.

Congress Delays Propaganda Probe investigation resolution that he had information pertinent to the inquiry which he would turn over to the Trade Commission in confidence.

"This is different from any other propaganda that has been distributed before," Norris said. "A good deal of the evidence shows that holding companies told their employes that they should arrange for their friends to send a designated number of letters and telegrams. They were to make a report to the office of the company of how many of these they had sent to members of Congress with an indication they would be rewarded if they had the letters sent or lose their jobs if they didn't."

Norris said he would give the names of several of these companies to the Trade Commission.

Senator Byrnes (Democrat), of South Carolina, put into the Congressional Record a letter he said had been sent by the Associated Gas & Electric Co. to employes and security holders asking them to write to members of Congress.

Squire Convicted On Liquor Charge

By the Associated Press.

Huntington, W. Va., March 13.—Federal Judge George W. McClintic today sentenced Justice of the Peace Robert L. Simpkins, of War, to three years in the Petersburg, Va., prison camp and fined him $5,000 upon conviction of possessing and concealing liquor on which the tax had not been paid.

The Government charged the justice had sold 5 gallons of liquor seized in a liquor case brought before him.

Judge McClintic, in passing sentence, told Simpkins he had been "skinning" the people of McDowell County for years and that he also was responsible for the "bad reputation" of the county. The justice was convicted Saturday and sentence deferred until today pending a ruling on a new-trial motion.

Plane Used in Radio Test Flight Over the Pacific ocean, is designed to permit pilots to navigate their planes by tuning in any type of radio station. The device consists of a sensitive needle installed in the plane which points to the exact geographical location from which the radio signals or programs are being broadcast.

Simultaneously with the Roper statement, issued at the Secretary's regular press conference, Eugene Vidal, director of air commerce, announced at Oakland, Calif., that two actual flight tests had been conducted over the Pacific testing the new finder and other equipment, and that the "ultimate" test probably would be a flight to Honolulu. The important test flights were made by Capt. Albert Hegenberger, the Army's ace instrument flier; Capt. Clayton Bissell, and Chester Snow, of the Bureau of Air Commerce.

Hegenberger was navigator of the first nonstop flight across the Pacific in July of 1927. He flew with Lieut. Lester Maitland from Oakland to Honolulu in 25 hours and 15 minutes.

In addition to tests being made in the Pacific, Rex Martin, acting director of air commerce, revealed that Amelia Earhart has been engaged as a "dollar a year girl" to carry on special aeronautical tests on her flights across the country. Miss Earhart's first assignment will be to conduct trials with the new direction finder. She will try out the instrument to determine its suitability as an air-navigation aid for private owners of aircraft.

Plans to Set Up Bases.

Pan-American officials refused yesterday to state when they think that the first plane will take off on the Pacific flight. However, Juan T. Trippe, president of the air line, stated on Monday that the S. S. North Haven will sail from California the first week in April with 6,000 tons of material and more than a hundred men to begin establishing bases along the Pacific route.

In addition to Bureau of Air Commerce experiments in the radio navigational field, Pan-American engineers have completed tests on another instrument which they believe will be installed on the ocean planes of the future. This is a short-wave radio direction finder. It is a development of the set used by Col. and Mrs. Charles A. Lindbergh on their aerial survey flight over the Atlantic two years ago. Col. Lindbergh is technical adviser of the company.

The Department of Commerce plane employed yesterday on the test flights over the Pacific tested the new directional finder by contacting the Army transport Republic and the Coast Guard Cutter Shoshone. The boats reported their positions, the fliers tuned their sets to these calls and flew to the boats, following the sensitive needle which pointed to the radio transmitters. On the afternoon trip the pilots attempted to contact the Honolulu radio beam. On their return they did not state whether they had been successful.

Carries Large Gas Supply.

The big plane carried 1,600 gallons of gas on its first flight, a 6-ton load, or enough to carry the ship 3,000 miles. Observers on the West Coast saw in this an indication that later a flight would be undertaken to Honolulu. The air-line distance from the California coast to Hawaii is 2,400 miles.

The take-off on the first flight yesterday was made at 4:56 a. m., Pacific time. The ship returned four hours later. The afternoon flight was started at 1:45 p. m.

In describing the new direction finder at his press conference yesterday, Secretary Roper hailed it as a device which "will occupy a place in the development of air transportation comparable to the mariner's compass in the development of shipping at sea which made its appearance in the twelfth century."

The device was originated by G. G. Kreusi, formerly a radio engineer of a commercial airline and now attached to Wright Field, Dayton, Ohio. It was developed in collaboration with Capt. Albert E. Hegenberger, of the Air Corps. It has been used as part of the Army's "blind" landing system.

Recently the Department of Air Commerce announced plans for installing the same system on its transcontinental airway between Los Angeles and New York by way of Kansas City.

Secrtary Swanson also made public the personnel of a board to make a thorough study of lighter-than-air problems. Swanson stated that the group's study would include the design and construction of dirigibles for both commercial and military purposes.

This board will serve with Dr. Karl Compton, president of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology. Aviation observers here feel that the future of lighter-than-air craft will be greatly influenced by the findings of the group. The following will take part in the airship investigation:

William F. Durand, professor emeritus of mechanical engineering, Stanford University; Theodor von Karman, professor of aeronautics and director of Daniel Guggenheim Laboratory, California Institute of Technology; William Novgaard, professor of naval design, Massachusetts Institute of Technology; Stephen Timoshenko, professor of engineering mechanics, University of Michigan; Alfred V. De Forest, associate professor of mechanical engineering, Massachusetts Institute of Technology; R. A. Millikan, director of the Norman Bridge Laboratory of Physics and chairman of the executive council, California Institute of Technology; Frank B. Jewett, president of Bell Telephone Laboratories; Charles F. Kettering, president of General Motors Research Corporation.

Bill Passed in Senate To Assist Philippines

By the Associated Press.

A bill to authorize Army and Navy officers to assist the Philippine Islands in setting up its military organization under the forthcoming commonwealth was passed yesterday by the Senate and sent to the House.

Briefly opposed by Senator King (Democrat), Utah, who said he disagreed with the policy of sending officers to Latin-American or other republics, it was passed with the explanation that the Philippines would require assistance when United States administration of its government was withdrawn.

Byrd Reports Gains in Move For Works Cut

Senator Claims New Aid on Plan to Slice Fund by 3 Billions.

By the Associated Press.

Senator Byrd, of Virginia, reported last night an increasing sentiment for his amendment to lop $3,000,000,000 off the $4,880,000,000 work relief bill.

The result of this cloak-room campaign, he said, was many new pledges, with Southern and Western Democrats predominating in the group.

The filibuster by Senator Long for the McCarran prevailing wage amendment gave Byrd and his backers more time to win further favor, Byrd's amendment is scheduled to be taken up immediately after the McCarran vote.

Favorable action on the McCarran proposal, the Byrd group believes, practically would assure adoption of the Byrd amendment.

If it fails the group is ready, if necessary, to agree to a proposal by Senator Adams (Democrat), Colorado, to cut the measure $2,000,000,000,000.

In any event the bloc will insist some reduction be made.

Byrd is preparing figures gleaned from a report by Secretary Morgenthau on the $3,300,000,000 public works fund of 1933 to use in his speech for the reducing amendment. That report, he said yesterday, showed $1,500,000,000 of public works funds still remain in the Treasury and he, therefore, contends 4,000,000,000 more is unnecessary.

State Supreme Court Opinions Slated Today

Richmond, Va., March 13 (AP). After seven days spent in hearing arguments since the beginning of the March term, the State Supreme Court tomorrow will hand down its opinions on a number of important cases.

One of the cases submitted during this term is that involving the constitutionality of the State milk control act, designed to regulate the dairy business and fix prices, but it is considered very unlikely that the court's opinion in this case will be announced tomorrow.

Stayton Calls Congress Lax On Constitution

Laws Are Passed Without Thought for It, He Tells Students.

"Members of Congress, who have taken oath to support the Constitution, pass laws not much caring whether they are constitutional or not," it was charged yesterday by Capt. W. H. Stayton, secretary of the American Liberty League, at the first meeting of the University of Maryland Chapter.

He said: "Our difficulties began during Theodore Roosevelt's administration when he departed from the Constitution. Since then we have gotten farther and farther away."

"Today I think that all must feel that something is wrong with the country," he continued.

"There's soil and riches enough to support a far larger population than ours. The league feels we should not try so many new experiments as we are trying now."

He said the league had two aims—to represent the Constitution and to present an organized front.

"Things go on in Congress that you may favor or may not favor and you have no voice in it," he declared.

Dr. A. P. Haake, director of the State organizations, said all these "so-called new and revolutionary ideas of government are old. One can find their counterpart or exact structure by looking back into history."

Venizelos Safe As Rebels Face Courts-Martial

Copyright, 1935, by the Associated Press.

Athens, March 13.—Eleutherios Venizelos, leader of the short-lived Greek revolution, was refuged tonight at Rhodes, the tiny island where pirates interned Julius Caesar more than 2,000 years ago.

Meanwhile the cruiser Averoff, "flagship" of the rebellion, which dropped Venizelos, his Anglo-Greek wife and other rebels at the Italian island of Cassos yesterday, arrived at Salamis, signalizing the complete collapse of the rebels' sea forces.

While the loyalist army continued "mopping up" after routing land rebels in Macedonia, courts-martial started grinding away at the grist the 12-day revolt left for them.

Those rebel soldiers who did not flee to neighboring countries probably will be amnestied, it was indicated, but their officers and those soldiers who joined the movement as volunteers were expected to face military courts.

Tension Is Eased.

It was officially learned that charges of participating in the revolution have been drawn against 62 naval officers, five of whom were arrested at the outset. How many others have been taken into custody has not been determined nor was the date for their trial divulged.

The nerves of Greeks and foreigners alike, frayed by the uncertainties of the civil strife, were eased considerably by the partial lifting of martial law.

Athens, Salonika and other large cities gradually were emerging from the economic paralysis caused by the costliest revolution Greece has suffered since she won her independence from Turkey.

Streets, cafes and cinemas again were crowded. The steamer Statendam today brought 620 American tourists, all of whom came ashore anxious to see the "war."

The odyssey of the fallen Venizelos, "Old Fox" of Greek politics and many times the nation's premier, read the final act of an ancient Greek drama.

Moved to Rhodes.

Leaving his native Crete, which reports said he meant to declare independent if the revolt failed, the 71-year-old chieftain fled first to the microscopic island of Cassos, once ruled, like Rhodes, by the Knights of St. John.

Thence Italy moved him to the larger Rhodes, 75 miles away, because it was feared angered Greeks who constitute the majority of the residents of Cassos might attack him.

(Dispatches from Rome said any extradition request for Venizelos probably would be refused, just as France refused to extradite Gen. Nichotas Plastiras who fled after his revolt failed. Venizelos is free to go where he pleases, the Rome advices said, and has indicated he may go to Paris to be with his two sons).

Reports reaching Athens from Rhodes, the Aegean's easternmost island and seat of an ancient civilization, said Venizelos showed distinct signs of the strain under which he has been laboring, but apparently was glad to get away from the turmoil of revolution.

Most Important Find, Dr. E. A. Speiser Says

By the Associated Press.

Philadelphia, March 13.—Dr. E. A. Speiser, professor of Semitics at the University of Pennsylvania, said today the British discovery of Hebrew inscriptions at Jerusalem promises to be the most important find since discovery of the Amarna tablets" in the 1880's.

Up to now, Dr. Speiser said, the Amarna tablets were the only valuable support the Bible story had as far as inscriptions were concerned. These tablets recorded correspondence between the Palestinian and Syrian princes and the Pharaohs who ruled Egypt during the fourteenth and fifteenth centuries before Christ. They told of the invasion of the Hebrews before the times of Moses.

The Amarna records, however, Dr. Speiser pointed out, were made of clay and written in Assyrian cuniform, whereas the newly found tablets are of porcelain and in the Hebrew language.

playing up its evidence against Communism.

From Chicago Allen Taub, director of the New Masses' Midwestern bureau, charged that he was informed that Hearst newspapers had received advance information about the deportation warrant issued suddenly Tuesday evening, according to the Associated Press. This was denied at the Labor Department, which admitted, however, that at least one Hearst newspaper had published the news prior to actual issuance of the warrant. Hearst newspapers editorially demanded Strachey's deportation on his arrival last Christmas.

Strachey Denies He's Red.

In Chicago Strachey told newspapermen that he was not a member of the Communist Party. "I firmly deny that I entered the country through any misstatements," he told the Associated Press. "I have never advocated the overthrow of the United States Government by force or violence."

In London the Communist Party as well as the Fascists and the Socialists repudiated the stormy son of a well-to-do family of writers, who was described by one newspaper as "a theoretical Communist." Communists in Washington did not repudiate him, because, they said, he had never been a Communist.

The American Civil Liberties Union rushed to Strachey's defense yesterday and Prof. Robert Morss Lovett, of the University of Chicago, posted a $500 Liberty bond with Immigration Inspector Fred J. Schlotfeldt in Chicago. Prof. Lovett said he acted as representative of the union. In Washington, Miss Mary Van Kleeck, also a member of the union and an associate of the Russell Sage Foundation, issued a defensive statement.

Miss Van Kleeck's Statement.

"If writers and lecturers are not free to express their views," she said, "there can be no freedom for education or the advancement of a solution of the problems facing us today. Strachey's arrest is the result of the drive against freedom of expression, and it strikes deep at the civil liberties of the United States at a moment when we need intellectual leadership. If we suppress the views of British writers and lecturers we are cutting ourselves spitefully off from the English-speaking world."

The Labor Department maintained its attitude that Strachey had violated the terms of his admission. The British Embassy took an aloof attitude. But the Civil Liberties Union issued the following statement which it said Strachey had given its director, Roger Baldwin, several days ago:

Precedents for Action.

"I think it would be quite unbecoming of me as a foreigner even to appear to take part in American politics in any way. What my audiences want and what I try to give them is a clear and scientific account of various modern movements of thought such as Fascism or Communism. Further, they want to hear what my views are as to the causes of modern war. And, lastly, they wish me to analyze the nature of the capitalist system as I see it. * * * I am here earning my living by giving what I hope and believe are informative lectures on the subjects of the day."

Search for precedents for the procedure against Strachey brought to light four cases in which courts have decided that members of the Communist Party of the United States of America are subject to deportation under the act of October 16, 1918, as amended by the act of June 5, 1920.

Only one case was found in which the court held that an alien was deportable under this act on the ground that he believed in the overthrow of the Government of the United States by force because of his belief in the principles of the Communist Party. This case is known as "Saksagansky vs. Weedin, 53 F (2d) 13, (CCA 9th Circuit)."

Strachey denied yesterday membership in any Communist party, and critics of his books declare that while he advocates a Marxian economy he does not propose to bring it into existence through the tenets of the Third International. As one Washington liberal put it, he is charged with being a Communist with a capital C, while in reality his communism is spelled in lower case.

Navy Action Against Reds.

The Navy Department yesterday reentered the lists against Communists with a statement from Secretary Claude Swanson to the effect that he was considering filing formal charges against 26 alleged Communist civilian employes at the Washington Navy Yary.

Swanson said he had indorsed a bill authorizing dismissal of Government employes for Communist activities Acknowledging that formal charges were necessary to dismiss civil-service employes, but indicating that Communist activity warranted the bringing of charges, Secretary Swanson did not reveal how he would proceed against the unidentified 26 workers.

Alfred Dashiel, editor of Scribner's Magazine, told the Associated Press in New York that he had wired a protest to Secretary of Labor Perkins against the arrest of Strachey. John Dewey, noted American philosopher and professor emeritus at Columbia University, termed the arrest the "work of busybodies engaged in a Red scare," while the National Committee for the Defense of Political Prisoners called it "ridiculous."

Strachey announced he would fight the case to the limit. Following Strachey's hearing today, the Chicago inspector will file a report with the Board of Review of the Immigration Service here, of which L. Paul Winnings is chairman and Mrs. Vaudia Edmonston is secretary. The other members are Thomas Finucan and Leigh Nettleton. This board is empowered, if it finds the charges warranted, to recommend his deportation. Such a recommendation will be followed by the issuance of a deportation warrant.

Courses Open to Strachey.

Strachey, however, may either appeal for a personal hearing before Secretary Perkins or, if he desires, he may sue for a writ of habeas corpus, in which case he would go before the United States District Court for a decision upon the evidence.

Twenty aliens, alleged to have been Communists, were deported from the United States last year, the Labor Department admitted yesterday. Officials of the department said that a dozen Russians, arrested in California after the San Francisco strike and who were ordered deported were still in this country because the Soviet government had refused them passports to the union.

The State Department said it was impossible to report what answers Strachey had given the consul in London because his answers had not been sent to this country. McCormack charged yesterday that part of the case against him lay in his giving negative answers to questions about his connection with the Communist party.

Subsistence Project to Offer 100 Families Aid in Virginia

$245,000 Allotted by Secretary Ickes for Homestead Community at Newport News.

By the Associated Press

The number of industrial families whom the Federal Government plans to set up in new country homes rose to over 5,000 yesterday as Secretary Ickes approved a subsistence homestead project at Newport News, Va.

Ickes allotted $245,000 for the community, the second to be set up for Negroes. One hundred families are to be accommodated. Speaking of the projects in general, officials said today that 223 homes had been completed, of which 211 were occupied, and that work on 1,339 others either was under way or would begin this spring.

Average cost of the houses, complete with electrical fixtures and small gardens, is set at about $3,000. Average payments of about $150 a year ($50 50 for each $1,000 of the purchase price) are to cover 3 per cent interest and amortize the loan after 30 years.

The Subsistence Homesteads Corporation, given an initial PWA allotment of $25,000,000, has had $10,000,000 of its funds impounded for possible transfer to the relief administration.

Most of the communities are located near existing factories, but private manufacturers are expected to set up plants at others, including Reedsville, W. Va. Most of the settlers chosen are on relief.

Judge Warns Member Of Jobless Council

After warning him against future attempts "at running the Government," Police Court Judge Ralph Given yesterday suspended a $25 fine against George Matthews, colored, self-styled member of the unemployed council, charged with disorderly conduct following alleged threats to "wreck" an emergency relief station in the 2400 block of Pennsylvania avenue northwest.

Matthews was accused of using abusive language against relief workers when he failed to receive the "service" he demanded. Matthews admitted he was a member of the International Labor Defense and said if he were sent to jail he would return with his delegation to "fight for our rights."

France Weighs Plan to Protest Reich Air Corps

Considers Filing Notice 'Official' Force Breaks Versailles Treaty.

By the Associated Press.

Paris, March 13.—French government officials tonight were reported considering notifying Germany, with the expected support of Great Britain and Italy, that her proposed "official" air force constitutes a clear violation of the Versailles Treaty.

If the action is taken, it was said, France would invoke the Rome accord and the Franco-British declaration at London in support of her move to keep the Reich from giving her air force official status.

These understandings include the denial to any power of the right to modify an armaments agreement without the consent of other signatories. This denial, it is understood here, was inended to apply primarily to Germany, whose military forces the peace treaty restricted.

French officials were in consultation with Rome and London to see what could be done in the face of the forthright announcement of Gen. Hermann Wilhelm Goering, German air minister, that he would head the officially admitted air force as "general of the fliers."

It was admitted here that the real situation was not changed by Goering's public admission that the air force exists, since the French general staff has long known that Germany has been developing her military aviation.

French officials, however, were described as feeling it might be well to utilize the present situation to show the world that Germany, by her own admission, is violating the Versailles Treaty. The French hold no hope of inducing Germany to do away with her air fleet, but they believe some tactical advantage may be gained.

Siamese Contract Won by Japanese

Deal for Iron Deposits in Australia Negotiated.

By the Associated Press.

Tokyo, March 13.—Japan's economic advance in the regions to the southward has recorded a two-fold gain, it was learned from government sources today.

The Siamese government has awarded a Japanese group, including the Japanese government, the Japanese railways department, leading private steel works and railway supplies manufacturers, contracts to build 146 bridges and supply quantities of materials for the Siamese railways.

The Mitsui Co. negotiated the agreement, defeating American, British and several European bidders.

The Nippon Mining Co., capitalized at 160,000,000 yen ($44,800,000), announced that it had concluded a contract for the purchase of extensive iron deposits in the rich Yampi Sound district of western Australia, expecting to produce there for export to Japan 500,000 tons of pig iron annually.

Cuba Is Again Normal, Seizes Strike Leaders

50 Revolutionary Suspects in Cabana Fortress; Death Toll at 14.

By the Associated Press.

Havana, March 13.—President Carlos Mendieta's government today started rounding up those it believed responsible for threatening a general revolutionary strike.

The familiar sounds of street car gongs and omnibus horns rang through streets that echoed last night to rifle and pistol fire as most lines of business returned to operation approaching normal.

Police carted hundreds of strikers, among them many government employes, off to police stations and prisons in army trucks. Fifty or more suspected revolutionary leaders were held at Cabana Fortress.

The latter group, it was understood, included Alfredo Canal, prominent A. B. C. society leader and secretary to Joaquin Martinez Saenz, A. B. C. chieftain and former secretary of the treasury, who is now in the United States.

Later police released all old employes of the treasury they had detained after they signed resignations.

The seeming collapse of the strike movement, which began several weeks ago with the walkout of an estimated 300,000 students and teachers, came after the Mendieta government, supported by the army commander, Fulgencio Batista, exchanged its policy of diplomatic negotiation for vigorous repression.

The death toll of the terrorism flaring since Saturday was increased to 14 today with the finding of the bullet-riddled body of Jose Diaz, soldier, in the nearby town of Marianao.

State Police Busy, '34 Report Proves

By the Associated Press.

Richmond, Va., March 13.—Statistically speaking, the Virginia State police in 1934:

Traveled 2,500,000 miles, made 4,550 arrests, issued 6,754 summons, secured 7,270 convictions, collected $133,448 in fines, recovered 348 stolen cars, attended 3,275 Virginia accidents, gave 59,946 examinations for operators licenses and 6,164 for chauffeurs, issued 102,233 warnings, and did special duty at four strikes, one bonus march, one gasoline war and one visit to Virginia by President Roosevelt.

These figures were included in the annual report today of Capt. H. B. Nicholas, superintendent of the 100 State policemen, who pointed out that his men more than earned their salary in collection of fines alone.

NOW!... Restore Natural Whiteness to Your Teeth!

Off-color teeth ruin otherwise attractive women

Makes off-color teeth look shades lighter

There is now a way to restore the natural whiteness to your teeth. A way that makes ordinary, uncleansed teeth look shades lighter almost at once. Results are among the most noticeable known to modern dental science. People by the millions are quitting old-time toothpastes and adopting it.

It is called KOLYNOS and is the discovery of N. S. Jenkins, one of the most widely known dental scientists of this generation.

Acts on New Principle

It acts on an utterly different dental theory—instantly banishes that yellowish film-stain from teeth. And, at the same time, destroys bacteria that foster ugly teeth and decay.

Results are quick and immediate. And you notice them at once. A new lightness, clearness and brightness to your teeth. Sparkling, natural whiteness restored—a smile that charms and attracts.

Schools Report Essay Winners In Post Contest

Heavy Competition Delaying Juries in Their Choice of Local Entries.

Ruth Shields, of Alexandria, Va.; J. Lewis Russell, jr., Leonardtown, Md.; Mary Berry Brown, La Plata, Md.; Sudie Yager, Madison, Va., and George E. Altmann, jr., of this city, each a champion over numerous rivals in his own school, yesterday added their essays on governmental topics to entries in the Second Washington Post Scholarship Competition.

From many parts of the competition area came reports that heavy competition is delaying juries of school finals with close margins and prolonging their decisions on numerous papers far above the general average of high school theses. All of the school officials, however, are keeping in mind the Saturday deadline date for essay entries at competition headquarters of The Post.

Miss Shields, writing on "Russia Today," scored a close first in the George Mason High School finals over Christine Hawkins, whose paper on "The Greatest Political Figure in American History," was highly commended by her judges. Miss Shields is 15 and the daughter of James M. Shields, of 120 Raymond avenue, Alexandria. She leads in many activities in her school, especially in the literary and dramatic clubs, having won several honors in her stage work.

Lewis Russell a Leader.

Russell, the 16-year-old son of J. Lewis Russell, of Leonardtown, won the St. Mary's Academy finals. He also leads in his school's dramatics, as well as other activities, including tennis, baseball, volley ball and the Mission Club, of which he is recording secretary and publicity chairman.

He considers history and English his favorite studies and hopes to prepare at college for a legal career. His essay is on "The Constitution in Relation to Our Social Progress." James Sterling, 17, won second place with a paper on "Peace Forces Versus War Forces in the World Today."

Miss Brown defeated all members of both the junior and senior classes of Sacred Heart High School, La Plata, with a paper on the subject, "Necessary Reforms in Local Government." Sister M. Saint Margaret, who directed the contest in her English classes, reports keen interest in finals at Sacred Heart.

Miss Yager leads in both scholastics and student activities, having won honors in a recent State Latin tournament. Her favorite studies are Latin, history and English and she plans to prepare for a legal career. She is 17 and the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. C. R. Yager, of Rochelle, Va. Her paper is entitled "Pros and Cons of Hitlerism in Germany." Her alternate is Virginia Yager, who wrote on the same subject. Third place went to George Payne, and honorable mention was awarded to Hugh Crigler, John Hale, Christabel Tucker, Earle White and James Gibbs. Judges were Rothwell Lillard and Misses Reba Huckstep and Lillian Flipps. Miss Virginia E. Fray, civics teacher, managed the contest.

Altmann Writes on Russia.

Altmann, 17, and the son of Mr. Mrs. George Altmann, 313 Seventeenth street northeast, also covered the topic, "Russia Today," as did his alternate, John T. Flynn, 17. Third place in local Gonzaga High finals went to John G. Donnelly. Judges included Thomas M. Brew, Thomas F. Kane and Orrell J. Mitchell. The Rev. P. J. Clarke, S. J., was in charge of the project. Altmann is chairman of Gonzaga's Sodality Club, publicity chairman of the Knights of the Blessed Sacrament, and a member of the debating society. His ambition is to prepare for the priesthood.

Delayed decision at St. John's College High School, this city, was reported by Brother F. Andrew, teacher in charge, because of the high calibre of papers entered by ten finalists, who have defeated all other members of the senior class in preliminaries. They include Paul O'Neill, Lewis Lanman, Carl Garges, Hugh Griffin, Leroy Zink, James Casey, William Herron, Ward Koepenick, Harry Horstman and Barron Batchelder. Judges are Brothers D. Lewis Doretheus, F. Andrew, G. John, D. Edwin and Francis. Debates on labor and other problems have been features of their intramurals.

At St. Anthony's High School, Brookland, D. C., Thomas Walsh, John Wright and Frank Schulz are contending for the school championship, with Sister M. Regina, English teacher, in charge.

Oxford (Md.) High School finalists include William H. Bringman, jr., Robert D. Cook, Elva Loscomb and Lu Mar Myers. Special exercises in their honor will include the reading of their essays. The junior class member included the contest in their problems in Democracy course. Their finals will also feature reading of essays and bestowal of school honors on the winners.

At the Upperville, Va., High School Peggy Shaven, Hugh Kerr and Selma Carver are competing in finals today, with William Tyler, principal, Arthur Shelburn and Miss Nella B. Shute, civics teacher in charge, serving as judges.

Stafford, Va., High School finalists include Hilda Heflin, George Gordon, Annie Wamsley and Mary Smith. Miss Betsy Sacrey and Charles E. Smith are their judges. Miss Evelyn A. Cline, civics teacher who has managed the project, has announced Ryland Heflin as winner of the junior class finals, his paper being entitled, "Is America Economically Better Off Than a Year Ago?"

Explosion Fires Oil Works.

Southampton, England, March 13 (AP).—A petroleum tank explosion which rocked the countryside today fired the Agwi Petroleum Works at Fawley, 10 miles from here, imperiling 112 other nearby tanks. For a while the flames shot 100 feet high, but firemen brought the blaze under control.

Express Service On Buses Deferred

Inability to Get Cars Holds Up 13th St. Change.

The institution of the express rush hour bus service from Takoma Park to the downtown area, via Thirteenth street, was postponed until April 15 by the Public Utilities Commission yesterday.

Under the original order the new service was to start Friday. Inability of the Capital Transit Co. to obtain prompt delivery of seven new busses caused the postponement.

Doctors Report Alyce On Road to Recovery

Fall River, Mass., March 13 (AP).—Alyce Jane McHenry, 10-year-old Omaha, Nebr., girl, was apparently on the road to recovery today from a delicate operation to correct her misplaced stomach.

An official hospital bulletin gave normal readings for her temperature, pulse and respiration, while her condition was described as satisfactory.

Victim's Skull Shown to Jury In Trial of Fish

By the Associated Press.

White Plains, N. Y., March 13.—A child's skull—allegedly that of the slain Grace Budd—was dangled today before a shocked supreme court jury trying shriveled Albert Howard Fish for slaying the 10-year-old girl.

Unexpectedly, Elbert T. Gallagher, assistant district attorney, picked up a battered cardboard box and withdrew a brown, weathered skull—marked by Supreme Court Justice Frederick Close "Exhibit 13."

He handed it to the court stenographer. Jurors rose from their seats. The 65-year-old defendant took a swift glance at the grewsome exhibit, opening his eyes for the first time since he took his seat at 10 a. m. Expressionless, apparently unaffected, he slumped in his chair, his head resting on his right hand.

James E. Dempsey, jr., assigned by the court as defense counsel for Fish, who has confessed slaying Grace and mutilating her body on June 3, 1928, after luring her from her family to attend a "birthday party," leaped to his feet shouting:

"I move for a mistrial. This showing of a skull, rattling it before a jury, is prejudicial. These grewsome bones are prejudicial. The State can summon witnesses, medical authorities, to prove the existence of these bones."

"Denied," said Justice Close.

Holding the skull before the jury, Gallagher asked Detective William King of the New York Missing Persons Bureau, who traced and arrested Fish on clews from a letter he wrote the child's mother, Mrs. Delia Budd, about a month before his arrest on December 14, 1934, if the skull was the one dug by the defendant from a mat of dead leaves at the cottage, Old Wisteria, in East Irvington, N. Y.

"That's the skull," said King.

King said Fish denied he practiced cannibalism, although a letter he wrote to Mrs. Budd indicated he had cannibalistic tendencies. The letter, which led to his arrest, described his mutilation of Grace's body and her decapitation.

Policeman Suspended, Intoxication Charged

Policeman Henry A. Matney, Traffic Bureau, was suspended from duty yesterday after Lieut. W. T. Storm found him at his home, allegedly intoxicated.

Lieut. Storm said he received a report that Matney's automobile had been involved in an accident. He went to the policeman's home with a police physician, and the suspension followed.

England-Reich Security Talks Set This Month

Simon, Eden Go to Berlin March 24 to See Hitler on Peace Pact.

By the Associated Press.

London, March 13.—Sir John Simon, foreign secretary, and Capt. Anthony Eden, lord privy seal, will go to Berlin March 24 for conversations with Reichsfuehrer Adolf Hitler on questions of European peace, conversations which were postponed by Hitler.

The Reichsfuehrer apparently was so well pleased with the lack of references to Germany in Monday's white-paper debate in the House of Commons that he notified Sir Eric Phipps, British ambassador, that his cold will be sufficiently improved to permit him to hold the postponed talks March 25 and 26.

It was Hitler's cold—contracted after the British government presented its white paper referring to German armaments—that brought about postponement of the conversations earlier in the month.

At the time the government received information of Hitler's determination to resume negotiations resulting from Anglo-French discussions on European peace, diplomatic representatives of Lithuania, Esthonia and Latvia called at the foreign office to assure Sir John that the republics of the Baltic whole-heartedly support Anglo-French proposals for security and the Eastern pact.

Hitler, it was said, expressed a desire to discuss the entire Anglo-French plan involving an air convention, an Eastern pact, Austrian independence, Germany's return to the League of Nations and a general disarmament agreement.

It was understood that Hitler's wrath over the white paper now has been dissipated in view of the mild way the government speakers referred to Germany during the debate Monday. At that time Stanley Baldwin, lord president of the council, pointed out that the white paper was not directed exclusively against any one country.

The British believe the paper clarified the atmosphere and will permit a franker discussion in Berlin of Germany's arms and aims.

Forbes Morgan Assumes Political Secretaryship

W. Forbes Morgan, former deputy governor of the Farm Credit Administration, yesterday was appointed secretary of the Democratic national committee by Postmaster General Farley, national chairman. The position had been vacant since the resignation of Robert Jackson about a year ago.

At the time of his resignation from the FCA, it was reported Mr. Morgan would conduct a drive for funds to wipe out the party's deficit of about $500,000.

callable on any semiannual interest period.

Action Expected.

The former's interest period is on March 15, while the latter's interest falls due on April 15. Therefore, it was believed in usually well informed circles that at least the former would be called for redemption on their next interest date, June 15.

The First Liberties, which have been callable for the last three years, consist of $1,392,000,000 bearing interest at the rate of 3½ per cent; $5,000,000, converted, bearing 4 per cent interest, and $536,000,000, converted, bearing 4¼ per cent interest, resulting in an annual interest payment of about $71,700,000. By refunding on the same basis as recently employed—on a 20-year 2⅞ per cent basis—a savings of more than $26,000,000 would accrue to the Treasury annually.

In like manner, the Fourth Liberties, commanding an annual interest outlay of $55,000,000, could be refunded at a yearly cost of $36,000,000, effecting a saving of $19,000,000.

Road Group Sets Culpeper Meeting

Public Session to Discuss Proposed Route Changes.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Culpeper, Va., March 13.—The Division of Statutory Research and Drafting for Northern Virginia will hold a public meeting in the municipal auditorium, Culpeper, on March 25 for the discussion of road problems and certain changes about to be made in routes in the Culpeper-Fredericksburg district.

According to William R. Shands, State research director and secretary of the commission, similar open hearings are scheduled for Lynchburg on April 15 to take up questions concerning the Lynchburg-Staunton district and in Wytheville on May 20 to hear recommendations for the far southwestern district of Virginia.

The commission is headed by W. C. Rogers, of Waverly, former State senator and at present treasurer of Sussex County, who will preside at the hearings in Culpeper.

Police Collusion With Bootleggers Charged As LaRoe Assails Parole Flaws in District

ited in getting the truck released." Then he took up the story by reading portions of the stenographic record of the second parole board hearing which resulted in revocation of the parole of Yudelevit.

"I'm getting myself in a hole," he quoted Yudelevit as saying, after he had told of meeting Montgomery and going to Fourteenth and P streets to meet the policemen.

"We want the truth and unless we get it, back you go."

"We met the two policemen. You can guess the nature of our business. Monty wanted to know who was putting his trucks in. They had taken two and a car."

"Why were these two policemen called?"

Says He Had "Connections."

"I don't know. But I could guess. It might sound funny to you but I had no connection with Monty's liquor business. But I had a lot of connections——"

"Including police?"

"With police, yes, sir. I knew the two officers. They knew I wouldn't talk about them."

"Isn't it a fair statement, Harry," asked Mr. La Roe, "that Montgomery wanted you to go down and meet the policemen because he thought your knowledge and influence would enable him to put over what he wanted?"

"Yes, sir. That is possible. I thought I would be of aid to him; yes, sir."

"Didn't you know what he was going to see the police about?"

"He was going to see them about his telephones and where he drops his whisky off."

"What did the officers say when Montgomery asked them to help him solve that problem?"

"They said they would help him."

Full Facts Demanded.

Mr. LaRoe had not been a willing witness. He had prefaced his answers with a statement the Yudelevit case had "a great many ramifications." When Mr. Fitzpatrick suggested he would of course give the committee "all the facts," he replied: "I don't know whether I will or not. I won't unless this committee makes me." Representative Schulte said he would insist on full facts and answers and Mr. LaRoe capitulated. He explained much of his information had been obtained confidentially from Government departments other than the Police Department.

The same restriction did not bind him in his comments on the office of United States Attorney Leslie C. Garnett and other branches of the law enforcement machinery. He said there had been 9,113 felonies reported in the District in the last calendar year.

Only 174 convictions had been obtained after trials prosecuted by Mr. Garnett's office out of 5,118 arrests, he said. In addition, 813 prisoners had pleaded guilty, his figures showed. His chart was headed "lack of enforcement."

Prosecution Criticized.

"This represents what our civic committee of the Federation of Churches of the District believes the most serious aspect of the crime situation," he said. "Our federation is very much disturbed over the difference between the number of felonies reported and the small number of convictions.

"Does the fault lie partially in the prosecutor's office?" asked Mr. Schulte.

"Partially the prosecution and delay there, but there is some degree of guilt all along the line. The grand jury, at times, has not been as diligent as it might be."

"Have you any specific instances of undue delay in prosecution by the office of Mr. Garnett?" asked Representative Schulte.

"Yes. The Camp Jacobs case. The father of a little colored girl who had been criminally attacked could not get the case prosecuted. He came to me for aid. I telephoned Mr. Garnett last May. Mr. Garnett said, 'Mr. LaRoe, I'll not only expedite the case but I will handle it myself.' The case was so delayed that the child, the principal witness, died a short time ago, and the case never has been brought to trial."

Harris & Ewing.

WILBUR H. LaROE, Jr.

Few Convictions Shown.

Another chart showed that out of 96 arrests for setting up a gaming table Mr. Garnett had accepted three pleas of guilty and won one conviction. Another chart showed more nolle prosses than convictions. The charts, he said, were regarded as showing a "very serious situation" and "a matter causing our federation grave concern."

"The 61,000 church people on whose behalf I speak feel very strongly this is a disgraceful condition for the Capital of the United States," he said.

Assails Police 'Bad Spots.'

"There has been a lack of uniformity of enforcement," he said. "Our police force as a whole is good. But we believe there are some bad spots in it.

"There has been a regrettable tendency to turn the heat on and off. There is only one way to enforce the law and that is to keep the heat on."

"Do you think we should have a standing congressional committee such as this to see that is done?" said Representative Jennings Randolph (Democrat), of West Virginia, committee chairman.

"That would please me very much," replied Mr. La Roe. He presented another table showing there had been no gaming table arrests from March, 1933, until January, 1934, when police, he said "began to turn on the heat," making 17 arrests in the five months from January to May, inclusive, after which arrests mounted, numbering 19 in June, 27 in July, 10 in August, none in September and 25 in October.

Wide Gambling Charged.

"To our certain knowledge there was serious gambling during the time there was not a single arrest for gambling made," he said. "When there is rigid enforcement there is little gambling."

"Don't you think all of that is due to the fact the Police Department has sat idly by and there has been a lack of administration by Maj. Brown?" asked Representative Schulte.

"I can't go that far."

"Why not?"

"Maj. Brown, whom I have known for some time, has tried. I suppose that he must, however, stand responsible. He's head of the department."

"Of course, just as the head of any other organization is responsible for its functioning," agreed Mr. Schulte.

A censorship board for moving pictures shown in the National Capital was urged by Mr. LaRoe. "There seems to be no doubt," he said, "there is a direct connection between the wrong kind of moving pictures and juvenile delinquency. I don't know how I can prove that because I haven't any statistics and other proof."

"That has been one of my pet theories for a long time," Representative Virginia E. Jenckes (Democrat), of Indiana, said.

"You believe this committee should recommend a censorship board?" asked Chairman Randolph.

Blames Blind Buying.

"By all means," replied Mr. LaRoe. "We have pictures shown here which stink to high heaven. We go to the police and they send us to the corporation counsel. The fault lies in the block booking and blind buying under which the exhibitor has no choice in the picture he buys."

"There should be no legalization of gambling in the District," he told Representative Schulte. He wouldn't admit Mr. Schulte's estimate that 70 per cent of the District population played the numbers game but agreed the percentage was "terrible."

He had based his assault on gambling as a "heinous crime" because, he said, it was the "breeding ground for other crimes." He mentioned the Houston Hotel shootings and the murder of Allen Wilson. Mr. LaRoe cited "Sam Beard as a good illustration of the gamblers" he had in mind. "Others are 'Jew Boy' Dietz, Dutch Irwin, Jimmy LaFontaine—they are illustrations. I place them pretty well up on the list of public enemies, myself."

When Representative Schulte limited his proposed legalization of gambling to pari-mutuel betting on horses, however, Mr. LaRoe said "with that limit we are a good deal closer together, Mr. Schulte, than I thought."

Tells Results of System.

"The parole system," Mr. LaRoe said, "is not working well, nor the way Congress intended," and blamed the fact on the lack of money and the requisite staff. There now are 318 men on parole and the board has only one parole officer to supervise them, he said. This is against the whole theory of parole, which contemplated supervision and aid of men released from prison to help them become rehabilitated, he declared.

"The system here is breaking down in a very serious way because we haven't got an adequate staff," he continued. "Furthermore, we are keeping in prison young men who might be paroled if we had the staff to care for them. We are doing some work in the public good. We have some young fellows we are proud of because they are making good.

"I recommend we be replaced by a board, with salaries of not less than $7,500 a year, and the paid board be given an adequate staff."

Representative Chauncey W. Reed (Republican), Illinois, and Representative Schulte joined in giving high praise to Mr. LaRoe for his public service.

"I, for one," said Representative Reed, "am going to try to get the parole board law revised and provide for a paid board of men like you."

"Let me keep the record straight," responded Mr. LaRoe. "I could not afford to give my full time to the board. Neither could Dr. Emmett Scott, secretary of Howard University.

Warns Against Politics.

"If that is true how could we be sure of getting the type of men we need on the paid board."

"The grave danger to the parole board would be in letting it get into politics. I don't think you gentlemen realize how many Senators and members of Congress ask us to do something for friends. Their requests are perfectly legitimate and receive little consideration unless based on facts. But suppose some prominent politician wanted something from a parole board member anxious for reappointment? That must be avoided. The board must be given the dignity of a court."

The hearing is to be resumed this morning with Precinct Detective Robert J. Maghan, of the Third Precinct, before the committee. Inspector T. R. Bean has been called for the afternoon.

Injuries Fatal To Pedestrian; Year's Toll 24

Traffic fatalities in the District for 1935 reached 24 yesterday with the death, in Casualty Hospital, of George Hilton, 52, of the 2100 block of I street.

Mr. Hilton died of a skull fracture suffered Tuesday night when he was knocked down by an automobile at Eighth and M streets southeast. The driver of the car, Clarence Peterson, 35, of the 3400 block of Eighth street, will appear at a coroner's inquest.

Louise Darcey, 16, of the 1600 block of Thirty-fourth street northwest, received injuries that may prove fatal yesterday, when she was struck by an automobile as she crossed Thirty-fourth street northwest in the 1600 block.

The girl, daughter of Maurice A. Darcey, a mechanic at the Gichnor Iron Works Co., was on her way to mass at Holy Trinity Church, in Georgetown. Charles E. O'Roark, 27, of Arlington, Va., driver of the car, was held.

A coroner's jury yesterday exonerated Leslie Egleston, 34, of Ballston, Va., in the death of Harry Wallthrop, ambulance driver for the Board of Public Welfare.

Wallthrop was injured fatally in a collision between his ambulance and Egleston's automobile at Twenty-sixth street and Constitution avenue northwest last week.

Walter M. Sands, 28, of the 2500 block of Queens Chapel road northwest, was exonerated yesterday in the death of Edward Hugo, 19, of Silver Spring, Md. Hugo died Monday after a crash, February 15, between his automobile and a bus driven by Sands.

Farm Census Due to Provide Jobs for 1,300

Temporary Work for Many on Civil Service List Is Forecast.

Temporary jobs for approximately 1,300 unemployed civil service workers to be available for the most part between April 15 and May 15 were forecast yesterday by Director of the Census William L. Austin.

The appointments will be necessary, Mr. Austin said, to handle the increased load put on the Census Bureau by returns from the farm census, expected to reach its peak about May 1.

The demand will be principally for card punch operators, clerks and tabulators to prepare in statistical form reports from some 26,000 enumerators who have been gathering data on the "back-to-the-farm" movement throughout the Nation since January 2.

All appointments are to be made from the civil service registers, Mr. Austin said, each employe to be required as a condition of appointment to have taken a civil service examination, to have been an employe of the bureau for at least six months and to have had, while previously employed, an efficiency rating of at least 80 per cent.

Selections will be made chiefly from among those temporary employes engaged by the bureau for tabulating the 1930 census, with regard, Mr. Austin said, for State apportionment requirements. Seven thousand were given jobs in 1930.

A total of 1,800 employes will have been taken on by June 1, Mr. Austin said, 500 having been hired since early in January.

Be Modern!

Don't Worry About Fat

Are you one of those people who are forever worrying because "everything they eat goes to fat"?

Then stop worrying right now—because here's a simple, easy, pleasant way to correct that condition, bring your weight down to normal. Without dieting, without exercises, without drastic purging!

For many years physicians the world over have known and prescribed a famous corrective for abnormal obesity. It has been taken with amazingly beneficial results by thousands of women who were "too fat."

This corrective is the chief active ingredient of Marmola, prepared in tablet form by one of the leading medical laboratories of America. You simply take a tablet of Marmola 4 times a day, and start at once to get rid of burdensome fat.

It sounds miraculous, but thousands of women who have taken Marmola, as directed, might well tell you this story if they had the chance.

Since 1907, more than 20,000,000 packages of Marmola have been purchased—and what greater recommendation can be had?

Today—buy a package of Marmola, and start at once. You will soon experience Marmola's benefits. When you have gone far enough, stop taking Marmola. And you will bless the day when you first learned about this wonderful reducing agent!

Floods Feared On Mississippi; Potomac Rises

But Bureau Discounts Any Overflow Here; Cloudy and Cold Today.

Army engineers kept watch over the Mississippi River yesterday as "the Father of Waters" took on flood proportions under a late winter burden of melting snow and heavy rains.

One Army officer, according to the Associated Press, voiced possibility of another major flood. Others, however, engaged in flood-control work, expressed belief there was no cause for alarm despite the prediction that the river would creep to a level of 7 feet above flood stage at Cairo, Ill., by Saturday.

Elsewhere—in the Ohio and her tributaries, in the St. Francis River, in Missouri, and in many other rivers up and down the Nation—floods already had begun or were threatening.

Nearby Streams Rise.

In Washington, however, and in nearby Maryland and Virginia, there was no immediate flood menace. There has not been enough precipitation or snowfall to cause alarm along the Potomac River, Dr. W. J. Moxom, acting chief of the River and Flood Division of the Weather Bureau, said last night.

"The rivers and streams have risen somewhat, but there's no immediate prospect of a flood," asserted Dr. Moxom.

Meanwhile, cool winds and a low temperature made Washington shiver. The minimum was 32 at 7 a. m.

The maximum was 40 degrees at 4 p. m. The prediction for today was for continued cold and cloudy skies.

Depends on "Cut-Off."

Belief that the "cut-off" system would keep in check the waters of the Missssippi in the lower reaches was expressed by Brig. Gen. Harley B. Ferguson, president of the Mississippi River Commission.

Capt. Hans Kramer, another Army engineer at Memphis, said:

"There is a world of water in the valley," and added, "it looks like we'll have a major flood."

In Missouri, the Associated Press reported, National Guardsmen were called to assist families who fled from their homes as the St. Francis crushed its levees and spread over a vast area.

Others have been driven from the homes in Illinois and Mississippi by streams swollen to extremely high levels by heavy rains.

Farm Relief Program Hinges on Drought

Continuation of drought conditions in the Middle West may necessitate serious changes in the farm relief program, it was indicated yesterday.

Secretary Wallace said drought conditions still were serious west of central Kansas, but it was much too early to determine the effect of weather conditions on next summer's crops.

At the Agricultural Department it was said drought possibilities were not yet being seriously considered because of the possibility of consideredable rainfall before the planting season. It was added no definite indication of the effects of weather conditions on crops could be had before May 1.

Magicians Talk Shop At Fete for Cardini

The Washington Assembly of the Society of American Magicians gave a breakfast to Cardini and Mrs. Cardini in the National Press Club yesterday.

Cardini said that was fine. Then one by one he took everybody's picture. Then everyone got together in a semicircle, Cardini joined them and Mrs. Cardini took their picture.

Then the members of the assembly went back to their offices, and the Cardinis got over to the Fox just in time to make up for the first show.

Mrs. Stetson Divorces Heir to Hat Millions

Las Vegas, Nev., March 13 (U.P.). Mrs. Lucretia Haughman Stetson was granted a divorce from Henry G. Stetson, Philadelphia socialite heir to the hat millions, in a 3-minute court session today.

She said her husband was rude to her, embarrassing her before friends, which caused her to become ill. They were married May 18, 1928 and separated last January. They had no children.

Teams Got Goals Mixed.

Hartford, Conn. (U.P.).—Two teams lost hockey games here because they became confused over the location of the goals and scored for the opposing sextets. West Hartford High School defeated Holyoke 2-1 and the Hartford Indians beat Windsor 1-0 on unearned goals.

Automotive Industry Faces Canadian Probe

Ottawa, March 13 (AP).—Finance Minister E. N. Rhodes today authorized George H. Sedgewick, chairman of the tariff board, to launch an investigation into the automotive industry in Canada. Attention will be paid particularly to the bearing on the industry of customs and excise duties or taxes.

The reference embraced "the matter of the relationship of the production of parts to the larger industry and of both to the general consuming interest."

District Hears Ways to Relieve Traffic Snarls

Plan to Stagger Hours of Federal Employes Is Listed by Van Duzer.

And the downtown parking situation, often discussed, couldn't be overlooked, so the National Capital Park and Planning Commission offered a remedy.

Van Duzer, after an extensive study of pedestrian problems, announced tentative plans to stagger Government working hours and said his completed idea would be presented to the District Commissioners next week. Coincident with his announcement, the Park and Planning Commission disclosed details of a proposed survey of downtown garage and parking facilities.

Official approval is all that remains for enactment of Van Duzer's plan to relieve rush-hour pedestrian traffic. Virtually every Government department head has agreed to his tentative schedule of hour staggering. Federal and District employes, under the traffic director's suggested change, would report to work at intervals between 8:30 and 9:15 a. m. Office closing hours would range from 4 to 4:45 p. m.

Approximately 45,000 Government workers are thrown into the downtown area at the same time under present conditions. Peak loads of traffic, both vehicular and pedestrian, are now concentrated in one section at 9 a. m. and 4:30 p. m. These present peaks would be distributed over a 45-minute period by Van Duzer's plan.

It will be April 15 at the earliest before the new system can operate, Van Duzer pointed out. Before presenting results of his study to the Commissioners, he is awaiting revised street car and bus schedules.

The traffic director said his department now is concentrating on a solution to the business area pedestrian problem. A recent pedestrian survey along Pennsylvania avenue northwest, from Ninth to Fifteenth streets, showed Twelfth street to be the most jammed rush-hour intersection.

In a single hour, from 4:15 to 5:15 p. m., a total of 7,283 persons were counted crossing the street. About a year ago a similar check showed 3,602 pedestrians at the same corner.

Check on Pedestrians.

Street.	8 to 9 a. m.	4:15 to 5:15 p. m.
Ninth	1,427	2,015
Tenth	2,291	2,846
Eleventh	1,103	1,510
Twelfth	5,083	7,283
Thirteenth	3,278	3,804
Fourteenth	5,012	6,661
Fifteenth	1,418	1,394

Naming Twelfth street and Pennsylvania avenue as the busiest intersection, Van Duzer added that 4,000 motor vehicles and 300 street cars passed during the same rush-hour period. Traffic lights instead of crossing policemen have speeded traffic about 4 miles per hour, he declared.

Suggestions and comments on the downtown parking situation are sought from Government and District officials by the Park and Planning Commission. A seven-point solution program was offered by Frederic A. Delano, chairman of the traffic committee.

Traffic Fatalities.

Coincidently Representative Mary T. Norton (Democrat), of New Jersey, chairman of the House District Committee, reminded Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen, chairman of the District Board of Commissioners, that "the number of fatalities in the District from automobile accidents is appalling." She said she understood that a large proportion of traffic fatalities was due to lack of pedestrian control and offered to sponsor a bill to prohibit pedestrians from crossing intersections in the face of red lights.

Chairman Delano's seven-point "solution program" reads:

"1. Neither the Government nor private individuals can embark in the construction of garages unless city authorities, with the approval of Congress, will make effective rules against parking cars on city streets in the downtown district.

"2. It is safe to say that parking ing in a multiple-story garage above the ground is cheaper than subterranean parking, all costs considered. This is especially true in the downtown parking section of Washington on account of difficulty of draining, also the expense of ventilation, lighting and servicing.

Roberts' Proposal.

"3. Private individuals could not be induced to construct garages, except in a very limited way, unless they are assured of a moderate profit. William A. Roberts, people's counsel for the District, has suggested that a private corporation be set up, either of the nonprofit or limited dividend type, which could borrow money from the FHA or the RFC to build a garage in the business district. He has worked out a plan which would allow very reasonable rates to Government employes—say 15 cents a day. But even this would not succeed unless condition No. 1 was adhered to.

"4. In all probability the best temporary solution of the parking problem is the use of vacant lots for parking. These can be screened from the streets by dropping the grade a little below the sidewalk grade, say 2 feet or thereabouts, and surrounding it by lattice work or, better, a screen of shrubbery.

"5. When it comes to a permanent garage, a design used in some Western cities is applicable to Washington and particularly advantageous if a long, rather narrow block can be secured. In this design, the center core of the block is used for automobile storage and the periphery of the block for offices facing the street. In this way a building can be designed which will be entirely acceptable architecturally and not in any sense an eyesore. Stores can be located on the ground floor and offices above.

Urges Careful Study.

"6. Careful study is very necessary to determine feasibility of large garages in respect to the number of cars that can be admitted or discharged, say within an hour, and the effect on the congestion of streets. Garages with a capacity of 1,000 or more cars might create such a congestion as to seriously interfere with city traffic.

"7. The entire question of motor vehicle storage must be considered in its relation to mass transportation by street car and bus; also the possible necessity of stretching out or staggering the time of opening and closing Government offices."

IF YOUR BREATH HAS A SMELL YOU CAN'T FEEL WELL

When we eat too much, our food decays in our bowels. Our friends smell this decay coming out of our mouth and call it bad breath. We feel the poison of this decay all over our body. It makes us gloomy, grouchy and no good for anything.

What makes the food decay in the bowels? Well, when we eat too much, our bile juice can't digest it. What is the bile juice? It is the most vital digestive juice in our body. Unless 2 pints of it are flowing from our liver into our bowels every day, our movements get hard and constipated and ¾ of our food decays in our 28 feet of bowels. This decay sends poison all over our body every six minutes.

When our friends smell out bad breath (but we don't) and we feel like a whipped tomcat, don't use a mouthwash or take a laxative. Get at the cause. Take Carter's Little Liver Pills which gently start the flow of your bile juice. But if "something better" is offered you, don't buy it, for it may be a calomel (mercury) pill, which loosens teeth, gripes and scalds the rectum as many people. Ask for Carter's Little Liver Pills by name and get what you ask for—25¢. ©1934, C.M.Co.

Society Girl Trips Film Actor, He's Seized as Jewel Smuggler

By the Associated Press.

New York, March 13.—George K. Arthur, Hollywood movie actor, was arrested today as he stepped off the gangplank of the Panama-Pacific liner Columbia, charged with smuggling in connection with an international jewel theft.

A New York City police detective, Walter Miller, who made the arrest, said Arthur, whose real name is George Brest, was held on a Federal indictment after information was supplied by Scotland Yard and the Department of Justice.

Arthur is accused of stealing a diamond and sapphire bracelet from Stephen Raphael, British banker, and duping a New York society girl, Miss Mary H. Jopling, into bringing the bracelet into the United States.

Miss Jopling, a social registerite, met the actor at Cannes. The detective said Miss Jopling was persuaded by Arthur to bring the bracelet into the United States. Arthur, Miller said, told the society girl he was worried about losing it, that it belonged to his mother, and asked her to keep it until he called for it in New York.

Miss Jopling told her story to the New York Federal grand jury last month and the indictment was returned secretly to await Arthur's return to New York from a Southern cruise.

Arthur, who takes British roles principally in the films, gave his age as 35. He lives at 8782 Shoreham drive, Hollywood.

The banker, the actor and the society girl met at Cannes in the summer of 1934.

Through a mutual friend in New York of the banker and the society girl, Raphael learned the bracelet was given to Miss Jopling at Cannes. Scotland Yard was notified. A search throughout America was started by the Department of Justice.

Woodside Club Hears Mulford

Guest Speaker Discusses Landscape Gardening at Meeting.

J. T. Mulford, of the Department of Agriculture, was the guest speaker at a meeting of the Men's Club of Grace Church last night in the parish hall, Woodside, Md., discussing landscape gardening.

He cautioned members to be on the alert for any possible development of the Dutch elm tree disease, which threatens to wipe out the elms of the country as effectively as the chestnut blight killed chestnut trees.

The club adopted a resolution indorsing the plans for the Silver Spring Church Athletic League for development of sports among the boys of the community. The club also voted to support a movement which the athletic association is expected to sponsor for development of an athletic field available not only for the league's activities but for the use of the high school as well.

Among sites discussed were the field which the Maryland National Capital Park and Planning Commission proposes to develop in Sligo Park north of Colesville Pike and the county-owned land now lying idle in the rear of the Silver Spring Armory.

A committee to cooperate with the athletic association was named composed of Harold P. Parks, chairman, and Charles T. Barber, vice chairman.

provisions which had existed for years in the industry and characterized Borah's statement that prices had increased as much as 800 per cent as "silly."

Borah replied that his statement was based on reports of the Federal Trade Commission.

Biddle repeated to the Senate Committee statements that he previously had made to the effect that his board is helpless under the present law. He also disagreed with Secretary Perkins, who had proposed that the "supreme court of labor" under the Wagner bill be placed under the jurisdiction of her department.

Following Biddle's statement, Senator La Follette (Progressive), Wisconsin, declared that "the law as it stands is a snare and a delusion and unless the Wagner bill is passed it had better be taken off the statute books."

"Suspended Enforcement."

Senator David I. Walsh (Democrat), Massachusetts, chairman of the committee, said "the evidence of Mr. Biddle was effective and conclusive. The law is evidently a dead letter."

Biddle cited statistics of cases before his board and said there is a "virtual suspension of enforcement." He asked for retention of provisions of the Wagner bill giving the Labor Board power to subpena witnesses, issue stop orders and enforce its decisions by direct recourse to Federal courts. He said the present system, with NRA and the Attorney General responsible, for enforcement is so cumbersome as to be ineffective.

Delays under the present procedure are responsible for gross injustices, Biddle contended, as wrongs must be redressed promptly or never in most cases. He pointed out that the Weirton case, the only one which has been decided, was based on events occurring in the summer of 1933.

The NRA decision at Newark involved Acme, Inc., manufacturers of nails, staples, paper clips and similar products. The suit asked that United States Attorney Harlan Besson be restrained from prosecuting the company for alleged code violations. The company had refused to give Besson a certified copy of its pay roll.

Judges Ruling.

"The recovery act and the incident code," Judge Fake ruled, "insofar as they attempt to regulate the hours of labor, the fixing of wages, or the furnishing of so-called confidential reports thereon, are without sanction under the Constitution and therefore void."

Judge Fake indicated that he had followed closely the reasoning in the Weirton case, in which section 7(a) of the recovery act was declared unconstitutional.

Judge Letts, in granting an injunction restraining Secretary Wallace from enforcing the Providence milk licensing agreement, declared: "Congress has no more authority than the Canadian Parliament to impose the burden of interstate commerce on this class of business."

Criticizes Law.

While holding the Frazier-Lemke act constitutional, Judge Otis added that the law impressed him as "unwise in many of its provisions and almost incomprehensible in others."

"It is new," he added, "in that it impairs security given for a debt. No bankruptcy act has done that in the past. Instead of impairing only one contract, it impairs two contracts—the primary contract to pay the debt and the secondary contract to surrender on a stipulated date specific property in or toward payment of the debt.

"But as against bankruptcy, one kind of contract is no more sacred than another. The power of Congress to provide for the discharge of debts through bankruptcy is not limited to any single class of debts."

Under the Frazier-Lemke amendment a farmer may retain his farm while paying his creditors rental and after five years has the option of purchasing the farm back at the appraised value.

The 'Shrinking Man' Better, Physicians Say

By the Associated Press.

Los Angeles, March 13.—George Bocklet, "the shrinking man," was reported by attendants tonight to be "feeling better" than at any time in recent months.

Dr. Frank G. Nolan, who is attending the 49-year-old commercial artist in a fight against the strange malady Bocklet says is making him look "more and more like an ape," said Bocklet was being subject to an exhaustive series of tests to determine the cause of his affliction.

For the last two days, the doctor said, Bocklet has suffered from hemorrhages. These abated late today.

Recount Case Is Completed

Transcript of Testimony Is Finished on Jordan and Imirie Pleas.

Transcript of the testimony in the hearing on the recount petition charges of Dr. Llewellyn Jordan and John L. Imirie, defeated Democratic candidates who are seeking to unseat Delegates Joseph A. Cantrel and Walter M. Magruder, Fusionists, was completed yesterday.

The transcript required more than 809 typewritten pages and contains more than 200,000 words as well as 34 exhibits. The total cost, including witness fees and transcribing, was $512.90. The various witnesses were called back to sign their testimony, which was then sealed by Judge Donald A. DeLashmutt, who heard the testimony which is to be presented to the elections committee of the House of Delegates of Maryland for decision on whether Jordon and Imirie are entitled to a recount.

Dr. Jordan was scheduled to deliver the documents to the committee last night at Annapolis. He said that he would at the same time make a plea for use of voting machines in the county elections hereafter.

School at Lexington For Water Plant Heads

Richmond, Va., March 13 (AP).—A training course for water works superintendents and officers will be held at Lexington April 2 and 3, officers of the League of Virginia Municipalities and the State department of health announced yesterday.

This will be the second of zone schools of this type, the first having been held at Salem in January. Other schools are planned at Bluefield, Charlottesville, Danville, Farmville, Norfolk, Norton, Richmond and Winchester.

Long Prepares For Filibuster On Works Bill

Glass Accepts Challenge; Huey Charges Undercover Move on Pairs.

Clark (Democrat), Missouri, charged the Army expects another $400,000,000, in addition to the regular Army appropriation bill, to be allocated from the works measure.

Long still had the floor when the Senate adjourned. He was demanding the bill be amended to "earmark" $300,000,000 to send needy youths through college. One of the planks in his "share-the-wealth" movement, a similar amendment to appropriate $1,000,000,000, was defeated, 75 to 5, on the previous day. The $300,000,000 in his second amendment would come from the $800,000,000 allocated to CCC camps.

Senator Glass consented to adjournment when Long agreed to a vote on the amendment by 12:30 today.

"If I can't get $300,000,000, then I'll take $200,000,000, and if I can't get that, I'll take $150,000,000 or even less," said Huey.

Earlier, protesting what he called a violation of "senatorial courtesy" in the failure to grant pairs for Mrs. Caraway and Overton, Long hinted at an "influence" operating to chekmate him. He said he hadn't been able to find out what it was.

"Something's wrong here," he said. "I've been to nearly every Senator on the other side of this question, and I can't 'pair' these votes."

Glass was on his feet immediately when Long bluntly threatened "filibuster."

"If the Senator attempts any physical demonstration I'll be right there with him," retorted the Virginian. "I want it clearly understood that I'm going through with this bill in day sessions or night sessions. Let the Senator from Louisiana not be mistaken about that."

Meantime, a movement to cut the huge appropriation to $1,880,000,000 was steadily gaining force in the Senate. Senator Glass and influential conservative Senators are in sympathy with the slash, and a test vote is expected following the prevailing wage showdown.

Senator Millard E. Tydings (Democrat), Maryland, an advocate of the cut, interrupted Long yesterday to declare that every family must pay an average of $30 merely to meet the interest on the public debt. He said increased spending would delay recovery. Long retorted that Tydings "is wrong four out of five times, but this time his reasoning is sound."

By the Associated Press.

Columbia, S. C., March 13.—The South Carolina House got into an acrimonious debate over Huey Long today and after a lengthy exchange of personalities tabled a resolution asserting the Louisiana Senator was regarded by many as a "public enemy" and providing that he be requested not to visit this State.

The representatives voted 51 to 35 to table. Shortly afterward the chamber adopted a resolution to place the General Assembly on record as having no part in inviting Long to Columbia. The Louisiana "Kingfish" is scheduled to make an address here March 23.

By the Associated Press.

Little Rock, Ark., March 13.—One hundred and eight persons, described by their spokesman, George W. Scott, Little Rock contractor, as "plain citizens," today sent a telegram to Senator Joe T. Robinson, indorsing his leadership for the Roosevelt program and bitterly criticizing Huey P. Long.

The telegram read in part:

"We resent with all the power that is within us the interference of the 'mad man,' Huey P. Long, from Louisiana and his efforts to discredit the Democratic Administration. He should stay in Louisiana as we do not need him in Arkansas. This is a Democratic State and we have confidence in you and our great President."

By the Associated Press.

As Senator Huey Long yesterday continued his fight against the work relief bill, it was revealed that House members, incensed at his frequent criticisms of the President, were forming an "anti-Long bloc."

The purpose, as explained by Representative Gassaway, cowboy-garbed Democrat from Oklahoma, was to "fight fire with fire" by attacking Long either directly or by ridicule.

Gassaway explained that "we are the meanest scoundrels in Congress and we are damn tired of Huey's line of palaver. We are going to knock him over."

The "we," he said, referred to himself, Representative Dies (Democrat), Texas; Representative Disney (Democrat), Oklahoma, and "12 or 15" others. They are holding frequent consultations, Gassaway said, to determine how to "knock Huey over."

One Doesn't Matter.

The threatened deportation of Evelyn John Strachey, the brilliant British commentator on social problems, will be received with mixed feelings.

In principle one is inclined to believe that it would be a good thing to deport British lecturers by dozens rather than as individuals. They constitute a growing racket to which the women's clubs of this country have succumbed without even a reasonable pretense of feminine reserve. As every Briton knows, all that is needed for a triumphal speaking tour from Hoboken to Hollywood is a bedside manner, a slight gargle in the intonation of vowels, and an extra pair of flannel "bags." With these everything he says to ladies over thirty will be admired.

These products of the Oxford Union have been severe competitors of our own artists in articulation. So the Administration can be pardoned if it feels a growing resentment at the monopolization of public platforms by perfidious albions. With Long and Coughlin holding the air, while Britons enslave the women's clubs, the encroachments on the brain trust is no light matter. Dr. Tugwell, for instance, has seemingly almost abandoned lecturing.

But it does seem a mistake to let accumulated resentment break on the head of one of the most exciting and stimulating of the lads from Piccadilly, E. John Strachey, Esq., has not merely a swell name and a snappy manner. He has also been by turns aristocrat, socialist, fascist and communist, and can, therefore, in his own person provide a perfect symposium on the social disorder. To accuse one who has so boxed the political compass of falsely stating his beliefs is rather ingenuous of our immigration authorities. His opinions have changed before. They probably will again.

But since the issue has been raised it would be sensible to use it for constructive ends. Of course, the Department of Labor should let Mr. Strachey continue his rudely interrupted tour. But only with the understanding that the Department of State approach His Britannic Majesty on the subject of a reciprocal treaty on Anglo-American lecturers. The international account in this respect is now intolerably one-sided.

Exit Venizelos.

With Eleutherios Venizelos a fugitive on Italian soil, Greece utters a sigh of relief not dissimilar to that which was heard in France when Napoleon was at last safely confined to St. Helena. This dynamic Greek leader appears to have played his last card. Having left his fellow rebels to make their own terms of surrender, he is quoted as saying that he will retire from political life and never more return to Greece.

It is typical of M. Venizelos to suppose that he is making this dramatic decision. But in view of the circumstances surrounding his departure, he is obviously without an alternative. The attempt to live up to this leader's soaring ideals and ambitions has again proved too much for his small and impoverished nation. Even before the revolution began there was plenty of evidence that the Hellenic republic was tired of the diplomatic gyrations of the former premier. His opponents have often said "Greece will never be peaceful until Venizelos leaves." And they were doubtless right.

M. Venizelos began his career with an insurrection in Crete 46 years ago. At that time he was compelled to flee, as he is doing now. Between these two uprisings, however, is a glamorous chapter in the history of modern Greece, a large part of which revolves around the intrigues, the diplomatic victories and the unrestrained aspirations of M. Venizelos. As early as 1911 he was master of his adopted country. Several times he was forced to withdraw, but he always returned with plans for a new destiny for Greece. At the Peace Conference he obtained concessions beyond the dreams of other Hellenic statesmen. He became a scintillating figure in the councils of the Allies—a world figure. But at home the Greeks were not impressed.

Not long after his triumph at Paris the Greek electorate awarded his government a crushing defeat. Apparently Greece had no desire to live up to the ambitions which the Cretan cherished. Since then Greece has twice intrusted the reins of power to the hands of M. Venizelos. But each time he has aspired to achievements beyond the reach of the present Hellenic nation. At any rate, his dreams remain unfulfilled.

The revolution which has just been crushed was a last fling for M. Venizelos. But its effects on domestic politics are not yet worked out. He was always the spearhead of opposition to the monarchical form of government which many Greeks desire. His fall in 1920 was followed by temporary restoration of the monarchy. There will be many who will see opportunity to secure the same outcome from the present overturn.

The Holding Company Problem.

The tone rather than the content of the President's message on holding companies creates the impression that he favors their wholesale abolition, and fully indorses the drastic provisions of the Rayburn bill.

His criticism of holding companies that have exploited subsidiary operating concerns and failed to render any real service to local units is amply justified. The need for regulation to prevent continuance of such practices—in some cases the desirability of dissolution of corporate relationships—is incontestable. However, the President overshoots the mark by manifesting extreme hostility to the holding-company type of organization, irrespective of its record for achievement. The suggestion of enmity is heightened by his attack upon representatives of the public utility holding companies who have been carrying on propaganda designed to defeat the Rayburn bill.

Organizations facing a threat of annihilation can scarcely be blamed for rallying to resist legislative extinction. That the propaganda methods of public utility groups are often so crude as to be self-destructive is another issue. However, it is largely by "propaganda," emanating from interested sources, that Congress can be informed of legitimate reasons for opposition to contemplated legislation. So long as the source of the criticism is known, and no improper pressure is brought to bear upon legislators, no harm is done. Indeed, it was in part interested opposition to the securities exchange act which resulted in modifications of the original measure, which the President now approves unreservedly.

If the Rayburn bill is to be similarly revised in order to eliminate its destructive features, spokesmen for the public utility interests affected are entitled to voice their views. If these views are unsound, deceptive or extreme, the Administration occupies a strategic position from which to launch denials and present counter-arguments.

As a matter of fact, the President's message fails to indicate how far he is prepared to go in indorsing the controversial Rayburn bill. While his words breathe hostility, his positive recommendations are much less inimical to the holding company than the prohibitions of the measure now before Congress. "For practical reasons," he says, "we should offer a chance of survival to those holding companies which can prove to the Securities and Exchange Commission that their existence is necessary for the achievement of the public ends which private utility companies are supposed to serve."

This concession is not easy to reconcile with other portions of the message, in which the President makes a plea for transferring the control of operating units to the localities which "produce the business and create the wealth." It is also bewildering to be told that the holding company, which has existed for generations, is a device that "does not belong to our American traditions of law and business."

Instead of clarifying the legislative atmosphere, the President's message may tend to becloud the issues which Congress has been called upon to decide. In this field, as in many others, the legislators are in need of guidance which will enable them to effect reforms without dislocating business and creating new kinds of injustice. The holding company is a device which permits great financial power to be concentrated in the hands of a few people. But the system contains potentialities for good as well as evil. How to salvage the good while eradicating the evil is no easy problem.

Selfish and short-sighted insistence upon maintenance of the status quo certainly provides no solution. Neither would a revolutionary overthrow of a form of corporate organization which has been instrumental in facilitating the development of industrially backward sections of the country. It is especially surprising to find an Administration which has itself made extensive use of the holding company device denouncing that device as un-American.

On The Way Out.

Repeal of that obnoxious clause in the income tax law which masquerades as the "pink slip" provision is virtually assured by action of the House and the Senate Finance Committee. In each case a favorable vote was expected because of the widespread opposition to publication of income tax returns which has developed throughout the country. Yet the overwhelming repeal sentiment in Congress was pleasantly surprising. With a fuller understanding of the issue at stake, the majority seems to have completely and emphatically reversed its position.

In some respects this outcome is indicative of the resentment against ill-advised measures passed by the last Congress under the pressure of emergency. To its credit, Congress is now more disposed critically to examine legislative proposals on their merits. Instead of falling in line, like sheep, Congressmen are asking what useful purpose can be served by innovations. Of course, when the "pink slip" clause was studied from this viewpoint, its repeal was assured.

Some difficulty is still feared in securing passage of the repeal measure in the Senate: not because a majority is in favor of exposing every taxpayer's affairs to racketeers, snoopers and business competitors, but because a minority hates to abandon a device which, along with other effects, would embarrass the wealthy. Even so, the public attitude has been made clear. The socially undesirable consequences of invading citizens' privacy are now plainly visualized. Only a mistaken pride in its previous snap judgment could deter the Senate from following the lead of the House.

Pork Vs. Planning.

A little town in Maryland has approved a local project calling for the expenditure of $100,000 of Federal funds. Likewise a single county on the Eastern Shore is lobbying for a grant of $1,000,000 from the proposed public works appropriation. Every village, metropolis and township is ready to cooperate to help the Administration spend the enormous grant which it has requested of Congress.

There is nothing strange about this. It is as inevitable as it is thought-provoking. Many local officials as well as private citizens fear that a fresh outpouring of money for public works would be wasted so far as stimulating recovery is concerned. But, as Senator Copeland told his colleagues, these same officials take the attitude that the Treasury is going to be opened and "we must get ours."

The vague nature of the work-relief legislation has encouraged the preparation of hasty and often ill-judged demands upon the Administration. If this measure is enacted, even with the $4,880,000,000 fund earmarked into general categories, tremendous pressure will be brought to bear upon the distributing agency. Politicians will insist that their communities "be taken care of," as they did in many cases under the PWA. With a presidential campaign in the offing, will any administrative agency, organized under the spoils system, be able to resist these demands?

There can be no compromise between pork and planning. When a public works program is not carefully outlined in advance of its initiation it is virtually impossible to keep it aloof from the influence racket. Both Senators Copeland and Tydings have called attention to the fact that the great wells of unemployment are in the large cities where factories stand idle. But it does not appear that plans have been laid for expenditure of the proposed fund where it is needed most. In fact, the general outline of projects adopted by the Senate Appropriations Committee indicates that most of the fund will go to rural sections. This would involve costly transshipments of labor, further reducing the net available for actual employment purposes.

Armed with data direct from the Treasury, Senator Byrd has pointed out the loose manner in which the PWA fund has been administered. Part of the money intended for public works has been spent by the Federal Power Commission, the General Accounting Office, and other regular governmental agencies. Moreover, the Government has undertaken more work than it can finance, thus forcing Congress to appropriate nearly $700,000,000 additional or leave numerous projects incomplete and useless.

In the face of this record, the request for still more general powers in the expenditure of nearly $5,000,000,000 can not be too closely scrutinized in advance.

A Boy Of The Balkans.

The life of Michael Idvorsky Pupin was another evidence that America at least used to be a land of opportunity, and another example of how a man of science may remain a man of faith.

A penniless boy of the Balkans, the son of illiterate peasants, he won his way to the United States at 16. At 21 he entered Columbia and was winning prizes for his Greek, mathematics and, if you please, his wrestling. He had Ph.D. degrees from English and German universities very little later: the forerunners of a long list. He became a member of the faculty of his alma mater before he was 31. He dies at 77, a world-famous inventor who attributed his success to the inspiration of his mother and to the institutions of his adopted country.

Nevertheless, the deeper that this authority in practical science delved into the mysterious world of matter, the firmer was fixed his belief in those explanations of the spiritual universe which had shaped his childhood. Pasteur asked for the piety of a Breton peasant—and achieved it. Pupin's piety never waivered.

The "Pupin Coil" might make the transcontinental telephone possible, yet its inventor—America's foremost expert in electromechanics—could say to Joseph Bucklin Bishop: "I still recite with assurance the Orthodox Prayer to die as I desire to live, in Christ's Church, in His Faith and in His Love."

Bad Business.

Rocky Mountain News.

The Navy, which is now spending $238,000,000 of public works funds on a building program which will eventually cost an additional $55,500,000, does not know whether it is getting its money's worth.

Capt. Dubose, of the Navy Construction Corps, admitted to the Senate Munitions Committee that the Navy Department does not know whether bids it receives for naval construction are fair or excessive. He admitted that the department does not know the scale of wages the private shipbuilders pay, nor what goes into the item of "cost," as figured in bids, nor what is included in the item "overhead."

This latter charge has been shown during the hearings to amount in some cases to more than 80 per cent of labor and material costs in bids for warships.

The committee also has disclosed evidence tending to prove that private shipbuilders have forced the Navy to eliminate from contracts the "rejection" clause, which formerly permitted the Navy to refuse a completed warship found faulty in workmanship or material during tests.

A Squawk Is Understandable.

The Rally To The National Symphony

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: This morning, as usual, your editorial page claimed my eager attention, which was at once attracted by the conspicuous title above the letter on music from "An Old Washingtonian."

My sympathy for this correspondent in the disgust and positively acute artistic shock from the rude interruption of Brahms' superlative "Requiem" can not be expressed verbally. However, granting the inexcusable vandalism of such bad radio manners, I can not see why this display of lack of good taste and consideration for cultured listeners (remunerative though invisible) should damn the National Symphony Orchestra!

My husband has served from time to time in various crises of fuel emergency through four administrations here in Washington and each time upon our return we have found an improvement in the growth and interest in good music. When Dr. Kindler came we felt assured, knowing his great artistic ability, that at last Washington would cease to be dependent upon outside organizations for promoting proper musical appreciation.

I have listened with intense pleasure to the concerts of the National Symphony Orchestra and look forward not only to the enjoyment of listening to eloquent, sensitive interpretations of the great classics, but under the inspiration of such upliftment to behold the awakening of the best talent of the community. Dr. Kindler's school concerts are splendid and the oftener his orchestra can be heard by the multitudes the fewer "idle brains" there will be for the "devil's workshops."

Let radio etiquette improve, by all means, but do not let us lose sight of the bud with its promise of greater beauty, because we may prefer the glory of the full-blown rose!

The National Symphony Orchestra should be the center of a great musical organization in which a well-trained chorus and many good local artists, vocal and instrumental, could take part, inaugurating a festival of concerts while the cherry blossoms are in bloom. There will be plenty of money for the best things in life as soon as it is no longer wasted on that which is inferior and degrading.

MAY ROGERS WADLEIGH.
Washington, March 11.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: "Old Washingtonian" considers that the "older" orchestras are being driven from Washington and makes the following statement regarding the National Symphony: "It is removing from Washington the possibility of hearing any first-class symphonic music."

I have been an attendant at the Sunday concerts of the National Symphony ever since its first concert here, and have been astonished at the rapid improvement in its performance. It has been my pleasure to hear the "older" orchestras also, but I wish to say that, in my opinion, the concert given on Sunday, March 10, was the most finished, inspiring and soul-satisfying performance I have ever heard.

It seems to me that if the writer of that letter had not been so annoyed by being interrupted in his enjoyment of Brahm's German "Requiem," he would consider his statement about the National Symphony being "second-rate" and, as an old Washingtonian rejoice that this city has at last an orchestra of which to be proud.

Another Old Washingtonian.
Washington, March 11.

The Post welcomes letters from its readers. All communications must be signed with the writer's name and address. Upon publication initials or pen names will be used if requested. Letters are subject to condensation, and in no case should they exceed 250 words.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The "Old Washingtonian," who on Sunday, was angered because Toscanini's broadcast was interrupted by Hans Kindler's orchestra, expressed no true feeling of love of fine music, for the love of fine music brings out the best in one's character and never a bit of anger. The curtailing of Brahm's "Requiem" to be followed only by a half hour of Wagner was the unfortunate part of the broadcast. The fact that the National Symphony was given any time over the radio, while giving a concert at Constitution Hall, is evidence of its importance in the District.

If the "Old Washingtonian" feels that the best music is being driven away, the writer wishes to inform him that the National Symphony Orchestra is just aiming for high ideals and it and its sponsors have nothing to do with the eliminating of other orchestras. The National Orchestra needs only more musicians to increase its volume to that of the other orchestras. That can be accomplished by the support of the "Old Washingtonians" who have the genuine interests for the artistic development of Washington. No orchestra can continue by the support of radio listeners alone, for they are the last ones to offer even a penny.

Too many concerts can not be given to acquaint the listener with the vast field of music. It is only by constant repetition that one comes really to know the many compositions. If one forgets easily, he needs the repetition that much more. Had the "Old Washingtonian" had the advantage in his youth of the children's concerts, his ear would have been trained to enjoy a sudden change of program and to appreciate each change for the part it was fulfilling. It is evident that the "Old Washingtonian" was impressed a bit by the broadcast from the National Symphony Orchestra. He lost no time in sending his opinion to The Post.

The board of governors includes many leaders in the varied interests in Washington, and it behooves the "Old Washingtonian" to recognize that fact and to turn his anger to a generous support verbally and financially, to help the struggling musician and also give to the unwealthy inhabitants of the District the opportunity to hear the best music under the best circumstances and at reasonable prices.

A REAL WASHINGTONIAN.
Washington, March 11.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I, too, was listening with appreciation to the Brahms' "Requiem," but was rather pleased in a twinkling to be introduced to Dr. Kindler and his orchestra in our own city.

"Old Washingtonian" knows that the young people of Washington have not always had an opportunity to become familiar with great music at first hand. The majority must hear again and again the great masters to become duly appreciative. Dr. Kindler's proposal meets a great need and for those who have not had generations of musical background engenders hope for the future. M. C. W.
Washington, March 11.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: It is hardly necessary to reply to the letter of "Old Washingtonian" relative to our National Symphony Orchestra, for his or her dismal wail has already been answered by "the general musical public" for whom "Old Washingtonian" affects such a pathetic interest.

The answer has been given by steadily increasing attendance at the constantly improving performances of our excellent local orchestra to the loss of visiting organizations such as the Philharmonic and Philadelphia and Boston Symphonies.

It is regrettable that we can not have both our own group and the out-of-town orchestras, but of the two it is far more important that we have the former.

For the former gives us music in abundance at prices within the range of all. It gives musical education to groups of children, and by visits to cities in the South it is introducing symphonic music to those who have never had an opportunity to hear it.

All this is far more important than a few concerts at irregular dates, subject to the whims and ideas of managers of other orchestras, for the benefit of the crusty well-to-do and the hypercritical.

As for "Old Washingtonian," it is necessary to place him or her in the former category, for no intelligent musical critic would describe as "second rate" the matchless performance of "Brunhilde's Immolation" from "Goetterdaemmerung," by Mr. Kindler and his orchestra on Sunday afternoon.

It is unfortunate, indeed, that it was necessary to interrupt a performance under the sublime Toscanini, which no one could regret more keenly that Mr. Kindler's organization, but it was necessary to use the only hour and station available.

Let us take care of our own orchestra by supporting it through contributions and attendance. Thus supported it will grow into such perfection and reputation as to win over the enthusiasm of even such old crusts as "Old Washingtonian."
WASHINGTON BUSINESS MAN.
Washington, March 11.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: "Old Washingtonian" is justly indignant over a local station turning off the Philharmonic Symphony-Schola Cantorum rendition of the great Brahms Requiem yesterday for an excerpt from the National Symphony program. I've nothing to add to what he said about that, but the real crimes are turning off such programs for "a one-minute electrical transcription" or 15 minutes of phonograph records, or alleged comedy, alleged music and unquestioned advertising blah, a practice typical of Washington stations.

His remedy was to listen to the remainder of the program from New York or some other out-of-town station. Conditions here are such that fully half my radio time is occupied with other cities, having discovered those which habitually present—and finish—good programs. When all the programs in Washington are unbearable at once, go to Toronto, Montreal, Louisville, Atlanta, Chicago—the Chicago Symphony Pop Concert there Saturday evenings over WGN blots out anything going on here.

The Post Impressionist

Gentleman From Crete.

Post Office, Thursday.

THERE was the usual rude clamor that accompanies the pulling-out chairs at most big dinner-parties. The little old man—such a frail little old man!—peered at two or three place-cards, found his card, and sank into a chair across from us.

Under cover of the preprandial clatter, we asked of our knowledgable neighbor:

"Who is the poor little monsieur?"

"Poor!" our neighbor echoed. "But don't you know? That's the most able personage between all the wide limits of this conference: that's Eleutherios Venizelos!"

We said: "Although his pictures resembled him, he isn't a bit what they'd lead one to expect."

Said our neighbor: "No?"

"No," said we, "he seems so—well, so modest."

"He is modest," our neighbor answered—"except in regard to his sole business in life."

"And he looks," we persisted, "as if a breath of opposition would extinguish him."

Whereupon our neighbor snorted: "Humph!"

* * *

Yet he did look exactly as we described him. Nor did any subsequent sight of him change our interpretation of his physical appearance.

What we changed was our estimate of how much his physique affected his indomitable spirit, his razor-edged intellect. Them his physique affected not at all.

* * *

He was 55; he might have been 80. His pointed beard was carefully trimmed, but frosted—every hair of it. His face, which was like some fine etching of a face, had been lined by the needles of innumerable political contests. He spoke always in a quiet voice, smiled always.

"Nevertheless," as another famous statesman long later sighed in our hearing, "considering the size of his ante in the game, considering his claims upon the conference—Venizelos got about five times more out of it for his country than almost any other delegates got out of it for their countries."

Got it—to lose it. The Turkish-Greek war followed. Great Britain's support of Greece, promised by Lloyd George, "died aborning," much as the Lloyd-George-promised support of Wrangell had been terminated in time to save the Soviets. The achievement of Venizelos would have seemed miraculous—save that it ended in disaster.

If the Post-Impressionist's acquaintance with this Cretan was of the slightest, we doubt whether even his nearest friend ever quite fathomed all his plans.

Was he seeking a realization of the old Grecian dream: the restoration of Byzantium at Constantinople? Some of his partisans said so. Was he seeking to make Hellas again a great power only that he might profit in personal prestige? Some of his enemies believed it. Or was he scheming to raise the contemporary Greece to a position she could not retain, so that, in an inevitable debacle, he might revive the republic of his native Candia? In after-days, this conjecture also became audible.

The facts are that, successively, all these possible goals were almost achieved. The fact is that Venizelos did not quite reach any of them.

* * *

The Post-Impressionist has never understood Greek politics; he isn't ashamed to confess it. He used to think that he understood Pennsylvania politics, and that this was a triumph of learning. But he defies anyone to explain Hellenic politics completely to anybody. Only one thing attains transatlantic clarity in the case of Venizelos: Though of Greek blood, he was a Cretan; a vast number of Greeks thought him more Cretan than Greek—and these Greeks, with or without reason, applied to this modern Cretan what St. Paul said about the Cretans of his time.

* * *

Of course, there is no more denying Venizelos picturesqueness than there is denying him ability. At his apogee he was one of the last and one of the most brilliant survivors of the old diplomacy. Holland's Jonkheer F. Beelaerts van Blokland first met China's Mme. Wellington Koo at a diplomatic dinner. He asked her if she would prefer him to address her in French or English. "In any language you please," said she. Whereupon the Jonkheer continued his conversation in elegant Chinese. Had Venizelos been going to that dinner, and had it been to the advantage of his policies to talk to Mme. Koo in Chinese—well, one can imagine him learning enough Mandarin to manage it!

* * *

Nevertheless, in the obscure condition of Greek politics hereinbefore mentioned, all that a mere American can do is to form his opinion of Venizelos on what the English police in the detective stories call "information received."

The Post-Impressionist's opinions of Venizelos are based on what he was told of the Cretan by Queen Olga of Greece. She was not without prejudice.

Will Sanctions Save The British Empire?

Certainly, Avers One Skilled Observer, The Old Imperial Idea "Is Dead As Mutton."

By Commander Stephen King-Hall.
Special Correspondence of The Post.

London.

A MONTH or so ago, American newspaper readers may have noticed in an obscure dispatch from South Africa reference to an outspoken speech delivered at the imperial press conference (then meeting at Cape Town) by Mr. C. Pirow, the minister of defense. I have just received the full text of the speech, and it deserves a wider publicity than it has so far received, because it crosses the t's and dots the i's as to what dominion status really means to the majority of the white population in South Africa.

Mr. Pirow explained that, while a direct vote of secession from the empire would meet with an absolutely negligible response, yet the South African government is not prepared to participate in any general scheme of imperial defense. He pointed out that, to the Afrikaans section of the population, "the Boer War is much fresher in recollection than in the minds of those who fought against us," and that in 1914 a prominent South African soldier (Gen. Brits) is said to have wired to Gen. Botha "Mobilization complete! Whom do we fight, English or Germans?"

MR. Pirow said that "against this historic background, if a war broke out and the government were to attempt rashly to commit us to any overseas adventure, I am afraid there would be large-scale disturbances, possibly even civil war." He then turned to the color question and declared that if in any other part of British Africa there was trouble which would probably mean an attack by the black on the whites, the Union forces would go to the assistance of the whites. He said that, in certain parts of Africa, the natives were being encouraged "to develop to be the equals of the Europeans."

In common with most people in the Union, he was definitely opposed to that policy and believed in allowing the native to develop "along his own lines and reach the highest state of civilization available to him, but at the same time to insist that the demands of white civilization shall remain paramount." No wonder that the natives of Basutoland and Swaziland view with anxiety the prospect of being transferred from the crown to the Union of South Africa!

Mr. Pirow evidently has forebodings that a tragedy is in the offing, for he admitted that no compromise seemed possible between these opposing views on the native question. When it is remembered that the rights of the black man were one of the chief causes of the Civil War in America, it seems that unless we are very careful torrents of blood may flow in Africa before the Negro's equality of status as a human being is established before God and man. That he will and must gain this status seems to me as certain as the fact that the sun will rise tomorrow.

• • • •

APART from the question of the social, political and economic position of the Negro in Africa, there is the equally difficult and even more delicate question of the status of the subjects of the future Dominion of India. And beyond India are the teeming millions of the Far East and the Dutch East Indies. In the course of his speech, the minister of defense remarked that South Africa gave no support to the British navy because the fleet did not exist to protect South Africa, but to protect British shipping and trade; and that, although incidentally South Africa derived some benefit from this circumstances, the navy derived "very substantial benefit from this circumstance the coast defenses and would derive still more if the Suez Canal should happen to be out of action.

He then turned to the question of the air, and announced that in buying airplanes the South African government would concentrate on machines which had real military value and that civil aviation would be largely and deliberately subordinated to military requirements. Such a policy, he admitted, might lead to difficulties in connection with the Imperial Air services to South Africa since the British government had a different policy.

Mr. Pirow said much else of the same nature and however much he startled some of them—and I am informed that the red-white-and-blue Imperialists present could scarcely believe their ears—it was all to the good that he should speak so bluntly, for he said things which although commonplace in South Africa are rarely heard in the mother country.

South Africans regard the union as an independent sovereign state which is prepared to be associated with certain other sovereign states in an organization known as the British Commonwealth of Nations, provided such association is compatible with South African national policies. But can anyone doubt what the result would be if it came to a choice between remaining in the Commonwealth and abandoning that way of differentiation against the native which is common ground—in principle at all events—to both the great South African parties?

• • • •

OLD TIMERS may feel that if such views on the nature of the imperial tie are widely held in the dominions overseas it must mean the end of the empire. Let such persons pull their heads out of the sands of the nineteenth century and be assured that with one exception (New Zealand) the independent attitude of South Africa's minister of defense is equally evident in the other dominions. The empire of the nineteenth century, the empire of which Mr. Kipling sang, the empire which was committed to the war on August 4, 1914, by Downing street, is as dead as New Zealand mutton.

It served its day, and we can salute its passing with respectful resignation while welcoming its successor. The empire now is on the eve of a new development whose final form will not be clear for many years.

The statute of Westminster endeavoured to define the equality of status of the "autonomous communities within the British Empire," but how these "equals" are to co-operate must be discovered by experiment. Co-operation implies certain common aims. What are the common aims of the component parts of the empire?

I can only feel sure of the existence of two, and of these two I am not sure that South Africa subscribes to more than one. The two are: the abolition of war as a means of settling disputes and the practical application of the principles of democracy. South Africa's native policy will have to be liberalized before I, for one, can share with my South African fellow citizens of empire a conviction that the ultimate test of human values lies in the works of men and not in their race or religion or color of skin.

This question apart, we are left with the remaining imperial objective—that is, the substitution of law for war as a method of settling international disputes. If such law is to be effective as a curb upon national aggressors, it must be reinforced by sanctions, and it is here that I see the central idea of the empire of the future.

In due course, we shall see established a world system of collective security in which international sanctions will stand behind international law. And it is because the empire peoples are the most law-loving and lawabiding in the world (as Miss Frances Perkins smilingly said to me in Washington last November) that the core of that system will be the British Commonwealth of Nations.

Peery Proclaims 'Safety' Sessions

Calls On 'Every Citizen' to Support Conference.

By the Associated Press.

Richmond, Va., March 13.—Gov. Peery today called upon civic, social, political, educational, business, commercial and industrial groups of the State to encourage attendance, participation and support for the State-wide safety conference to be held here May 15 and 16.

The Governor himself is general chairman of the conference and as such extended the invitation to "every citizen of Virginia."

The invitation was made in the form of a proclamation in which the Governor said "The loss of life, limb and property on our highways and streets, in our schools and homes and in our industrial and business plants is a tragic commentary on inefficiency and carelessness in life's everyday experiences and especially in the maintenance and operation of mechanical deviecs essential to the social order of this generation."

'Cat Burglar' Beats, Robs Woman Here

A "cat burglar" early yesterday entered the fifth-floor apartment of Miss Iona Davenport, in the 1200 block of Sixteenth street northwest, stole $90 while she slept, then beat her brutally, bruising her mouth and cheek.

The marauder is thought to have gone through a hallway and a bathroom to the veranda, and gained entrance through the French doors to Miss Davenport's sleeping quarters.

Miss Davenport, an employe of the Internal Revenue Bureau, said she did not get a good view of the intruder. Her cries aroused neighbors, who summoned police.

White Guard Avenger Doomed by the Reds

Armarvir, North Caucasian Area, U. S. S. R., March 13 (AP).—Alexander Balakhin, whose father and brother were executed for organizing a White Guard rebellion against the Bolsheviks in North Caucasus in 1918, was sentenced to death today, convicted of murdering two persons in avenging the 1918 executions.

Basil Nasirin, an accomplice, also was sentenced to death, and Martha Balikhin, mother of Balikhin, was sentenced to ten years in prison.

Language Again

By

Wm. Lyon Phelps

I SUPPOSE it is too much to ask for, but I wish we might follow the English people in the spelling of certain words; for in these particular words the difference in spelling indicates a difference in meaning; and it is a good thing to make distinctions whenever we can without any trouble. The words I have in mind are CHEQUE, STOREY, KERB, TYRE—used respectively and exclusively for bank paper, part of a house or building, the stone at the edge of a sidewalk, the tips of wheels of the automobile, or of other vehicles. It seems to me sensible to distinguish these differences from Check, Story, Curb, Tire.

• • • •

How do you pronounce the word TROTH—like BOTH or like BROTH? Either way is correct.

How do you pronounce DECADENCE and CONDOLENCE? The first word you may accent either on the first or second syllable, as you please; but Condolence only on the second.

Certain words you may spell correctly more than one way; but I prefer ASCENDANCY to ASCENDENCY and REPELLANT to REPELLENT, although with the second word I am in a hopeless minority.

You may spell PEDLAR or PEDDLER, but not PEDLER. I prefer PEDLAR. These are just matters of taste, like a necktie. But I really enjoy my preferences, as I do my neckties.

The pronunciation of words ending in ILE to rhyme with SMILE, is becoming steadily more common in the U. S. A. Many Americans have always said JuvenILE, but I never heard an American say MobILE; yet that is the way the Gilbert and Sullivan players pronounce it. The noun MissILE sounds decidedly queer; and although it is recommended by the broadcasters in Great Britain, it is not universal there.

• • • •

I must say I prefer ILE whenever we can decently say it; because that is the pronunciation of the vowel; and English is the only language in the history of the world that has the pronunciation of A. E, I, and U as we are taught it. Therefore, I shall always say HostILE.

How do you say the past tense of BROADCAST? Like the present tense, or BROADCASTED?

I am rather surprised that Webster admits this last form for radio work; better not. As we say, CAST; CAST; CAST; for present, past, and participle, it is better to follow that.

The first appearance of the world BROADCAST for radio work was in 1921.

Wilmer Asks Writ Against 11 Disqualifications.

By the Associated Press.

Chestertown, Md., March 13.—Philip G. Wilmer, candidate for mayor of Chestertown, today instituted proceedings to allow 71 citizens, disqualified for Monday's municipal election, to cast their ballots.

Wilmer filed with Robert A. Shallcross, clerk of the Kent County Circuit Court, a petition for an injunction, seeking to enjoin the supervisors from prohibiting these 71 citizens from voting. They had been disqualified for failure to pay their taxes.

The petition, filed against Lawrence G. Brown and William Malin, city supervisors of elections, is to be given a hearing Saturday at 10 a. m. by Associate Judges Thomas J. Keating, of Centerville, and Owen D. Knotts, of Denton.

Girl Victim of Crash Sues for $100,000

Unconscious for 17 days following a collision between a bus of the Peoples Rapid Transit Co. and an automobile in which she was a passenger at Berwyn, Md., Mary Seaford, a minor, through her father, Robert P. Seaford, 2908 Courtland place northwest, filed suit yesterday in the District Supreme Court for $100,000 damages.

Through Attorneys Ralph A. Cusick and A. L. Newmyer, the girl charged that the bus was being driven on the wrong side of the roadway when the accident occurred October 30, 1934. In addition to a fractured skull and concussion of the brain, the suit declared the girl had sustained almost a score of injuries that will permanently impair her health and appearance.

Irish Professor Has A Jolly Summer In Spain Among The Raggle-Taggle Gypsies.

By Theodore Hall.

"WHAT care I for a goose-feather bed,
With the sheet turned down so bravely, O!
For tonight I shall sleep in a cold, open field
Along with the raggle-taggled Gypsies, O!"

• • • •

Nine months of the year Walter Starkie is a Litt. D., a professor of Spanish in Dublin University, a corresponding member of the Spanish Academy, and an authority throughout scholastic circles on folklore and folk song.

The other three months you wouldn't know the portly little professor. With a twinkle in his eye, rough clothes on his back, a wine-skin over his shoulder and a beloved fiddle in his hand, he tramps over Europe in the pure role of a wandering minstrel. Prof. Starkie could fiddle the fish out of the sea, and when, at some street corner or cafe, he passes his tattered hat, the coins shower upon him. Then he dines on the finest in town. But, as sometimes happens, if his best tunes and jigs draw forth not a copper, he chews a crust and sleeps where he can in haymow, cave or field.

More important, his fiddle has a way into the hearts of all the people he meets. Blessed with a gift for languages, a good stock of Irish blarney, and a constant interest and curiosity in all manner of men, and damned, as he says, with the "tinker's curse" of roving, Prof. Starkie can take us on travels which we would never know without him. One summer he fiddled his way among the Gypsies of Hungary and Transylvania, and gave us a book called "Raggle-Taggle," which caused A. E. to remark that "Walter Starkie is one of the great contemporary creators."

Now, after a journey through northern Spain, he has written "Spanish Raggle-Taggle" (Dutton, $3.50)—as rich and delicious a travel book as I've ever seen.

AT FUENTERRABIA, just over the Spanish border on the Bay of Biscay, he fell in with a bustling and chatty little Spanish peddler. Manuel took complete charge of the incognito professor, walked him to San Sebastian, introduced him to a rare old codger named Lucas, who would, Manuel said, show him the ins and outs of the town. But old Lucas proved a bit cool. "What can I do?" he asked. "Why, I hardly make enough to keep body and soul together these days with Spain all reveulta as it is."

Starkie looked at the "glassy stare, the mahogany complexion, the raven-black hair" of the old man, recognized his race, and suddenly spoke up in Romany.

"Come now, plaloro, brother," he said, "you are going to help me, for I am one of the Cales (gypsies of Spain) and it is right for one of Egypt to help another."

"Mecli!" exclaimed Lucas. "May the sky fall upon me: so you are one of the roms: why didn't you say that before? I thought you were a white mouth: with that fair skin of yours you would never pass as a true-born son of Egypt!"

"Ah, brother, as they say abroad—a romi (gypsy woman) suckled me, and that is why I have wings. I can chamuyar Calo (speak Romany) as well as any chaval (youth) of Triana."

"Faith and you can, plaloro! Come, give me your hand. Let us drink confusion to the Busno (non-gypsies)!"

After that Lucas was as thick as thieves with the professor, showed him all the best places to play the fiddle, introduced him to Agustina, "Queen of the Gypsies," and got him well started on his journey in Spain.

• • • •

FROM the border down to Madrid, Prof. Starkie met such simple and charming adventures. An afternoon with Zuloaga, the great painter; the sprightly dancing girl, Marujita, and her old hag of a duenna; the smell of stewed rabbit coming out of a wayside hut and a self-invitation to dinner; argument with a Jesuit priest at the House of Loyola; the mass hysteria over visions of Our Lady on a hill at Ezquioga; basque sword dances, fiestas, gypsy camps and Benedictine monasteries—through all such scenes and encounters our merry professor went his way.

Not a pair of bright eyes, but he played the heart out of his fiddle and spouted with compliments. An old woman would fill his ear with gorgeous, traditional tales of the Spanish mountains. Almost any old Romany chal would warm up with brandy and red wine and tell him the most curious gypsy customs. With eyes and ears wide open, he made the most of this adventure in friendliness.

Curiously, the Spanish gypsies did not enjoy the quiet cantabile playing which so fascinated their Transylvanian cousins. They wanted noise and beat, and the more commotion they made while Prof. Starkie was playing the greater was the compliment to him. In his book he includes many a bar of music which holds the savor of Spain. There's also a map and a glossary of Spanish and Romany terms.

Altogether these pages alone would have made the lady in the old song run off with "the raggle-taggle gypsies." Will someone please sing that magical "O?"

Board Agrees After Plan for Rise Is Assailed.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Luray, Va., March 13.—Overwhelmed by demands that taxes should not be raised, the Page County Board of Supervisors, meeting in Luray yesterday, told 400 taxpayers it would let the rate for the last year prevail for the coming year.

Some of the citizens declared that if the tax rate were raised it meant the "paving of the way to rebellion in Page County." Every district in the county was represented in the meeting.

The board appropriated $400 for the purchase of police machine guns for the towns of Luray and Shenandoah. According to Supervisor W. N. Rogers, of Marksville district, the town of Stanley also wants machine guns for its force.

Propaganda!

IF HUEY LONG doesn't make the Senate funny enough the resolution of Upright George Norris yesterday to investigate the propaganda of the public utilities ought to do it.

BARGERON.

What will utterly baffle the ordinary man, however, is how on earth the Senate got onto it. Of course the Congress and the Washington newspaper corps have been flooded with this propaganda for several months, but that is no reason why the Senate should have come to know about it. And it is unquestionably a dastardly plot when men whose property is about to be confiscated set up a howl about it. They are not patriots, to say the least, because it stands to reason Mr. Roosevelt would not take their property were it not in the best interests of the body weal. In fact, he says as much.

There is reason to believe, however, that while Norris' resolution doesn't say so it is really intended to lift up the grade of propaganda and put it on a higher plane.

• • • •

If this is the purpose, if as the investigation proceeds there should be a comparison between propaganda of the utilities and that of Mr. Roosevelt, the move is decidedly unfriendly against the President. He will be shown in a most unfavorable light.

We students of propaganda, irrespective of the issue involved, have been making a close study of the power companies' fight against confiscation. All of their propaganda comes to our desk. And, of course, that of Mr. Roosevelt's does, too. If we were forced to make a comparative rating, we would have to give the power companies 100 and Mr. Roosevelt about 25 per cent.

The one very important difference is that we can tell exactly what the power companies are trying to do, and it is impossible to get more than the slightest idea of what Mr. Roosevelt has in mind.

• • • •

One thing about the power companies which seems very clear, which, in fact, they seem to be making no effort to disguise, is that they are trying to save their property. Now we will give five guesses, or even more, on what Mr. Roosevelt wants as revealed in his message to Congress.

At the end of it he makes a very profound statement about the need of returning the wealth from the financial centers to the communities which produce it. He would get a lot of followers on this even though we are, at this late day in his Administration, almost reform surfeit, if we could be convinced this is really what he has in mind. He can't mean this, though, because in a few days he will undoubtedly demand the continuance of the NRA, which represents a directly opposite trend.

Again he says those holding companies which are of the investment trust nature are all right. The power company wealth would remain in the financial centers just as much under investment trusts as under the holding companies.

And there is the question, too, if the return of wealth to local communities is what Mr. Roosevelt really wants, whether this would not now be a dirty trick after he has gotten us so deeply into debt. Cross Roads, Ga., and Podunk, Nebr., have been whole-heartedly for the $3,000,000,000 and $5,000,000,000 pork barrel expenditures on the theory that they would get a lot of the pork and that when it came time to pay the bill the financial East would have to do it. Now, for Mr. Roosevelt to spread the wealth around so they would have to pay the bill too, would seem to be a pretty mean thing to do.

But this can't be what he is up to. There are too many contradictions in his words and in his actions. He really can't have the feeling against holding companies which he professes to have because his Administration has taken out charters for six in Delaware. And one or two of them are holding companies for the power industry.

This raises the suspicion that what Mr. Roosevelt really has up his sleeve is ultimate Government ownership. That's what Norris wants and the whole business dates back to him—particularly to that beautiful spring afternoon in 19332 when the various gentlemen were setting about for the nominations in June.

In his spring reveries on this occasion Norris gave voice to very poetic thought. "What the country needs," he said, is another "Roosevelt." The power interests and a lot of others will agree that was one of the costliest bits of poetry the country has ever known.

Fire Damage Small In Burchell Building

Breaking out between the second and third floors of the Burchell Building, in the 800 block of Fourteenth street, a fire of undetermined origin yesterday halted noonday traffic in the vicinity of Fourteenth and H streets for nearly half an hour.

As about 500 persons watched, firemen broke through floors in the front end of the building combating the flames. Damage was estimated at $200.

Taft Suit Will Lead To Bar On Gold Suits

Roosevelt To Ask Congress To End Confusion In Wake Of Court's Opinions.

By Elliott Thurston.

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT will ask Congress to pass a bill or attach a rider to some pending measure for the purpose of closing the door to suits filed in the Court of Claims on Government gold-clause obligations. Presumably the President will confer further with the Attorney General and other legal advisers, as well as with leaders in Congress before sending up a special message recommending this step.

In any event it has become apparent that the Government is being forced to this action, not because inflation is contemplated of such a degree as to give rise to suits alleging loss of buying power in the dollar, but because of the embarrassments caused by the filing of suits such as the one by Robert A. Taft, and because of the need, sooner or later, to pave the way for stabilization of currencies.

The Taft suit offers the Administration a convenient reason or excuse for withdrawing the right to sue on the gold obligations. Not that the suit of itself is necessarily more than an ingenious effort to find a loophole for recovering damages. However, it serves to illustrate the harrassments to which the Government would always be exposed so long as the opportunity to devise and to file suits is open to the public. Other suits are evidently in contemplation, some by foreign holders of Government gold obligations.

As long as such suits are presented there is bound to be uncertainty and confusion. The Taft suit, for instance, could lead to highly awkward difficulties. Conceivably it might prevent the Government from carrying out its large, important and altogether desirable refinancing operations. And if it ever got up to the Supreme Court it might also lead to other complications.

• • • •

FOR example, four members of the court including the Chief Justice have held, in the Perry case, that a right to recovery of damages exists if loss can be shown on Government gold clause obligations. Just how that loss would be ascertained and measured is far from clear. Four other members of the court have said that the Government is obligated to pay out either gold or dollars at the rate of $1.69 for each $1 of face value of its gold clause obligations.

The ninth member of the court, Mr. Justice Stone, has held that the Government's obligation to make good on the gold clause is no greater than that of private individuals who, as the Chief Justice and three associates hold, are not obliged to pay more than $1 for each $1 of face value of their gold clause obligations.

Now in this posture of the court, who can say what the rule of recovery is? Certainly an opinion of four members is not an "opinion of the court," as this writer among others had too hastily assumed. There is much field for surmise in this matter, and the more it is pondered the more disposition there is to get back to Mr. Justice Stone's opinion which avoids these and other complications.

For instance, Mr. Justice Stone alluded to the difficulties which might arise under the recovery rule set up by the Chief Justice. Under this rule it appears that if the holder of a Liberty Bond can show that if paid in gold he could obtain more of a profit than if paid in dollars he has a legitimate suit. Now if the present restrictions on gold were removed as might be necessary under a stabilization agreement the holder of a Liberty Bond might very easily be able to show that he could profit more from getting gold than from getting dollars.

Likewise, as Mr. Justice Stone implied, if the Government found it advisable, as it very well might, to establish a free gold market, a similar showing of loss might be made and suits be in order under the rule of four members of the court.

• • • •

HOWEVER, as Mr. Justice Stone suggested, all these difficulties can be avoided by the Government through the exercise of its "undoubted power" to withdraw the privilege of suit on its gold-clause obligations. Moreover, as Mr. Justice Stone viewed it, since the Government has this undoubted power to withdraw the privilege of suit it is futile, to say the least, for the court to attempt to hold the Government, under whatever recovery rule is set up, to performance of an obligation which can be avoided by this means.

Still further, by taking this attitude, Mr. Justice Stone places the moral responsibility squarely on the shoulders of the Congress and the Administration, where it belongs. For if there has been or is to be a repudiation of an obligation the initiative and hence the moral responsibility rest with the Government. The court admittedly can not stay it.

It is only after considering all these matters that the Administration has concluded that the simplest thing to do is to end the uncertainty once and for all by withdrawing the privilege of suit. While this is open to the interpretation that the Government foresees an inflation which would depreciate the dollar to a point where loss of buying power could be shown and suit filed under the rule of four members of the court, such is not the case. The action would be taken, not in anticipation of inflation, but simply to avoid the harrassment of suits like that filed by Mr. Taft and the embarrassments and complications of which Mr. Justice Stone took note.

And if Mr. Roosevelt, in a special massage, saw fit to stress the point that the step is incidentally taken in expectation or hope of ultimate stabilization, this would be altogether reassuring. Inadvertently, perhaps, Mr. Taft may have done the Administration a service by furnishing the occasion to take a step that had to be taken ultimately, in view of the confusions created by the diversity of opinion in the court and the openings afforded for this and similar embarrassing suits.

That $5,000 House Program.

Huey Long's new slogan is: "Every man a king, and no king in a furnished room!" And every landlord a deuce!

• • • •

The Kingfish promises every family a $5,000 house with southern exposure, a bigger rocking chair for popper and Government assistance in mowing the lawn.

• • • •

That's only a beginning. If Huey's All Done by Mirrors Party gets in the saddle it may also throw in a pool table, an outdoor swimming pool and free sunburn lotion.

• • • •

Huey is out to end all worries. He will even choose your wallpaper, help select your linoleum and tell you where to put the rubber plant.

• • • •

Nobody will be exempt. Even if you're the type that likes to spend your nights in somebody's barn and your days in front of the firehouse, you're entitled to a nice five-room bungalow, and you'll have to take it. Huey is going to make it illegal to be a gypsy.

• • • •

In addition to being handed a house and lot, every man will be guaranteed $2,500 a year and his children given a college education and a raccoon coat.

• • • •

Everybody is taken care of except mother. There's nothing in the plan to indicate that she won't still be expected to wash the dishes.

• • • •

Getting the money is to be very simple. Everybody will register a statement of possessions and Huey will take everything above the first couple of million. "Let's suppose Henry Ford has $2,000,000,000," says Huey. "He could hold $4,000,000 and we would take $1,996,000,000 for distribution to those who need it."

• • • •

• • • •

Mr. Ford's plans have not been revealed, but he would probably take one of Huey's $5,000 bungalows and let Huey make the Fords from that time on.

• • • •

Every big employer in the country would be given the same dry cleansing. This would settle everything except the problem of getting America out of bed before noon, once it has no further obligations or ambitions.

• • • •

That'll be okay. When Huey finishes making every American a Cinderella it will be unconstitutional to have any ambitions anyhow.

• • • •

Huey, we'll take one of those rambling houses with cigar lighter attached. And if you have anything to do with it, it will certainly ramble.

His Concern.

There's a cloud troubles me as I watch
Our political magic so deft;
Oh, it's not all those swings left or right—
No! I shy from the rush for what's left!

Sir Malcolm Campbell drove an automobile 276 miles an hour the other day, proving that there is still one automobile driver who picks a beach when he wants to go that fast instead of a public street.

If any work is to be done in America after every man gets a $5,000 house there had better be a law eliminating sun porches.

The Battle of the Century will come the day somebody really gets around to making a Scotch millionaire industrialist turn over most of what he has made to the government for general distribution.

Recalling the "good old days" when they roamed various campuses as undergraduates will be Secretary of the Interior Harold L. Ickes, Jouett Shouse, Senator Thomas Connally, of Texas; Representative William Bankhead, of Alabama, and Representative Royal C. Johnson, of South Dakota.

Other notables attending will include Rear Armiral De Steiguer, U. S. N.; Gen. Chester Harding, U. S. A.; Director Eugene Vidal, of the Bureau of Air Commerce, and Col. Ross E. Rowell, U. S. M. C.

Roberts Allays Fears Of Harsh Smoke Laws

Fears of the Manor Park Citizens Association that the proposed smoke law might unduly harass home owners, were allayed yesterday by People's Counsel William A. Roberts, who said that any regulation made under the law must be reasonable.

Any requirement which would be reasonable in the case of business houses, he said, would be unreasonable when applied to private dwellings.

Reynolds Kin Want Divorce Ignored in Suit

Estate Fight Settled Without Ruling Upon Validity of Decree.

By the Associated Press.

Winston-Salem, N. C., March 13. The Reynolds family sought today to eliminate the question of validity of Anne Cannon Reynolds' divorce from young Smith Reynolds in disposing of the young tobacco heir's large estate.

"My clients," said H. G. Hudson, attorney for the Reynolds family, "do not care to have that question determined. We ask you to pass upon the settlement without going into that issue."

He was arguing before Superior Judge Clayton Moore in favor of the settlement proposed by the Reynolds family. The former Anne Cannon, who is seeking the full estate for herself and child, raised the question of validity of her Mexico divorce.

Despite the fact that she married R. Brandon Smith, of Charlotte, after her divorce from Reynolds, the tobacco heir's first wife contends her divorce was invalid and that she is the lawful widow of the young sportsman who died of an unexplained bullet wound at his home near here in 1932.

Contends She Was Ill.

Both she and Reynolds were minors when the divorce was granted and she contends she was ill and not in full possession of her mental faculties.

Hudson asserted that young Reynolds, within two months after the birth of Baby Anne Cannon Reynolds 2d sought legal advice upon disinheriting his wife and child.

As early as October, 1930—the Reynolds-Cannon divorce was granted in November, 1931, and six days later he married Miss Holman—Reynolds said in writing that he intended to make a will and cut off his family, Hudson said.

He recalled that Reynolds did make a will in New York in 1931, leaving the two only $50,000 each.

Parents Aid in Will Fight.

Joined with Reynolds' first wife, the former Anne Cannon, in the fight for the entire estate are her father and mother, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph F. Cannon, members of a wealthy textile manufacturing family.

Standing with the Reynolds family in the litigation are Libby Halmon, Broadway actress and Reynolds' second wife, and the Cabarrus Bank & Trust Co., coguardian with Mrs. J. E. Cannon of 4-year-old Anne.

When court was recessed until tomorrow, A. L. Brooks, representing Mrs. Cannon, and the fourth attorney to present arguments, was being heard. Six or more attorneys remain to be heard after he concludes.

The settlement the Reynolds family wishes approved would give Baby Anne Reynolds 37½ per cent of the estate; Christopher Reynolds, infant son of Libby Holman, 25 per cent, less $750,000 for his mother, and the remaining 37½ per cent to Reynolds' brother, R. J. Reynolds, jr., and his sisters, Mrs. Charles Babcock and Mrs. Henry W. Bagley, for use in founding a charitable trust.

Court Extends Time For Dividend Payment

Richmond, Va., March 13 (AP).—An extension until March 28 of the court order requiring directors of the Virginia-Carolina Chemical Corporation to pay dividens on the 7 per cent preferred stock, amounting to approximately $380,000, has been granted by Judge Ernest H. Wells, of Hustings Court, part 2.

Officers of the company have declared they will not appeal the court ruling, but individual directors may appeal or ask a rehearing. They were individually made parties to the action brought by George S. Kemp and other stockholders, that resulted in the dividend order.

Boy Pallbearers Bury Chum Whom They Burned at Stake

By the United Press.

Caps off, tears in their eyes, a look of bewilderment on each of their faces, the juvenile pallbearers carried the white coffin of their 9-year-old pal from hearse to open grave, and then lowered it themselves with straps slung beneath it while a Polish priest intoned a last prayer.

There had been snow flurries during the funeral procession, but as the casket was lowered the sun broke through the leaden sky.

Solemnly a spade was passed from hand to hand among the six pallbearers—Joe Newell, Walt Basuik, Henry Laurski, Eddie Basuik, Bobby Dobryznski and Vetold Zobloski—and each in turn cast a sprinkling of earth into the grave. Then Michael Smith, shoe worker and father of the victim, took the spade and did likewise, and after him every man and boy among the 150 mourners tossed a spadeful of earth onto the coffin, in accordance with Polish custom.

There, the six boys who tied Eddie to a tree last Saturday and built a fire at his feet, a fire which they could not control, were urged by the Rev. William F. Maciaszek in his funeral sermon to learn a lesson from the tragedy.

Though still under investigation, Eddie's death has been declared an accident. But his dying words—that his playmates had dragged him to the tree against his will—so embittered his mother that she first refused to allow the boys to serve as pallbearers. Only after the priest had pleaded wtih her did she capitulate.

Ten other schoolmates walked behind the hearse as it traveled from church to cemetery.

Analysis of Liquor Planned for Trials

May Settle Legal Battles in Winchester.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Winchester, Va., March 13.—As a result of legal maneuvering for the advantage in liquor hearings following raids here during the past several days, it is not improbable, court observers declare, that in future hearings, analysis of liquor to determine whether it is legal will be the trump card of both defense and prosecution.

The conclusion is based on an appeal noted yesterday in the case of George Hott, who was found guilty of a charge of possessing illegal liquor and who was fined $100 and costs and sentenced to six months in jail. One of the grounds on which J. Sloan Kuykendall, Hott's attorney, based his appeal was that the acts adopted in 1934 do not define legal liquor and, further, that the liquor seized on Hott's premises had not been proven illegal liquor.

"It will only result in the 'ante' being raised," one official said, in commenting on the difficulty in obtaining convictions and the probable resort to analysis of liquor. He meant that the cost of the analysis of liquor would be added to the costs of the case, for those guilty.

U. S. Lawyers Dig for Proof In Mellon Case

Contracts in Acquisition of Steel Company Are Put in Records.

By the Associated Press.

Pittsburgh, March 13.—Attorneys for the Government spent another day piecing together the intricate pattern of negotiations and transactions by which they claim Andrew W. Mellon evaded payment of income taxes in 1931.

Details of contracts involved in the acquisition of the McClintic-Marshall Corporation, a $64,000,000 steel fabricating concern, by the Bethlehem Steel Corporation were put into the records.

It was a continuation of a story which may take days more to complete, by which Government counsel are trying to prove the transaction was a sale, and not a merger, and that it therefore was taxable.

Petition for Refund.

The Tax Appeals Board is hearing Mellon's petition for a refund of $139,000, as against the Government's assessment of $3,089,000 which it claims he still owes.

Two witnesses were on the stand during the day, Earle J. Patterson, secretary-treasurer of McClintic-Marshall, and A. J. Slater, assistant secretary.

Both answered a long line of questions by F. R. Shearer, attorney for the Internal Revenue Bureau, tracing the contracts in the transaction.

Grace Negotiates.

From Patterson it was learned that the deal nearly fell through late in 1930. He testified, in answer to questions, that C. D. Marshall, the president of the company, told him of the situation in October, 1930, and that Eugene Grace, Bethlehem's president, made several trips to Pittsburgh to patch up the negotiations. The acquisition by Bethlehem was completed on February 10, 1931.

Slater said that Bethlehem gave 240,000 shares of Bethlehem stock, which then had a market value of about $58 a share, and 8,200,000 par-value 4½ per cent certified bonds to complete the deal.

In cross-examination, Shearer sought to bring out that some of the transactions were directly between McClintic-Marshall and Bethlehem subsidiaries.

Glenn Dale Hospital Nearly at Capacity

The Children's Tuberculosis Hospital at Glenn Dale, Md., almost has reached its bed capacity of 150 children, it was reported yesterday to the Board of Public Welfare by Dr. Daniel L. Finucane, superintendent of the hospital.

The institution was opened in September. Work was started in February on the construction of the addition which will double the capacity of the institution. The addition will be completed by October.

Actor Dies of 'Mike Fright'

Vaudeville Performer in His First Broadcast Starts to Tell of the Evils of Gambling and Falls to Floor.

By the Associated Press.

Bluefield, W. Va., March 13. George Washington Bonner, 56, of Pittsfield, Mass., a vaudeville performer billed as "Kid" Canfield, nervously faced the microphone in a radio station last night for his first broadcast.

He told his audience "Gambling does not pay," and he had known and gambled with the late Arnold Rothstein, of New York, Jack Diamond, Al Capone and others.

"Boys, let me tell you a story——" Bonner said tremulously.

He clutched the microphone and fell to the floor, dead.

Employes of the radio station, operated by the Daily Telegraph Printing Co., expressed the opinion a heart attack was induced by "fright" displayed by Bonner in his first radio talk.

Mining Folk Weep At 'Baby Doe' Rites

Leadville, Colo., March 13.—Roughly clad mining gentry and city folk who knew "Baby Doe" Tabor as the golden-haired belle of the mining camps more than a half century ago jammed the little Church of the Annunciation today for her funeral.

Down Harrison avenue, where all eyes turned for a glimpse of her loveliness 51 year ago, when she was the pampered bride of Colorado's mining king, H. A. W. Tabor, the funeral cortege wound its way.

Father E. L. Horgan recited requiem mass. He delivered no eulogy. Tears marked the faces of many stout miners and women of the mining camps who attended.

The only relative at the funeral was Willard McCourt, of Denver, a brother. He said the body would be placed in a Denver vault to remain until the casket of H. A. W. Tabor can be exhumed in abandoned Calvary Cemetery, at Denver. The Tabors then will be buried side by side in Mount Olivet.

Funeral Rites Today For Mrs. Mary Cooksey

Funeral services for Mrs. Mary Ryon Cooksey, 88, who died Tuesday at her home, 6512 Summit avenue, will be held at her residence today at 2:30 p. m., followed by burial in Congressional Cemetery.

Mrs. Cooksey, widow of John Cooksey, Washington contractor who died in 1919, was born in Prince Georges County, Md., in 1846. She is survived by four children.

Indiana Woman, 102, Dies; 96 Survivors

Tulsa, Okla., March 13 (AP).—Mrs. Mary Jane Hodges, of mixed Cherokee and Creek Indian blood, died of pneumonia today at the age of 102. Her allotment of 160 acres from the Federal Government was in the heart of what is now Tulsa.

Survivors include a son, four daughters, 42 grandchildren, 44 great-grandchildren and five great-great-grandchildren.

State Senator Boyd Dead at Norristown

Norristown, Pa., March 13 (AP). State Senator James S. Boyd, five times member of the State Legislature, died in a hospital today of bronchial pneumonia.

Senator Boyd was ill for several days and had been placed in an oxygen tent.

REV. CHARLES E. COUGHLIN HUEY PIERCE LONG HUGH S. JOHNSON

ALL ABOUT ALL THREE

Here are three fighting men. Their weapons are words and ideas—ideas about how this country shall be governed, for whom and by whom. Perhaps their warfare is unimportant. Perhaps it does not matter which wins over the others, for America may reject all three. But right now the battle line seems clearly drawn, between the New Deal as it is and a Newer Deal as Long and Coughlin would like to see it. The result of the battle may affect the course of your life.

To understand their goals you must understand these men. How did they start? What has their past life been? What influences have shaped their minds?

In a series of articles now appearing in The Washington Daily News the stories of Coughlin, of Long, of Johnson are given in detail. Read these articles. They will enable you to understand the men whose conflict may be shaping the destiny of the Nation.

IS JOHNSON A COLUMNIST?

The general wants to be a columnist. He thinks he can do what Heywood Broun does—give readers something to think about each day. He can write; that is certain. Does he have something to say?

Beginning today, and until further notice, The Washington Daily News will publish a daily column by General Johnson. Read his first column today and let The News know what you think of it.

Move Expected In Power Plant Licensing Case

Court Action Predicted to Force Federal Permit for Radford Works.

By the Associated Press.

Court action to force the Appalachian Electric Power Co. to obtain a Federal Power Commission license for its big Radford (Va.) hydroelectric plant on New River was predicted last night in informed quarters.

An authoritative source said a mandamus would be asked in Federal court in an effort to bring to an end the 8-year-old controversy over whether the Federal commission or the Commonwealth of Virginia has authority over the stream that is to generate the power.

The proceedings are expected to be instituted in the Western Judicial District of Virginia. Similar steps already have been taken in West Virginia against the Union Carbide & Carbon Co. and its subsidiary, the Electro-Metallurgical Co., which has completed a generating plant at Hawks Nest, W. Va., also on New River, downstream from Radford.

The Appalachian, or "first New River," case has been before the Power Commission since 1927 and for most of that time has been in litigation. Following a commission order in 1931 to require the company to obtain a major license, the company sought in Federal court to have the Power Commission restrained from that purpose.

The major license would have given the Power Commission access to the company's books and supervision over its issuances of securities.

The restraining order against members of the commission was thrown out by the circuit court of appeals on jurisdictional grounds after Judge Luther B. Way, of Norfolk, in district court, made a decision favorable to the Government.

J. W. Pruryear, 88, Buried; Served With Mosby's Cavalry

S. H. Young, 104, Oldest Confederate Pensioner, Dies at Home.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Gordonsville, Va., March 13.—John Wesley Pruryear, 88, one of the last survivors of the famous Mosby cavalry troop of the Civil War, was buried here. He died at his home at Louisa. He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Nellie McComb Pruryear, and two sons of a former marriage.

Mr. Pruryear was one of the last of the colorful group that flocked to the banner of Mosby.

Taken captive in the early part of the war, he escaped death when he was ordered hanged for not divulging military secrets. As the noose was tightened around his neck and he was drawn into the air, the cry went up in camp that Mosby and his men "were coming down the hill." To his death he carried the scar of the rope on his neck.

Later during the conflict he was with Mosby on the historically famous Greenback Raid, in which Government bonds valued at $168,000 were seized. He is mentioned in the volume, "Partisan Life With Mosby," published in 1867 by John Scott.

Mrs. Fluharty Awarded Estate Of Louis Carr

Court Ends Long Dispute by Denying Claim of Church Society.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Salisbury, Md., March 13.—Concluding litigation of more than five years' duration, instructions have been sent from circuit court here to the Orphans' Court of Dorchester County that the estate of Louis M. Carr should be awarded to Lavinia M. Fluharty, of Philadelphia, and not a church society as provided in a paper purporting to be Carr's last will.

The value of the estate was estimated at $35,000 to $40,000 by Edward D. McCoy, executor.

The jury answered "yes" to two questions framed by the court inquiring if the alleged will was procured "by undue influence exercised and practiced" upon Carr, and if the writing purporting to be the will was procured by fraud.

The alleged will filed after the death June, 1929, of Carr, well-to-do land owner, named as sole beneficiary the board of church extension and home missions of the Church of God of Anderson, Ind.

Probation of the will was contested by Mrs. Fluharty as the nearest relative. Twice the case was heard by a jury in court here and twice taken to the Maryland Court of Appeals. It was docketed for a third trial at the current sitting of circuit court, when agreement was reached by the litigants accepting the award to Mrs. Fluharty by the jury at the last trial.

Sister Yvonne Boasts Another Dionne Tooth

Callander, Ont., March 13 (AP).—Another Dionne tooth came into being today when what was technically described as a lower central incisor pierced its way through the gums of Yvonne. Yvonne's tooth ran a close second to that discovered yesterday in the lower jaw of Annette.

They and their sisters, Emile, Cecile and Marie, are 9 months and 13 days old today.

Confederate Veteran, 104, Dead in Virginia

By the Associated Press.

Richmond, Va., March 13.—The death of Samuel H. Young, 104, at the R. E. Lee Camp Soldiers Home here, removed today the name of the oldest Confederate veteran on the State's pension rolls.

Mr. Young, who was born July 4, 1830, in Franklin County, probably was the oldest former soldier of the famous Army of Northern Virginia.

Welfare Group Names Officers

Fred L. Lutes Is Elected Advisory Committee Chairman.

Fred L. Lutes, cashier of the Silver Spring National Bank, has been elected chairman of the central advisory committee of the Montgomery County Welfare Board, it was announced yesterday by Miss Dorothy A. Everson, executive secretary of the board.

Judge Donald A. DeLashmutt, of the county police court, was elected vice chairman and Mrs. R. E. Vierling, secretary.

The welfare board met in the afternoon and discussed the relief work program with Frank Dryden, State engineer of the Maryland Emergency Relief Administration, and Robert Van Hyning, MERA field supervisor for Montgomery County.

The monthly report of Miss Everson showed that 921 families received relief in February. There were 312 new applicants for relief, of whom 162 were granted assistance, while 536 families received relief through employment on work relief projects. A committee from the Montgomery County Farm Bureau met with the board's representatives to discuss wages for relief work and other relief problems affecting the farmer.

Housing Spurs Business Soon, Says President

States the FHA Program Will Generate Trade; Jobs This Spring.

"I agree with you that the refunding of existing mortgages, in long-term amortized mortgages insured under the national housing act, will result in a safer mortgage structure for the country and will result in a much-needed impetus to home construction, with a resultant tremendous demand for durable goods and labor, invaluable benefits to business and the community in general."

The President's letter, together with an accompanying note by Mr. Moffett, was mailed out last night to chairmen of the community committees. In his note Mr. Moffett declares that "a tremendous line-up of irresistible power" has been organized "to make the program the fountain head of American prosperity."

At the RFC, meantime, officials were working on the procedure under which the new mortgage company will make loans. According to Chairman Jesse H. Jones, the RFC will not invade the territory of the FHA, but will devote its attention to relieving holders of mortgages on business property, such as hotels and office buildings.

In addition to the mortgage corporation, the RFC is framing regulations under which it hopes to participate in the creation of new private mortgage companies. Under authority granted by Congress, the RFC can invest up to $100,000,000 in the stock of such companies, and, in addtiion, can lend them further amounts as needed.

The Reconstruction Finance Corporation was attacked in the House yesterday by Representative Melvin J. Maas (Republican), of Minnesota, who declared it is run by "a bunch of bureaucrats" who failed in private business, the Associated Press reported. He charged that the RFC is stifled "under the domination of chain banks and the Federal Reserve system."

Bureau Weighs Poultry Bills

Legislation affecting the poultry industry was discussed yesterday by the directors of the Montgomery County Farm Bureau. The group voted to petition State Senator Stedman Prescott to support both bills now pending.

A resolution was adopted favoring a wage scale for emergency relief clients which would be less than the prevailing wage scale paid by industry in the area affected. Copies were ordered sent Relief Administrator Hopkins, Secretary Wallace, the secretary of the Maryland Farm Bureau Federation, and secretaries of other county organizations.

The directors opposed a plan to cut the appropriation made to the seed inspection laboratory of the University of Maryland, feeling any slash would impair the service.

Many Florists Attend Course

Annual Two-Day Program of Talks at Maryland U. Under Way.

Six States and the District of Columbia were represented yesterday among the registrations at the opening of University of Maryland's annual florists' short course. Approximately 75 persons registered.

The opening session of the two-day course, designed to aid professional florists, was listed as "Growers' Day." Joseph S. Merritt presided. The course is sponsored by the horticultural department of the university.

Dr. E. N. Cory, agricultural specialist at the university, opened the meetings with a talk on "Results of Tests of Insecticides. Walter J. Engel, of Columbus, Ohio, discussed "Rotation of Crops in the Greenhouse."

At the afternoon session an address on "Nutrients and How They Affect the Plant" was given by Alex Laurie, of Ohio State University. A dinner was held at 6 p. m. in the horticultural building.

Mr. Engel opened the night session at 7 o'clock with a talk on "Potted Plants." Mr. Laurie spoke on "New Developments in Floriculture." Today, "Retailers' Day," will include instruction in the floral laboratory.

Son Describes Fatal Shooting Of His Father

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Woodstock, Va., March 13.—Shenandoah County's first murder trial in more than five years got under way today.

The Commonwealth is asking a verdict of murder in the second degree against James A. Smith, accused of killing Peter Cook, his 70-year-old neighbor, last November.

Much time has been taken by both defense and State in a discussion of a discarded lard forkin that caused the quarrel between the men which resulted in Cook's death. According to evidence, the two men fought before the fatal shots were fired, and allegedly Cook struck Smith over the eye with an ear of corn, cutting him severely.

Three shots were fired into the body of Cook, Dr. William C. Ford, Shenandoah County coroner, testified, adding any of them could have caused death.

Lew Cook, who was an eyewitness to the slaying, stated that after the first shot his father started to fall and he caught him. Smith fired two more bullets into Cook as he lay in his son's arms, the son declared. It was pointed out Cook and Smith had not been on good terms for some time prior to the killing, a dispute having arisen over a boundary line between the two farms.

The courtroom was packed, the spectators standing six deep against the wall in the rear of the room. Mrs. Smith was by her husband's side throughout the trial today and was in tears on several occasions. It is expected the defense will present its side of the case late tomorrow. Twenty-three witnesses have been summoned by Smith.

It was pointed out today that Cook's clothes caught fire after the shooting and his body was charred. The origin of the fire is undetermined.

Levay Declared Election Victor

By the Associated Press.

Annapolis, Md., March 13.—John J. Levay, Democrat, late today was declared elected to the board of county commissioners of Anne Arundel County, following a recount of the votes cast last November in 13 of the county's 36 polling places.

The recount showed that Levay, a former mayor of Annapolis, had defeated T. Roland Brown, Republican, by 23 votes, for the seventh seat on the board. Both were tied at the end of the official convass after the election, each having 7,512 votes.

The report, made today by Chief Judge F. Neal Parke and Associate Judge Henry Forsythe, of the Fifth Judicial Circuit, to Frank A. Munroe, clerk of the circuit court, showed Levay's vote was 7,443 and Brown's 7,420.

The recount was ordered by the circuit court judges after both candidates had made charges of irregularities in certain precincts of the county during the election.

2 Held at Woodstock On Auto Theft Charge

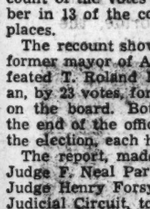
Woodstock, Va., March 13.—Joseph I. Falice, of Baltimore, and John McLaughlin, of Boston, are in the Shenandoah County Jail here charged with stealing at Pulsaki an automobile which belonged to Mrs. George S. Dunn. The arrest was made by State Trooper C. L. Fuller, following a chase in which the stolen car skidded into a ditch on the United States Highway No. 11.

Officer Fuller received a message from Mount Jackson where the pair obtained gasoline at a service station and fled without paying. It was not until the trooper lodged the pair in jail here that he dsicovered the car they were operating was stolen. Officers from Pulaski will arrive here tomorrow to return them for trial, it was said.

"ALL THE FUN WAS GONE OUT OF LIFE"

says middle aged woman

Many women suffer from hot flashes, dizzy spells, nervousness and other annoying symptoms of the Change of Life. They get so blue and discouraged that life does not seem worth living.*



Mrs. Matushek

"All the fun was gone out of life," complains Mrs. S. Matushek of 10907 Edbrooke Ave., Chicago. For five years I was going through a very bad time. I was nervous, had terrible headaches, could not climb stairs and felt swollen. Your Vegetable Compound worked wonders for me. It is a great medicine for any time of life, but especially at the Change and before motherhood. My daughter Lucille used to faint at the office. Your medicine helped her and helped my daughter-in-law too."

"I Had Awful Hot Spells" says Mrs. Harry H. Price of 304 No. Harrison Ave., Kankakee, Illinois. "The Vegetable Compound puts pep into me and makes my work easy."

Social and Club Notes

Of Towns and Cities in Nearby States

By Elisabeth C. Taylor.

The Virginia State Narcissus Show, which will be held at the Armory in Alexandria, Va., April 11 and 12, with Mrs. Richard Wainwright, jr., as chairman, and Mrs. Richard Hammett as co-chairman, promises to be an event of unusual interest. Heretofore there have been two narcissus shows in Virginia, one in the northern and one in the southern part of the State. This spring there will be one State show in which all amateur narcissus growers are invited to participate.

It is expected that every Garden Club in Virginia will be represented and that narcissus growers in many nearby States also will exhibit. All amateur gardners have been invited to enter their prize blooms.

The Virginia Narcissus Show was first held in Charlottesville in 1931. Alexandria was the scene of the show for the next two years. In 1934 there was no general show due to weather conditions.

It was a part of the ideas of the originators to have open the beautiful Narcissus Test Gardens which may be seen during Virginia Garden week, April 22-27, at Stoke, Aldie, Va., home of Mrs. Floyd Harris.

Miss Hilda Lingamfelter will be chairman of a meeting of the Business and Professional Women's Club of Martinsburg, W. Va., today. The meeting, which will have current events of the day as a topic, will be held at 6:30 p. m. in the clubroom.

The Urbana Women's Club of Frederick, Md., will meet today. Mrs. Biggs Elliott will be hostess.

Mrs. Raymond Ballenger is leader of the meeting of the Bunker Hill Women's Club of Martinsburg, W. Va., which is scheduled to meet today. Miss Hattie S. Tabb is hostess.

For the second time in five weeks the Business and Professional Women's Club of Staunton, Va., presented a Tom Thumb wedding. The entertainment included piano solos by young pupils presented by Miss Allene Brewster and Miss Rebecca Borden.

The last meeting featured crime prevention. Each member was required to bring a short item with regard to the fate of some well-known gangster. Speeches by prominent members of the city's police force gave an outline of the prevention of crime.

Plans have been perfected by the Fredericksburg (Va.) Women's Club for the entertainment of Mrs. Grace Morrison Poole, president of the General Federation of Women's Clubs, who will address the Fredericksburg club March 22. About 20 other women's clubs have been invited to attend the entertainment, which will include a luncheon at the Stratford Hotel, a tour of historic places in Fredericksburg and tea which will be served in the spacious rooms at Keenmore by members of the Fredericksburg Club.

County Unit Planned By Milk Distributors

Producer-distributers of milk for Montgomery County, Md., will meet Monday at 2 p. m. in the commissioners' hearing room at the courthouse in Rockville, Md., to discuss formation of a county producer-distributer group.

Suggestion for forming such a group was made at a meeting held recently to discuss the milk commission bill and the organization meeting has been arranged by O. W. Anderson, county farm agent.

Debt Transfer Authorized.

Richmond, Va., March 13 (AP).—The State Corporation Commission today authorized the Virginia Public Service Co. to assume bonded indebtedness of the Loudoun Light & Power Co. to the extent of $42,500. The petitioning company stated it was sole owner of an equity in the Loudoun concern.

Pastor Sees 'Evil' In Cocktail Hour

Practice Is Great 'Threat,' Y.M.C.A. Group Told.

By the Associated Press.

Lynchburg, Va., March 13.—The cocktail hour was deplored as "the greatest threat that has come with the revival of the liquor traffic" by Dr. John Buchanan, pastor of the First Baptist Church, in an address here last night.

It is, the minister told 100 Y. M. C. A. members gathered for a Brunswick stew, "a deadly, dangerous practice that has crept into our homes.

"Human experience has taught us that oftentimes this social participation in intoxicants is the beginning of a habt of dissipation and intemperance that leads to the wreckage and ruin of human life."

MAYFAIR Restaurant

D. C. Colony Established In Bermuda

Audrey Campbell Takes House; Entertains Several Guests.

Others Planning Visit When Season Ends in Florida.

By Evelyn Peyton Gordon.

After the Florida season closes, members of Washington society who still seek sunshine will go to Bermuda, where at Easter time they will find beautiful weather. Besides the blue sea, the coral pink houses and the dazzling white beaches, there will be the profusion of Easter lilies for which the island is famous at that time of year.

Already several members of the younger set are there, and still others are on their way. Miss Audrey Campbell, niece of Mrs. Joseph Leiter and daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Colin Campbell, has been there for a week or more and has taken a house, where she has a number of guests. After a strenuous winter in Washington, where she was one of the most popular members of the smart younger set, Miss Campbell decided to take a holiday in Southern climes. With her went pretty Miss Eleanor Roosevelt, daughter of the Assistant Secretary of the Navy and Mrs. Henry Latrobe Roosevelt. The party waited until after the wedding on March 2 of Miss Patience McCormick-Goodhart and Mr. James McMilian Gibson, in which Miss Roosevelt was a bridesmaid, and sailed early the next week for Bermuda.

House Is Near Water.

Mrs. Kenna Elkins and her young son, Mr. Stephen B. Elkins 3d, are among the guests of Miss Campbell, and others are Miss Gertrude Webb and Miss Elizabeth Spiese. Miss Campbell's house, at Pembroke, is a delightful place, built in the usual rambling style, with a patio and is near the water.

Mr. and Mrs. Dean Acheson are also among the Bermuda sojourners, as are Mrs. Malcolm McConihe and her son, Mr. Moran McConihe. The latter has recuperated from a serious operation. Mr. and Mrs. McConihe have sold their home on Kalorama road to Col. Armstead, who until the last few weeks occupied the beautiful estate of Mr. Oscar T. Crosby, Viewtree, near Warrenton, Va. Mr. Crosby is abroad, but plans to return in the late spring to pass the summer in his country home.

For the last two years the McConihe home on Kalorama road has been occupied by the Secretary of the Treasury and Mrs. Henry A. Morgenthau, jr., who will move in June when Col. Armstead and his sister, Mrs. Armstead Davis, take possession.

Shouse Girls Sail.

The two daughters of Mrs. Lawrence Groner, Miss Marion and Miss Elizabeth Shouse, sailed yesterday for Bermuda, where they probably will see a great deal of Miss Campbell and the members of her party.

The "Shouse girls" as they are called, had planned to sail for Europe last month with Mrs. Joseph Bradley and her daughter, Miss Mary Parrish Bradley. However, the illness of Mrs. Bradley forced them to give up their plan, and a trip to Bermuda seemed the most consoling thing they could do. They are now making plans for the late summer, when they expect to join the party of Col. Harry N. Cootes, who with Mrs. Cootes and their daughter, Miss Mary Cootes, will start for China to pass several months.

The Shouse girls have not yet decided whether they will linger in the Orient and return via the Pacific or return by way of Europe.

Mr. and Mrs. G. Thomas Dunlop will leave in the near future for the West Coast and will sail for China to attend the marriage of their daughter, Miss Katharine Dunlop, to Mr. Langhorne Bond, in Peiping. The engagement was announced Sunday, and at that time Mr. and Mrs. Dunlop were not certain they would be able to make the trip. However, their friends who are so interested will now be able to hear a "first-hand" story of the wedding of "Kitsy," who is one of the popular and active young members of Capital society.

Mrs. Montgomery Coming to Capital

Will Arrive This Week From Cuba for Short Stay.

Mrs. Edmund Brewer Montgomery will arrive this week to pass a fortnight at her home on Massachusetts avenue. Her two sons, Mark Reid Yates and John Sellers Yates, students at St. Alban's School here, will be with her during their spring vacations.

Mr. and Mrs. Montgomery and the latter's young daughter, Nancy Yates, have been in Havana, Cuba, where Mr. Montgomery is the United States consul, since September.

Duchess of Marlborough To Leave for N. Y. Today

The Duchess of Marlborough and her daughter, Lady Carolyn Spencer Churchill, who have been at the Mayflower since Tuesday, are planning to leave for New York this afternoon. The duke, with their two other children, Lady Sarah and the Marquess of Blandford, are in New York.

AFTER moving a few blocks in Washington Mrs. Halstead wrote the SECURITY STORAGE COMPANY: "The moving was very satisfactory, as always." After moving thousands of miles to Bogota, Colombia, Mr. Harner, of the Associated Press, wrote the SECURITY STORAGE COMPANY: "* * * *if I could marshal sufficient laudatory adjectives I might be able to express to you the pleasure your company gave us in that job of packing, * * * everything came through without a scratch."*
For over 44 years the SECURITY STORAGE COMPANY at 1140 Fifteenth Street has provided security in storage, in moving and in packing and shipping — and for nearly 40 years security in cleaning and storing rugs, furs, garments, in "certified" cold storage. District 40-40.

Tinting Work Is Reasonable At Shoe Studio

Prices Include Delivery Service and Jobs Are Guaranteed.

By Ruth Anne Davis.

LET'S TAKE a peek in your closet and survey the slipper situation. My, my, look at them, row after row, but how dingy and dog-eared they look! It's the let-down, you say, after a gay social season?

Well, why not give them a little pick-me-up? There's the phone over there, it won't take you 2 minutes to call a certain dye studio. They'll come for your slippers and what they'll do for them! That brocade pair, for instance. Why not have them dyed black? Or blue? Dark blue is a grand color now! And then those red slippers trimmed in gold. What a hey-day they must have seen! But you can't wear them again like that. Impossible! Why not have them changed to silver and blue? Or green and silver, fresh and spring-like, you know.

What scandalous sandals! A white pair you had last summer? And a black pair, too. Gone—and almost forgetten. But not quite. You've thought of them just in time. Send them to the studio, too. Here they have a modern philosopher's stone and they will change one pair to silver—and the other to gold! And just think, what comfy dancing slippers they'll be!

You think this slipper program will cost you big money? Well, won't you be surprised? Changing the sandals to gold and silver costs only $1.50. And as for the ordinary tinting job, that's only 75 cents. These prices include both call and delivery. And, here's another thing. This is one place where the work is guaranteed!

Store Features "Ev-ettes."

There's no doubting that a fan dancer would swap her fans—or fan—for some of the "Ev-ettes" featured in a downtown store.

"Ev-ettes" are panties and brassiere combined, but very little panty and minimum brassiere. In fact the scanty panty is made up chiefly of atmosphere. There's a bit of sheer crepe de chine, and a sprinkling of dainty lace, and a band or two of elastic, soft, silky elastic, that you can hardly feel.

The brassiere, lacy and silky, too, is all there in a small way. But it was so masterfully designed that it restrains—and at the same time uplifts.

Both these dainty little garments, which combined form the "Ev-ette," cost only $1. One dollar for the pair, mind you! And while you might not appreciate them now, wait until summer comes along, and then you can depend on an "Ev-ette" to keep you from simmering in the Washington heat.

Cosmetic Hides Blemishes.

Life takes on a new aspect to some young women when they learn about the cosmetic which conceals facial blemishes. It was invented by a woman who had a birthmark covering the side of her face. She was a highly intelligent person, keenly sensitive about this disfiguration. And with excellent reason. She found when she applied for positions that she was inevitably turned down and some other person not half so qualified employed instead. It was just that people felt her appearance would have a morbid effect on others. In sheer desperation she sought some means to override this obstacle—and found it.

Her discovery, approved by the American Medical Association, is a cosmetic which applied over the scar blends so well with the skin that the average person can not tell it's there.

While its primary purpose was to obliterate birthmarks and scars and such disfigurations, modern women are finding that it is suitable for many other things. It hides burns and blemishes—no matter how large—or small.

Socialites Have Right to Perform in Night Clubs, Say D. C. Impresarios Who'd Be Glad to Hire Some

An attractive young social registerite who has deserted society, at least partially, to become a professional entertainer is Adelaide Moffett, right, daughter of James Moffett, Federal Housing Commissioner. Miss Moffett has been singing over the radio for several months and has made phonograph records with a dance band.

While society girls are being frowned upon as night club entertainers in New York, they are being sought out in Washington. At the left is Miss Rebecca Tarwater, who has already appeared at a Capital hotel as a singer of rustic songs. Now another night spot is angling for her.

Federation's Radio Program To Honor Bach

Miss Schade Will Discuss Composer's Work Over WRC Tomorrow.

THE District of Columbia Federation of Women's Clubs will honor Johann Sebastian Bach in a radio program tomorrow, commemorating the 250th anniversary of his birth in Eisenach, Germany.

Mrs. Helen Morrison Hunter, chairman of radio programs for the federation, will present Miss Anita Schade, president of the German Literary Society, in a short talk on the life and works of Bach. Grete von Beyer, pianist, will play his "Prelude in E Major." This program will be given during the "Among Women" hour at 1:15 p. m. from Station WRC.

Literary Review.

MRS. ARTHUR VAN HAGEN will present her March review of "World Events as Reflected in Current Literature," at 11:15 a. m. today at the Wardman Park Hotel.

"Fascism at Work," by William Elwin, with an introduction by the former Prime Minister Nitti, and "The Nature of Capitalist Crisis," by John Strachey, will be reviewed. Several new novels of the month will be mentioned briefly.

These lectures are presented on the third Friday of each month and will be continued in April and May.

Duke Loan Fund Created.

MISS JANE ELIABETH NEWTON, president of the Duke University Alumni Association of Washington, announces the creation of a fund of $200 to be known as the loan fund. This fund will be loaned to worthy boys and girls from the District who desire to study at Duke. It will be administered by the university.

Last October, this chapter gave two scholarships of $200 each to young Washingtonians, Charles C. Stauffer and Robert S. Doyle, both freshmen at the university this year.

The art department of the Takoma Park Women's Club will meet at 1 o'clock today at the home of Mrs. Paul W. Burk, 524 Fern place northwest.

The assisting hostesses will be Mrs. B. M. Coon, Mrs. Ethel Lamond, Mrs. Alfred Hardesty, Mrs. P. G. Minneman, Mrs. G. G. Sward and Mrs. J. F. Rice. Mrs. Frederick L. Pratt will present a paper on "Wrought Iron."

The Columbia Triettes will meet at 8:30 o'clock tomorrow night at the new fraternity house of Alpha Chapter, 1555 Thirty-fifth street northwest.

Those who will take part in the program are Richard S. Harvey, Mrs. Anne W. Harvey and Mrs. Anne Yago McGuffey.

Debutantes Dumb? 'I Should Say Not,' Exclaims Shogun Macias; Wealth, Standing Should Be No Ban on Ability, 'Sidney' Points Out.

By Virginia Lee Warren.

SOCIETY GIRLS are poor. They need jobs as night club entertainers.

Society girls are rich and don't need jobs; most of them are dumb anyway.

There you have the two sides to an argument that is splitting New York socialites and theatrical performers into a couple of screaming, biting, kicking factions. Echoes of the affray are loud in the Capital, since several persons in the socialite camp have lived here at one time or another; Eve Wadsworth Symington, for instance, who has been thrilling in some of New York's more sophisticated rendezvous this winter.

Well, if blonde Mrs. Symngton, daughter of Representatve James W. Wadsworth, is barred from singing in Manhattan's hotcha spots because of her social position she can come back to Washington and warble as much as she pleases. Washington night club impresarios will go more than halfway to meet her or any other society girl who has genuine talent.

The impresarios declared yesterday they not only think debutantes and social registerites have a right to work in night clubs, but said they'd like to be able to hire some.

Max Lowe, Shoreham musical director and entertainment manager, said

"Sure, I'd like to put on a whole floor show with nothing but debutantes in it. But where would I get them? The Washington ones don't often go in for that sort of thing. I wish they would."

Pete Macias, shogun at the Heigh-Ho Club, finds it hard to understand why there should be such a battle in New York over a few socialites showing off their talents in public places.

As for debutantes being dumb—a charge made by a famous theatrical star in New York—Mr. Macias put a stop to that by saying:

"Dumb?" He Says Not.

"Dumb? I should say not. Why, I've known several debutantes who were more clever than professionals. Social standing has nothing to do with it one way or the other. But I've noticed society people would rather see members of their own set put on an act, that is, if they are talented."

The Heigh-Ho band leader admitted he is angling now for a team of Washington socialites, Rebecca Tarwater and Isham Keith, jr., to perform at his night club. Attractive Miss Tarwater and young Mr. Keith, who rides to hounds with the Warrenton Hunt, make a specialty of rustic songs, "the villian pursued her" type.

Mr. Macias is expecting no trouble with professionals if he presents the society team at Heigh-Ho. He remembers other social registerites who have sung or danced here with never a bit of criticism directed at their mentality or their need for money. There was the team of Daniel T. Wright 3d and Peggy Zolnay which danced at the Chanticleer several years ago. Both have moved to New York but have remained in the social swim despite their night-club activities. There was Mrs. Robert Ash, who sang with Jack Denny's band at the Wardman Park for a short time about three years ago.

Says Money Should Be Factor.

Money ought to enter into the question of whether debutantes should perform in night clubs, believes Sidney Seidenman, who, as "Sidney," directs a flock of dance band units in the Capital. He was the only impresario to consider this phase of the battle.

"If a debutante has lots of money she shouldn't take a job away from some professional who depends on it for her living," said Sidney. "But," he continued, "many debutantes today don't have money. They need jobs."

He hesitated and studied the matter over carefully.

"You know, even if a debutante is rolling in wealth it doesn't seem fair to keep her from performing in night clubs if she has wonderful talent. Now there's Adelaide Moffett. She's the daughter of the Federal Housing administrator and surely doesn't need the mony she makes by singing over the radio. But she has an exceptionally good voice. She's a swell little performer and I think it would be a shame to deprive her of singing and to deprive people of hearing her."

The entertainment director at the Gingham Club shared Sidney's opinion. He went so far as to say:

"America is a free country. Socialites are allowed to hold other jobs if they can deliver the goods. Why shouldn't they be allowed to sing and dance in night clubs?"

Culbertson On Bridge

On the hand below, the East player made a very brilliant play which brought about the defeat of the contract. He held up an Ace in a case where it is usually proper to win with it and he had to make up his mind to do it quickly as otherwise he would have been marked with it.

South, Dealer.
Both sides vulnerable.

South	West	North	East
1♡	Pass	1NT	Pass(1)
2♣	Pass	2♡	Pass
4♡(2)	Pass	Pass	Pass

1—Despite the three Aces and the King, the East hand is too skimpy to enter the bidding when vulnerable at the level of two.

2—A rather optimistic bid. The only reason I can find for it is that South must have wanted to end the rubber quickly.

The Play.

North, with his weak holding, finally decided (although incorrectly) to discard his normal fourth best diamond lead and opened a spade, hoping thereby to strike his partner's suit. He chose the ten-spot and this card was allowed to ride around to the declarer's Jack. South then led a low heart, East played the seven and the dummy the King.

This was the point where quick thinking by East paid rich dividends. Most players would unhesitatingly win with the heart Ace, for in almost all known cases it is proper to capture a King with an Ace in such situations. This case represented the exception and East was smart enough to realize it. If he had won the trick West's Jack of trumps would not have been worth anything, for declarer could not have finessed for it, having no entry to dummy. The only chance left would have been to play the Queen of hearts out of his own hand and the Jack would have dropped.

East, saw his opportunity and ducked, playing the heart 3. This left dummy in the lead, and, having no other suit in which a lead from dummy was desired, declarer played the heart right back and finessed the ten-spot. West won with the Jack. This proved to be the setting trick, for East could still make his three Aces.

St. Patrick's Menu Delights Palate, Eyes

Economical Lamb Lends Itself to Green Accessories; Try It Sunday.

By Dorothea Duncan.

DON'T FORGET that Sunday is March 17 and calls for a great show of green in honor of St. Patrick, the patron saint of Ireland. It won't be hard to plan a green color scheme for the Sunday dinner menu, for you have a wealth of naturally green foods from which to choose.

Choose a meat that is especially attractive served with a garnish of green. The crown roast of lamb will be ideal for two reasons. First of all, green accessories enhance its appearance, and, secondly, you will find it an economical buy this week-end. The crown roast, you know, is made from the loin containing the rib chops, the ends of the ribs having been scraped as for French chops and the sections sewed together so that the ribs curve upward and outward. These ribs are effective when garnished with green paper frills.

Serve Irish potatoes, of course, with the crown roast of lamb. The potatoes may be cut into tiny balls with a French vegetable cutter, cooked until tender and rolled in melted butter. Place the potato balls in the hollow of the crown roast between the chops and garnish with finely chopped parsley. Border the edge of the platter with parsley sprigs and potato balls to complete the picture.

Mint Ice Adds to Color.

Mint ice, tinted a faint green, will be more festive than mint sauce as an accompaniment for the crown roast of lamb, and will bring more green into your color scheme.

Your choice of vegetable is not limited to one. If you wish to spend a little more than usual for your Sunday dinner, you might have fresh asparagus served with drawn butter sauce. Broccoli, spinach, brussels sprouts, fresh peas or string beans are others that will be attractive from the point of color, cost and flavor.

Clover leaf rolls and green pepper salad will both create a good likeness of the shamrock. The green pepper may be merely sliced crosswise after the center membrane and seeds have been removed and served on a bed of watercress with a French dressing or stuffed in the following manner: Remove the top, membrane and seeds from a green pepper. Moisten a three-ounce package of cream cheese with enough milk or cream to make the cheese soft and smooth. Fill the center of the pepper and place in the refrigerator to cool. When thoroughly chilled, slice with a sharp knife and serve two slices for each salad, placing on a bed of crisp lettuce.

Crown Roast of Lamb.

1 crown roast of lamb
Salt pork cubes
Salt

When the butcher prepares your crown roast of lamb, see that the rib ends, which have been mentioned above, are of the same length. This feature will make a more attractive roast. To prevent the ends of the bones from charring while roasting, cap each one with a small cube of salt pork. Dissolve a teaspoon of salt in half cup of water and pour over the roast when in the pan. Set in a very hot oven (500 degrees F.) for 15 minutes. Then reduce to 350 degrees F. Allow 20 to 25 minutes per pound. The cubes of salt pork should not be removed from the rib bones until the roast is removed from the oven.

This BUSINESS of LIVING

By Mary Haworth.

DEAR MISS HAWORTH: I am deeply interested in the welfare of a young friend of mine, 10 years my junior, who is as dear to me as a sister. She is very talented, and excelled in both mathematics and literature in school. Her gifts of mind and personality would make her an ideal teacher, as she is a soothing, restful person and has quite a way with children.

• • • •

But to my bitter disappointment she refuses to do anything with her talents, and recently turned down a fine offer of a teaching position. The reasons she gave were that she doesn't need the money and she doesn't care for indoor work.

• • • •

She accuses me of nagging when I talk to her about her indolence, and both of us are usually in tears after any attempt of mine to discuss her future. What should I do? Surely she should not waste her God-given talents. She is a fine, warm-hearted girl but I feel defeated as I can not seem to help her, and others, too, have talked to her and failed.

• • • •

I have called her problem to your attention because she is here visiting now, and I would like her to read your answer if possible before she leaves.

READER.

• • • •

Let Her Alone.

DEAR READER: What should you do? Let your young friend alone, by all means. If you are genuinely interested in her welfare, be thankful she has the moral courage, the strength and common sense to resist all efforts of her self-styled friends to pigeonhole her in a distasteful occupation.

• • • •

For one thing, the teaching profession is no longer the only field of endeavor in which a "brainy, cultured girl" can achieve a successful and satisfactory career. Other fields of opportunity almost too numerous to mention are openng up. For another thing, the teaching profession is notoriously overcrowded, and she is being wise and fair in leaving such jobs to the woman who has slanted her education in that direction and who, denied an opportunity in that field, may find no ready alternative for demonstrating social usefulness.

• • • •

Thirdly, and even more important, she has frankly stated teaching does not appeal to her, if for no other reason that because it is so confining, as indeed it is. No person, no matter how exhaustive his preparation, can hope to become altogether successful in a profession the very practice of which does not in itself constitute a greater source of satisfaction than the contingent pay check.

• • • •

Finally, she demonstrates an impeccable sense of modern social justice in making one more salaried job available to some person who may need it more than she. You have no cause for worry about the future of a girl who is warm-hearted, lovable, talented and yet so level-headed that even the tears and painful reproaches of her friends can not change the course of her approach to her own destiny.

Anemia Types Are Explained By Physician

By Dr. Irving S. Cutter.

Some Varieties of Anemia.

THE blood, in many respects, may be compared to a railroad system. The pathway along which the train travels may be likened to the blood vessels, and the corpuscles or cells of the blood are the freight and passenger cars that are loaded and unloaded at way stations. Just as commodities can be hauled by rail, so the blood can and does transport everything that the body needs to the most remote cells. It carries water, oxygen, food of all sorts (prepared in just the way that the material can be used, vitamins, and a thousand different chemical compounds. These substances are loaded into the cars—the cells; and into the plasma—the liquid part of the blood, and delivered where needed.

It is just as important to keep the blood in a normal state as it is to keep the railway right of way and the rolling stock in A1 condition. There are a number of factors influencing the blood that are of interest to us in the preservation of health.

First of all may be mentioned a type of anemia in which the red cells are normal in number, but are poorly provided with hemoglobin (the red coloring matter of the cells).

A type of anemia that is not at all uncommon is that which follows infections in which the blood cells actually dissolve. This is sometimes associated with marked jaundice. The skin has a lemon yellow color and the red cells are unusually brittle.

What Today Means

"Pisces."

IF March 14 is your birthday, the best hours for you on this date are from 10:45 a. m. to 12:45 p. m., from 2:45 to 4:45 p. m., and from 7:45 to 9:45 p. m. The danger periods are from 6:45 to 8:45 a. m., from 4:45 to 6:45 p. m., and from 9:45 to 11:45 p. m.

If born on this date, you should find it most propitious. Any plans you may have made should terminate successfully. A spirit of good humor probably will stimulate sociability. It should be a very favorable time for the planning of social or business activities. It probably will be a day filled with pleasant, as well as unexpected surprises. business complications are likely to be handled with a great deal more ease than anticipated if tactful methods are employed.

If in doubt regarding any matter it will be wise to consult someone whom you know is qualified to give advice rather than to accept just anyone's suggestion. Married and engaged couples, as well as those entertaining serious sentimental intentions, will display good judgment if they exercise care as to the time and place, to say anything of a private nature.

If a woman, and March 14 is your birthday, guard against permitting yourself to get into the habit of being inactive or listless. You will be happier and more contented if you have something to occupy your thoughts, as well as time. A business or professional career probably will supply the interest you need to keep your mind occupied, but if you lack this, then it is advisable to develop some hobby.

Sketching, illustrating, designing, needlework, teaching or making a collection of some worth-while thing, as well as writing, are suggested as worthy of your consideration. If you will take an interest in household affairs, married life should provide not only all the activity you need to absorb your thoughts, but also all the happiness as well as entertainment you may desire.

If a man, and March 14 is your natal day, methodical habits will enable you to get satisfactory results. Hit-and-miss methods, if you are wise, will be avoided. It might be well for you to remember that it is easy to get into the habit of procrastination. Avoid it as you would a plague if you wish to make a place for yourself in life.

Rival Bill Blocs In Fight, Delay Bonus Action

Patman, Vinson Groups Vie for House Floor; Rule on Procedure Waited.

An undercover fight between supporters of the competitive Patman and Vinson bonus plans yesterday figured in delay until next week of House consideration of the issue.

The House Rules Committee will meet today to decide on legislative procedure. The committee must vote whether to recommend that both measures be in order or to limit debate to the Vinson plan.

Representative Fred Vinson (Democrat), of Kentucky, told the Rules Committee his program, indorsed by a close vote of the Ways and Means Committee, should receive exclusive consideration on the floor.

American Legion officials, who have stanchly backed the Vinson proposal for months, used their influence in hopes of obtaining a rule which would prevent a vote on the bill of Representative Wright Patman (Democrat), of Texas.

Patman's followers insisted the House proper should be given an opportunity to choose between the two measures. They charged the Vinson bill would not have been approved by the Ways and Means Committee without the aid of Republicans who in the past opposed the bonus.

Indications were the Rules Committee would suggest at least eight hours of debate on the question. The problem is expected to reach the floor Monday or Tuesday.

The Vinson bill would require the Treasury to finance the program, perhaps through a bond issue, while the Patman measure would authorize printing of the $2,000,000,000 or more necessary. Both plans contemplate immediate full cash payment.

Treasurer Visitor In Wage Dispute

County Board's Authority to Cut Pay Denied.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Salisbury, March 13.—Ruling that the board of county commissioners were without authority to reduce the salary of County Treasurer Charles W. Bennett without his consent, a writ of mandamus was ordered issued in circuit court yesterday instructing the commissioners to pay the treasurer the amount deducted monthly since June 1, 1933.

The court held that the only point at issue is whether the treasurer had agreed to accept the salary cut in line with other officials and employes and the commissioners had failed to produce conclusive evidence to that effect.

The treasurer's salary is fixed by law at $1,800 annually. A reduction of 12 per cent was made by the commissioners.

Bass-Fishing Season Will Close Tomorrow

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Richmond, March 13.—Only two more days remain in which it is legal to catch bass east of the Blue Ridge Mountains, it was pointed out today at the office of the State commission of game and inland fisheries. The closed season on bass fishing in this part of the State starts Friday and will continue until June 15.

The open season for trout fishing, the great sport in the mountain section of Virginia begins on April 15 and will last through June 30. The commission has distributed thousands of trout to the mountain streams during recent months and the prospects are that the trout angler will have good sport this year.

Young Democrats Want Primary System Kept

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Snow Hill, Md., March 13.—The Young Men's Democratic Club, of Snow Hill, opposed the bill introduced in Annapolis by Senator Veasey, of this county, providing for the abolishment of the primary system of nomination for elective offices and reviving the old convention system in a special meeting held here last night.

A resolution to that effect was adopted, and it also was voted that a letter be sent to Senator Veasey advising him of the club's attitude.

Writ Asked to Compel Naming of Safety Chief

Richmond, Va., March 13 (AP).—Charging Mayor J. Richmond, Va., March 13.—An appeal was granted by the Supreme Court today to J. C. Anderson from a decree of the Circuit Court of Arlington County in a suit which he brought against Donald MacDonald and others.

He sought to subject certain property to the payment of a debt for $200, asserting he had lost the note representing the obligation.

'Basing Point' System Vital, Steel Men Say

Necessary to Maintenance of Fair Competition, Leaders Hold.

An "overwhelming majority" of small and large steel companies has approved the basing-point method of quoting steel prices as necessary to preserve fair competition, the American Iron and Steel Institute announced yesterday.

Both the Federal Trade Commission and the NRA have been studying basing-point provisions and are expected to report on the subject tomorrow.

"Abandonment of the basing-point method in favor of prices quoted f. o. b. mills would create virtual monopolies in favor of those mills which are located near important markets," the institute statement said.

The institute announcement said that 184 concerns, representing 97.4 per cent of the country's ingot capacity and 97.2 per cent of the finishing capacity, had approved the basing point arrangement.

The statement pointed out that basing point pricing had been included in the steel code. It said that the system had been in use for more than 40 years. It pointed out that the system was made necessary largely because of the high factor of transportation costs in delivered steel prices.

Elimination of the basing point plan, the institute said, would seriously decrease production in important centers such as Pittsburgh and Youngstown, Ohio, and that it would tend to increase production in more favorably located plants, resulting in dismantling of plants and the shifting of labor.

Lee Study Enlists Mrs. Bingham's Aid

Wife of Envoy Inventories Furnishings of Family.

By the Associated Press.

Richmond, Va., March 13.—A complete inventory of all the original furnishings of historic Stratford, the birthplace of many members of the Lee family, is being made by Mrs. Robert Worth Bingham, wife of the American Ambassador to the Court of St. James, the Virginia State Chamber of Commerce announced today.

Through research in the public record office in London, Mrs. Bingham has discovered inventories of consignments of furniture sent to Stratford in the early eighteenth century.

Directors of the Robert E. Lee Memorial Foundation in more than 30 States are joining in the search for the whereabouts of much of the original furniture. Every piece and document authenticating its history will be filed for further use.

The association will dedicate Stratford October 20 with a national celebration there.

FLEISCHMANN'S GIN

....remember how I brought you two together

I'm your best friend

I am your Lucky Strike

I give you the mildest, best-tasting smoke—because I am made of center leaves only. The top leaves are unripe, bitter, biting. The bottom leaves are coarse, sandy, harsh. The center leaves are the choice leaves. They are mildest, mellowest, yet richest in fine tobacco flavor. And I offer you the fragrant, expensive center leaves exclusively. I do not irritate your throat. That's why I dare to say, "I'm your best friend."

LUCKIES USE ONLY THE CENTER LEAVES . . . CENTER LEAVES GIVE YOU THE MILDEST SMOKE

Mullikin Defeated In Fight to Slash Budget $100,000

House Votes Report of Fiscal Committee After Debate.

Measure Is Sent To Third Reading

Politics Now Throttling the Schools, Senator Friend Charges.

A Staff Correspondent.

Annapolis, Md., March 13.—Representative Kent R. Mullikin, Prince Georges County, chairman of the ways and means committee and majority floor leader of the House, was defeated tonight in his fight to make further slashes in the budget appropriations bill, amounting to more than $100,000. Mullikin carried his battle to the floor of the House, and after debate lasting more than two hours, the body adopted the favorable report of the fiscal committee, with minor amendments, and sent the bill to the third reading file.

Mullikin did, however, score on two points. He succeeded in having eliminated an item of $27,850 for salaries and expenses for a title and right of way department designed to be set up in the State Roads Commission. This was stricken out by a vote of 63 to 53. He also succeeded on an amendment to empower the board of public works, instead of the Governor, to provide for restoration of salaries in 1936 and 1937, from excess treasury funds up to $500,000.

The House leader waged his chief fight against the extra allowance to the Governor for improvements to the executive mansion; $50,000 for a "survey" of State departments, and a like amount for Morgan College (colored).

The bill, in its final form, carries total appropriations of $62,252,051.45 for the next biennium. Its passage on third reading within the next day or two is indicated, and the measure then will be sent to the Senate for concurrence in House amendments, before being delivered to the Governor for approval.

Charges that politics control the public school system of Maryland were made in the Senate today during a debate on a bill providing for the election of all county school superintendents by popular vote, instead of by appointment.

The bill, sponsored by a group of Republican Senators, came from the education committee with an unfavorable report, and the fight, launched by Senator Clifford Friend, Garrett County, was made upon a move to substitute the bill for the report, but the motion was voted down, 16 to 12. Senator Harold Cobourn, Cecil County, united with Republican forces in efforts to save the measure.

Senator Friend argued that the schools already "are in politics up to their necks" and that there was little to the argument advanced by Democratic opponents that the bill would make them so. On the contrary, he said, the bill was designed to "raise the quality of service the people can hope to attain."

Lack of Control Charged.

Friend asserted that the school superintendent of his home county is recognized as the "political boss," that all contracts are let for political expediency, and that "unless you are willing to prostitute yourself to the superintendent and his machine, you will not get anything." The Senator declared Garrett County citizens were unable to secure help from State school authorities, and asserted Dr. Cook, State superintendent of schools, "sat snugly on his throne and chose to ignore complaints of my people."

Senator Robert Kimble, Allegany County, who supported Friend, asserted that "some of the great politicians of Maryland are in the public schools." He said that one who did his best to keep him from the State Senate happened to be the superintendent of Allegany County.

"Unless we are going to revise the school system and take politics out of it, we ought to put the schools into politics and give the people a say so," he said.

Senator Cobourn asserted the people have no control over the school system under the present set-up.

Senator Ernest Miller, Washington County, joined the debate, saying politics in the House is responsible for holding up action on a bill providing for a school at Sharpsburg, in his home county.

Senator Ridgely P. Melvin, Anne Arundel County, chairman of the education committee, took the ground that the bill would place schools in politics, while Senator Mary Risteau, Harford County, denied politics play a part in school affairs. Senator Harry Legore, Frederick County, also entered the debate in defense of the bill. As a final rejoinder, before the Senate killed the measure, Senator Friend said the school system is good in theory, but a failure in practice.

Parole Revision Proposed.

Among the more important measures filed in the Senate was an administration bill providing for a State parole commissioner instead of a commission of three. The bill was introduced by Senator J. David Baile, Carroll County, minority floor leader. It is based upon recommendations of a commission appointed by Gov. Nice, and makes these provisions:

For a full-time parole commissioner, appointed by the Governor, increases the salary from $2,500 to $7,500 annually.

That all employes of the commissioner be placed under the merit system.

That persons sentenced for life imprisonment shall not be eligible until after 15 years.

That all the State's attorneys be required to furnish the commissioner with records of cases in which persons are sentenced for one year or more.

That persons to whom pardons are granted must agree to supervision for five years after the end of the term for which they are sentenced.

That violation of parole would be punishable as a misdemeanor.

Senator George Hofferbert, Baltimore City, sponsored a bill that provides that a lessee or sublessee, who has parted with entire interest and estate in leasehold property, shall not be liable for breach thereafter occurring in any covenant or conditions contained in any lease or sublease in which the term, with one renewal, is 15 years or longer.

Measures Offered in House.

Several measures of more than average interest originated in the House.

Representative Kent R. Mullikin, Prince Georges County, chairman of the ways and means committee, sponsored a bill which, he said, would result in a saving to the State of between $15,000 and $20,000 annually. It provides for limiting the expense allowance of the examiner, actuary and auditor of the State insurance department and would fix the salary of the examiner and actuary at $4,500 and the auditor at $4,000, the maximum compensation covering both salary and fees. The bill eliminates traveling and other expenses for the examiner and a fee set by the insurance commissioner and the company whose affairs he examined. Instead, it is provided that the company pay to the insurance commissioner the fee, traveling and other expenses, all such funds to be turned in to the State treasury for use in meeting expenses of the State insurance department.

Representative Leo Moore, Harford County, presented a bill to change regulations relative to shooting wild fowl.

An investigation of wages of women and minors employed in the State is proposed in a bill by Representative Joseph Griesacker, Baltimore City.

The Washington County commissioners would be authorized to borrow $50,000 to purchase from the Federal Government, State or other agencies, real estate and improvements in Hagerstown, held desirable for use in housing local boards and county departments, under terms of a bill by the county delegation.

Representative Beachley, Washington County, offered a bill providing that salaries of Washington County teachers conform with State standards, and that salaries may be reduced on a scale ranging between 5 and 6 per cent, on compensation of from $1,200 to $3,000 annually.

The House advanced to third reading the bill to permit sale of beer in Garrett County hitherto lone "bone dry" sector of the State. The measure fixes the retail license at $100 and that of wholesalers at $200.

Other New Proposals.

Among other new proposals in the Senate were:

Limiting to $5,000 the amount of property that the Independent Junior Fire Company, of Hagerstown, may hold.

In the House, new bills placed on file included:

Requiring all teachers in schools supported wholly or in part by the State or political subdivisions to take the oath of allegiance to the State as well as the Federal Constitution.

Prohibiting tractors or trucks with trailers, containing more than 3,500 gallons of gasoline from operating on State highways.

Placing misleading and untrue radio advertising under penalty of State law.

Making it a misdemeanor for employers to fail to pay employes wages within three days of date due, and fixing the penalty at $100 for the first offense and not over $200 for subsequent offenses.

Famous Harp Owned By Virginia Society

By the Associated Press.

Richmond, Va., March 13.—The harp that Patrick Henry's granddaughter, Elvira Ann Henry, owned and played has been the property of the Virginia Historical Society for eight years, it was learned here today.

The instrument, of a type invented in 1720 by a Bavarian named Hochbrucher, was given to the society by descendants of the famous orator, who also was handy with the fiddle.

Heart Attack Proves Fatal To Engineer

Annapolis Resident Was Supervising Project Under PWA.

By the Associated Press.

Cumberland, Md., March 13.—Richard Morton, 69, prominent construction engineer, of Annapolis and Baltimore, dropped dead today of a heart attack in a hotel here, where he had resided since last November. He had been ill with a cold the last three days.

Mr. Morton has been in Cumberland supervising a public works administration project for the Federal Government. His wife said she heard Mr Morton go into an adjoining room for a cup of coffee after arising. She found him a few minutes later on the floor. A physician pronounced him dead.

The Mortons lived on a 165-acre estate at Severnside, near Annapolis, for 28 years. He maintained an office in Baltimore until three years ago. He sold his estate two years ago and moved to Annapolis, where he will be buried.

Besides his wife, Mr. Morton is survived by a son, John Moncure Robinson Morton, of Houston, Tex.; two daughters, Mrs. Mary Champ Fell, of Blue Ridge Summit, Pa., and Miss Evelyn Byrd Morton, of Caldwell, N. J.; a sister, Miss Mary Morton, of Baltimore, and two brothers, Walter Morton, of San Francisco, and William Morton, of Charlottesville, Va.

George B. Wright.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Middletown, Va., March 13.—George B. Wright, 76, a retired farmer and business man, died at his home here last night.

He was a decendant of Joist Hite, original settler of this section of the valley, and of Peter Senseny, who founded this town.

Mr. Wright was one of the pioneers in establishing an agricultural high school here 25 years ago, the first in this section of the State. He was formerly director of one of the county banks.

His wife, who was Miss Ettie Canter, survives. They celebrated their fifty-third wedding anniversary last summer.

His survivors also include four children, Elliott Wright, of Middletown; Miss Mattie Wright, at home; Miss Maude Wright, of Washington, D. C., and Howard Wright, of Las Cruces, N. Mex.

Services will be conducted tomorrow.

Silas C. Dove.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Harrisonburg, Va., March 13.—Blood poisoning caused by a splinter in his thumb today proved fatal to Silas C. Dove, 79, Bergton farmer and community church worker. He died at Rockingham Memorial Hospital after an illness of four days.

His brother, Siram, died four days ago and another brother, Cyrus, is seriously ill. His wife and three children survive.

Miss Mary R. Thompson.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Leonardtown, Md., March 13.—Miss Mary R. Thompson, 17, of Dynard, Md., was buried today. She is survived by her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Dudley Thompson, and four sisters, the Misses Frances, Alberta, Lillian and Lucille, all of Dynard, Md. Miss Thompson was a sophomore at Margaret Brent High School, in St. Marys County.

Andrew Vander Hoeff.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Charlottesville, Va., March 13. Funeral services will be conducted tomorrow for Andrew Vander Hoeff, flower grower, who died yesterday afternoon at the home of his daughter, Mrs. J. Frank Dudley, after an illness of several weeks.

Mr. Vander Hoeff was born in Holland 71 years ago. He came to this country 18 years ago, locating in Albemarle County.

He married Miss Augusta Eggert, also of Holland. She survives, with a daughter, Mrs. Dudley, and a son, William C. Vander Hoeff, of Kelso, Wash.

C. Walter Artz.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Hagerstown, Md., March 13.—C. Walter Artz, New York attorney, who died at the University Club, New York, will be buried at Rose Hill Cemetery tomorrow.

Mr. Artz was a native of Hagerstown, a descendant of one of the early families. He was connected with the A. T. & T. Co., New York.

Rufus Landram.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Luray, Va., March 13.—Funeral services were held today in Visalia, Calif., for Rufus Landram, 60, brother of Charles S. Landram, cashier of the Page Valley National Bank, Luray.

Maryland Warned by Hopkins To Provide Its Share of Relief

Administrator Says Responsibility for Not Furnishing Aid Will Be Upon Legislature Unless Assembly Acts Immediately.

Harry L. Hopkins, Federal Emergency Relief Administrator, sent a telegram late yesterday to Gov. Harry W. Nice and members of the Maryland State Senate in which he declared that unless the Maryland General Assembly takes immediate action to provide for the State's proportionate share of the relief burden "the responsibility for not providing relief will be upon the Legislature."

"Since November 1, 1934, the Federal Emergency Relief Administration has granted Maryland in excess of $8,500,000 for general or special relief purposes. Less than $400,000 has been contributed by the State and localities during the four and a half months," Hopkins pointed out in his message.

The FERA administrator declared, "I have repeatedly requested the State to co-operate. A period of two and one-half months has transpired since this request and nothing has been done. Unless action is taken immediately, the responsibility for not providing relief will be upon the Legislature. The Government can not furnish funds unless you, too, are willing to do what you can to carry your proportionate share."

Virginia Posse Captures Two Escaped Felons

Fugitives, Surrounded by Armed Citizens, Offer No Resistance.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Fredericksburg, Va., March 13.—Cornered by a heavily-armed posse of Spotsylvania County citizens near Carr's Bridge at the Louisa-Spotsylvania line this morning, two of the six convicts who escaped from a Culpeper road camp transportation truck Saturday surrendered. They were returned to the camp today.

Those caught are Thomas Bates, 33, Richmond Negro murderer and alleged leader of the escape plot, and George (Smoky) Preston, 26, colored, of Roanoke.

Bates is serving 20 years. Preston is serving 12 years for house-breaking. Immediately after their capture the two were taken to the Spotsylvania County Jail and later transferred to the Culpeper camp.

A search was made in this area last night by a posse headed by Sheriff Maxie L. Blaydes. The two Negroes, who said they spent the night in a schoolhouse, were seen this morning on the main road. A posse of citizens was gathered quickly and surrounded the men, who offered no resistance.

Witness Seized In Courtroom At Frederick

By the Associated Press.

Frederick, Md., March 13.—After completing his testimony at a trial here, William H. Gue, 41, of Bartholows, was ordered today by Associate Judge Arthur D. Willard to be arrested on a warrant charging perjury.

Gue was taken into custody in the courtroom by Sheriff Roy M. Hiltner. He denied making any false statements on the witness stand, but stenographic records of a previous trial were produced, showing that Gue had offered directly opposite testimony at that time.

At the former trial, heard by a circuit court jury on last October 5, Gue was shown by the records to have testified that Worthington Ramsburg had purchased stolen pistols from Robert Pyles. Ramsburg was convicted and given a seven-year penitentiary sentence for theft.

At today's trial, Gue testified that Ramsburg had got the pistol in question from Raymond L. Baxter, who was on trial. Baxter was charged with being Ramsburg's accomplice in the theft, which took place near Thurmont in the fall of 1933.

Pyles, who was charged with being a "fence" in several theft cases, including the Ramsburg case, was convicted on the charge and served a year jail term.

Contest Saturday By Music Clubs

District No. 2 Competition Due at Harrisonburg.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Harrisonburg, Va., March 14.—The contest of the Virginia Federation of Music Clubs for District No. 2 will be held at the Harrisonburg State Teachers College Saturday, according to the announcement of Vera Melone, of the college music department, who is chairman of arrangements for this district.

Entrants from Buchanan, Buena Vista, Charlottesville, Clifton Forge, Covington, Staunton, Harrisonburg and Lexington are expected to compete here. Winners will take part in the State contests in Richmond on March 30.

The piano contests will begin at 1:30 p. m. in the new music hall, and will be followed by the organ contests in the First Methodist Church. The judges, whose names will be announced later, will be chosen from Harrisonburg, Staunton, Woodstock and Bridgewater College and Shenandoah College.

State to Change Plan on Land Sale

Cemetery Tract Not to Adjoin Park in Maryland.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Hagerstown, Md., March 13.—Difficulties over the proposed sale of a strip of land by Maryland to the Evangelical Church of Mount Carmel for extension of its cemetery fronting upon the Fort Frederick State Park in Washington County, have been ironed out. Delegate Harvey Miller has agreed to work out another plan by which the State would provide land that does not front on the present park site.

The forestry department had contended extension of the cemetery as proposed would cause "irreparable injury to the historic and esthetic value" of the park.

The understanding that nothing would be done that would damage the park property was reached at a conference between the directors of the Hagerstown Chamber of Commerce and Delegate Miller.

Martinsburg Starts Rehearsing a Play

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Martinsburg, W. Va., March 13.—Rehearsals were started tonight by the alumni of the Martinsburg High School for presentation of "In Love With Love," to be given about May 15 or 16 in the high school auditorium, with Albert Geyer directing.

The cast will be built about Mrs. Evelyn Eckert Grimes and Kenneth Harmon in the leads. They will be supported by Anne Steffie, Jane Perry, Forrest Yeakley, Hank Keller and Paul Garrett. The cast, with a few exceptions, is the same as that presenting "Nancy's Private Affair" last year.

Carson Lists 14 Projects In Summary

Pioneering Period of the Commission Is Reviewed.

By the Associated Press.

Richmond, Va., March 13.—"All is well that ends well," is William E. Carson's summation of the work of the conservation and development commission, which he headed from its inception in 1926 until January 1, 1935, and whose pioneering period he reviews in a 106-page report made public today.

Mr. Carson's statement follows hard on the heels of a 75-page audit of the commission under his administration, which was turned over to Gov. Peery by State Auditor Downs Monday.

As the commission's principal achievement, Mr. Carson points out that he and his colleagues took over the Shenandoah Park project from private management, gave it national as well as State-wide impetus and completed it to a point where deeds have been presented to the National Government.

Soon to Be Accepted.

"We are advised the park will be accepted at an early date by the Secretary of the Interior on behalf of the United States Government," he added.

"From the beginning to the end," Mr. Carson says "the acquisition, which was our share in the Shenandoah National Park movement, was a disagreeable and abhorrent job," in which "time and again we were threatened with sudden death by infuriated landowners, and we were the storm center in every political campaign in this section."

In adverting to criticism of the commission, Mr. Carson quoted Gen. Charles Dawes' famed reply when badgered into giving his opinion of conduct of the war: "Hell'n' Maria! We did the job, didn't we?"

Lists 14 Projects.

Pointing toward the future, Mr. Carson, now connected with the Department of the Interior, enumerated 14 projects for consideration by the present commission, headed by Wilbur C. Hall. They are:

1. Extension of the Mount Vernon boulevard to Yorktown via Gunston Hall, home of George Mason, thence to Pohick Church, where Washington worshipped, to Fredericksburg, his mother's home, thence to Ferry Farm, scene of his boyhood, to Oak Grove, where he attended school, to Wakefield, his birthplace, to Stratford, home of the Lees, and thence to Yorktown.
2. Development of the James River Basin west of Richmond by a series of low dams and impounding basins. (A TVA project.)
3. Recovery of the drowned lands in eastern Virginia; drainage of swamps; eradication of mosquitoes, and reclamation of waste lands.
4. The opening up of the inaccessible beauty spots through our mountain areas by a series of skyline roads.
5. The extension of the colonial national monument to include Cape Henry and Fort Story.
6. The creation of a national seashore park, taking as its nucleus the State seashore park.
7. The conveyance of the Richmond battlefield parks to the National Park Service.
8. Creating a national shrine of Monticello, to be administered by the National Park Service.
9. The creation of a State parks bureau in the commission on conservation and development.
10. The restudy of pensions for State employes and a study of old age and unemployment pensions to conserve human resources.
11. The dredging of Long Creek to Lynnhaven Inlet.
12. The completion of the George Washington Dogue Creek mill.
13. Raising by subscription approximately $260,000 by August, 1936, the amount necessary to take up a vendor's lien on lands adjacent to the seashore park.
14. A two hundred and fifty million per annum tourist trade.

Daylight Time Plea.

Richmond, Va., March 13 (AP).—A petition circulated today by Thomas A. Stansell, a salesman, asks the city council to adopt an ordinance establishing daylight saving time here.

Bell Begins Term In State's Prison; Poison Case Ends

Dog Clinics Ordered In Fight Upon Rabies

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Danville, Va., March 13.—Rabies is viewed here so seriously that City Health Officer R. W. Garnett has announced dog clinics for the vaccination of animals giving them immunity against the disease.

Not only human beings and dogs, but cows and other live stock have been bitten by mad dogs originating in Pittsylvania County, where the situation has been such of recent weeks that a dog quarantine has been ordered.

Was Sentenced At Second Trial

Churchman May Leave Virginia Prison by July 3, 1936.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Fredericksburg, Va., March 13.—Edward C. Bell, 60-year-old church deacon, who rose from clerk in a store to a positoin of influence and leadership in this community, was taken to the State Penitentiary at Richmond today to begin serving a three-year sentence for attempted poisoning of his invalid wife.

Mr. Bell was sentenced in corporation court last Thursday when he was tried before Judge Frederick W. Coleman without a jury. It was Mr. Bell's second trial in corporation court since last December, the first ending with a hung jury and Mr. Bell's subsequent commitment to the Southwestern State Hospital at Marion for observation.

In announcing his decision last week, Judge Coleman deferred imposition of the sentence until this Friday, allowing Mr. Bell time to straighten out his affairs before going to prison.

Wishing to "get it over with as soon as possible," the once prominent church worker and political leader appeared before Judge Coleman in the courthouse today, where the formal court order of the sentence was signed, together with commitment papers sending him to the penitentiary.

With Mr. Bell for the court proceedings were two of his counsel, W. Marshall King and A. W. Embrey, and the Rev. Dr. Robert F. Caverlee, pastor of the Fredericksburg Baptist Church, in which Mr. Bell was a deacon.

With time off for good behavior and credit for time spent in the State Hospital, Bell will be released from prison July 3, 1936.

A New Play Goes Into Rehearsal for Premiere Here at the National April 1

Aviation Story May Be Second Three on Horse

SomeSponsorsHeld Active; Mrs. Whiffen Reaches 90; Theater Notes.

(Reprinted from Yesterday's Last Edition.)

By Nelson B. Bell.

Although Washington will not be priviliged to view the reputedly improved version of "Hollywood Holiday," now "mopping up," as the saying goes, in other centers of culture, with Bebe Daniels, Ben Lyons, "Skeets" Gallagher and Kathryn Givney in the leading roles, it seems now a reasonable certainty that "Ceiling Zero" will reach here for the week of April 1.

I hazard this guess because "Ceiling Zero," a new play about aviation by Frank Wead, already is in rehearsal and even the New York papers are heralding the fact that it will open "in the National Theater in Washington, April 1, with Osgood Perkins in the featured role." Its New York premiere, everything going well, will be one week later.

"Ceiling Zero" will be presented by Brock Pemberton, it seems, although there are curious rumors floating about that it will have at least a partial backing in the matter of finances by one of the major producers of motion pictures—the same major producer, as a matter of fact, as had a finger in Alex Yokel's bulls-eye farce, "Three Men on a Horse."

Film Rights Come High.

And there are several queer stories being bruited about concerning this major producer's interest in "Three Men on a Horse." This producer's identity, of course, can not be divulged but, if it will be any halp, its initials are Warner Brothers.

But to get back to the point, it was supposed that these mysteriously secret motion picture producers held a sufficient interest in the knockout comedy about the little verse writer and the race track grifters to exercise an easy control over its cinematic destinies. Apparently, this is not the case.

Since the overwhelming popular hit of "Three Men on a Horse" on Broadway, the monetary cost of its motion picture rights have gone soaring and the property is for sale to anyone with enough do-re-mi, to coin a coin phrase, to buy it. With the slight edge their interest in the production gives them, it is still thought that the Warners are the front runners as possible bidder-inners.

With this made-to-order laughing hit practically on their shelf—if it is—it is understandable that the Freres Warner scent a similar bonanza in "Ceiling Zero." That would be running up a season's batting average of .1000 in the living theater, which is a very fair average, indeed, for a company presumably primarily concerned with the production of shadows and sounds on silvered sheets.

My hope that they do it is as honest as my regret that Miss Daniels and Mr. Lyon will not be among the season's professional visitors. Perhaps they will manage to get down for a day or two of playing around after their season is over.

Director William A. Seiter has rounded up a number of Hollywood's "toughest mugs" for parts in "Man Proposes," which he is directing for Fox. The cast is headed by James Dunn and Mae Clarke and among those in support are Neil Hamilton, Sidney Toler, Warren Hymer, Stanley Fields, Ray Hatton, Jack La Rue, Madge Bellamy, Dorothy Christy, Arthur Treached, Frank Molton and Joe Sauers. All of which would be of no especial importance were it not for the fact that the story, with a newspaper background—how far back is not stated—is by Sidney Skolsky and Claude Binyon, with screen adaptation by William Hurlbut. And all this would not be of any importance, either, were not Mr. Skolsky the lad whose "Hollywood" column appears daily on this page and daily is well worth reading, if you care to keep up with first-hand doings in the fillum colony.

"Three Little Maids."

Mr. King, of the recording company whose fox terrier is still listening to his master's voice coming out of that megaphone, had heard of these three sisters, just as everybody else in their home town of New Orleans had heard of them.

Martha, the oldest, played the piano, and Vet, the youngest played the violin. Connie, the in-between, was a child prodigy as a cellist. As a matter of fact, Connie, at the age of 7, had played as soloist with the Philharmonic in the Auditorium. All three of the girls had taken up their respective instruments at the remarkably precocious age of 4.

Then, again, the Times-Picayune—that being a newspaper in the Crescent City—radio contest had brought them definitely to the fore. The sisters, in this competition, had done two groups of numbers—one of classical instrumental selections; the other, popular hits, vocally rendered. These offerings were numbers 5 and 7, respectively, in the contest. When they tied in the finals and No. 7 finally won, the sisters made a decision that has been vital in their professional career. They determined to confine their activities to popular music.

Borrowed From School.

Anyway, Mr. King still was anxious to meet them and arranged it through the principal of the high school they were attending. That is how their first audition for phonograph recording came about. As a result of this adventure, they made their first commercial recording—two songs written by Martha. "Nights When I Am Lonely" was a trio; "I'm Gonna Cry" was a solo by Connie, who remains the trio's soloist.

This excursion into a new field was made without the knowledge of their father, who was away on a business trip at the time. His surprise can be imagined when, upon entering a Pensacola, Fla., music store, he heard the familiar voices of his daughters emanating from the whirling disk of the display victrola. It seemed to him that there was something in their voices that might be construed as laughter addressed to him. He had never been what might roughly be referred to as stuck on a stage career for his daughters.

And so came about the first record and the first broadcast, which, in combination, were to exercise so dominant a part in their lives.

Tonight and tomorrow night, in Pierce Hall, Fifteenth and Harvard streets northwest, the Columbia Players will reach what they believe will mark the climax of the 13 years of distinguished effort in the interpretation of worthy plays by presenting an especially thoughtful and complete production of Chekhov's "Uncle Vanya." Prominent in the cast are Aurora Poston, Dorothea Lewis, Arthur Westover, Wayne Bobst, Elizabeth Dyer, Dorothy M. White, Joe Bourne and Wade Robinson. The curtain will rise at 8:30 sharp, and the management urges punctual attendance, as no one will be seated during the first scene of the play. Tickets may be purchased at the T. Arthur Smith Bureau, 1330 G street, or at Pierce Hall at time of performance. Reserved seats are 85 cents.

Birthday Greetings!

Mrs. Thomas Whiffen, one of the most gracious of the theater's grande dames, yesterday celebrated her ninetieth birthday anniversary at Montvale, Va., near Roanoke. She was born in London, England, on March 12, 1845, as Blanche Galton, daughter of Joseph and Mary Galton.

Mrs. Galton was a teacher of voice and assistant in the management of Covent Garden, when her daughter, at the age of 17, took a part in a musical entertainment and acquitted herself so ingloriously that her mother solemnly vowed that Blanche never again should step her foot upon a stage.

In Paris, where Blanche later was sent to study music, she became slightly irked by the monotony of constant practice and, returning to London, prevailed upon her mother to alter her decision with regard to a stage career. At 20 she made her debut, taking the part of a fairy in "Turco, the Terrible," a musical extravaganza, in the Royalty Theater.

She made a short tour following that engagement and in 1868 came to the United States as a member of the Galton Opera Co., which included her husband, whom she had married a month before. From that time until her retirement, she remained in the American theater.

Was Original Buttercup.

Her first appearance in this country was in Offenbach's "Marriage aux Lanternes," in Wood's Museum, now Daly's Theater in New York. She was the original American Buttercup in Gilbert and Sullivan's "H. M. S. Pinafore," at the Standard Theater in New York, in 1879. In 1887 she joined Daniel Frohman's company at the Lyceum Theater where she appeared in "The Wife," "Sweet Lavender," "The Charity Ball," "The Amazons," "The Benefit of the Doubt" and many other plays popular in their days.

Mrs. Whiffen was with Margaret Anglin in "Zira" in 1905 and from 1905 to 1907 with Miss Anglin and Henry Miller in "The Great Divide," which opened here in the Belasco Theater. From that period of 30 years ago, Mrs. Whiffen was a familiar and beloved figure in a long succession of the theater's foremost plays and productions.

She established her residence at the foot of the Blue Ridge many years ago. She and her daughter, Peggy Whiffen, since Mrs. Whiffen's retirement, have taken part in various dramatic productions over Station WDBJ, broadcasting out of Roanoke.

Congratulations to one of the grand old ladies of the playhouse and best wishes for many more years of peaceful reminiscence in the shadow of Virginia's picturesque hills.

Just a reminder that the Belasco Theater, now dedicated to the presentation of foreign-made motion pictures in the National Capital, this week inaugurates a now policy in the matter of opening day for its new attractions. Tomorrow and each week thereafter the Belasco will begin the showing of its new bills on Thursday. Opening tomorrow will be "Petersburg Nights," a film version of Dostoievski's "White Nights," another of the Soviet releases in this country.

Standing Offer Note.

I still will swap this morning's 15 minutes over WJSV, beginning at 10:45 by the clock, for an airplane trip to Miami Beach.

In fact, I'll even consider a flight to Palm Beach and won't ask where you got it.

Lenten Service Tonight.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Shepherdstown, W. Va., March 13. St. Peter's Luthern Church of Shepherdstown is holding a series of mid-week services during Lent. The first service will be held tomorrow evening.

The address at this meeting will be made by the Rev. F. R. Wagner, E. D., of Martinsburg.

Teamed With a Swarthy Gaucho

Having emerged from the slightly fetid atmosphere of "Marie Galante" with considerable personal acclaim, the strikingly blonde Ketti Gallian, whose likeness appears above, has been selected by Fox to play opposite the brunette and sun-tanned Warner Baxter in "The Gaucho Lover." Those who remember him in "In Old Arizona" should be easily able to visualize what sort of gaucho Mr. Baxter will make. Together, they should form a sharply contrasted and effective romantic partnership—which is probably the idea Fox had in the back of their minds.

The Lane High School Orchestra, directed by Charles Mitchell, will play. Margie Mitchell will present piano selections.

Blood of D. C. Woman Given to Save a Child

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Waynesboro, Pa., March 13.—The condition of Jacqueline, 9-year-old daughter of Dr. Fassett Edwards, remained unchanged today after several blood transfusions to save her life. The child is suffering from inflammatory rheumatism, pneumonia and a blood-stream infection.

Between 30 and 40 persons had volunteered to donate blood for transfusions. The first accepted was that of Mrs. Joseph Latimer, 1826 Sixteenth street, Washington. The second was Dr. R. G. Steiner, Waynesboro dentist. Mrs. Latimer was visiting in Waynesboro and learned of the girl's serious condition.

Auditor Says Officials Get Unauthorzied Pay

Richmond, Va., March 13 (AP). State Auditor L. McCarthy Downs, in an audit filed with the Dickenson County board of supervisors, said today that various members of the board have been receiving pay from the county for special services contrary to the State statute prohibiting such practices.

He recommended that the Commonwealth's attorney take the necessary action "to have the amounts which have been improperly drawn by the members of the board of supervisors refunded to the respective funds from which the payments were made."

Stove Blamed as House Burns.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Hagerstown, Md., March 13.—A frame house occupied by George Wilt on the farm of Herbert Bowman, at Pondsville, near here, was destroyed by fire today. The cause was attributed to an overheated stove.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Charleston, W. Va., March 13. John C. Cross, of the Federal Bureau of Narcotics in Washington, has arrived here and assumed charge of the bureau. He succeeds John J. Esch, who has been transferred to Norfolk, Va., as agent of the bureau unit there.

Hollywood

By Sidney Skolsky

Watching Them Make Pictures.

Hollywood, March 13.

DIRECTOR BILL WELLMAN and his wild troupe for "The Call of the Wild" are on location at the RKO ranch to shoot a sequence, which, when you see it on the screen, will be Dawson City, Alaska. This standing set on the ranch extends for about a half mile, and all this territory is covered with snow; studio snow of a special preparation called gypsum. This gypsum catches the rays of the hot Hollywood sun and shoots it right at your eyes. Clark Gable is wearing sun glasses. The extras wear heavy woolen shirts, fur-lined overcoats and mittens. The script girl sits at a little table with a large, gay-colored sun umbrella over her and the table. She looks like a person at Palm Beach. Director Wellman is on a platform, shouting directions through a loud speaker to his horde of actors. "This is the finish of the big dog race. I know the dog knows his part. See if you guys can be as good as the dog."

* * * *

Buck, the big St. Bernard, is placed before the heavy sled he is to pull and the extras line up to cheer the dog across the finish line. Carl Spitz, the owner and the trainer of the dog, has been walking Buck around the ranch for the past half hour so Buck will be a little tired when he plays this scene. It is the end of a gruelling race, and Buck can't appear fresh.

"Come on, Montgomery, get into this. I'm ready for you," shouts Director Wellman. "And you, too, Andy Devine. I'm ready to photograph your art." Director Wellman calls Clark Gable, Montgomery. He calls Oakie by the name of Andy Devine. It's his way of having fun. Gable and Oakie don't seem to care. Anything is apt to happen with Wellman.

* * * *

HE will tell you, through the loud speaker, that he is being very kind today. Kind to every one, even the dog. "It was only the other day," says Wellman, "that an actor sprained his ankle and I was blamed for urging him into doing it." Wellman is still holding the stick in his hand, which probably caused the actor to jump suddenly, spraining his ankle.

The scene is ready to be shot. Buck is to race about 15 yards, pulling the heavily packed sled through the gypsum, as the crowds cheer. Buck is to reach the finish line where Gable is standing, collapse, roll over, and then be picked up and petted by Clark. Wellman gives his instruction to the players and the camerman, but the instructions to Buck are given by the owner, Carl Spitz, who is dressed as one of the extras. Carl shouts to Buck to run, to run faster, and then to roll over. Carl is German, and he shouts his instructions to Buck in that language, for German is the lingo the dog understands best.

It is an exciting scene to watch. Buck follows instructions faithfully. He does everything perfectly, with the exception of cuddling up in Clark Gable's arms. He seems to believe that this a job for an actress, and not for him.

Busby Berkeley has progressed from a rehearsal of a rehearsal for a dance number for "Caliente" to the straight rehearsal. The set is a duplicate of the patio of the Casino at Agua Caliente. This first portion of this musical number will show a number of girls dancing. Then the next flash will disclose 32 chorines on white horses. These white horses will be on treadmills and will appear to be racing through the Mexican mountains. And all this is merely a small dance number which is supposed to be taking place on the tiny patio of the Casino. Even Berkeley is amused by the absurdity.

* * * *

ALTHOUGH you can see Fred Astaire dancing in his latest picture, "Roberta," Fred is already at work trying to make up dance routines for his next flicker, "Top Hat." On a sound stage, a piano player is pounding out a Berlin tune, "The Piccolimo," and Fred's feet are doing tricks to the rhythm. Astaire will stop. A man, who has been watching him, will then try to do the steps Astaire has just done. The man is Hermes Ban, a dance director. Astaire will then watch his own dance in order to improve it and improvise further. Later, Astaire and Hermes Pan will do the steps together and dance about the sound stage.

On a set representing a Dublin cobblestone street, Preston Foster and Margot Grahame, a new English importation, are playing a scene in Liam O'Flaherty's "The Informer" for Director John Ford.

* * * *

For display purposes and to lend authenticity to the set, there is displayed behind Miss Grahame a poster reading: "Theatre Royale, Dublin—'Virginia's Husband' with Francis Lister." Miss Grahame becomes very excited, for Francis Lister is her husband. In fact, Margot Grahame is in an American picture only because her husband came to this country to play in "Clive of India." Miss Grahame is a good-looking blonde with a fine talent for acting. She hasn't had any ballyhoo such as was given to Anna Sten, but will probably remain in pictures longer.

$250,000 Offered Baer to Fight Louis in Pittsburgh July 4

Garden Told To Pick Foe, Or Else

'We'll Have to Accept if They Select Man,' Says Hoffman.

Champion Won't Draw 'Color Line,' Asserts His Manager.

By the Associated Press.

Baer's manager, Ancil Hoffman, made that clear today, in announcing he had received a $250,000 offer for the champion to meet Joe Louis, sensational young Detroit Negro, in Pittsburgh on July 4.

Hoffman said he was taking the offer, made by Promoter Lew Raymond, of Pittsburgh, seriously, but could take no action until he hears from Madison Square Garden officials, to whom he gave notice yesterday to name an opponent for Baer within 30 days.

Would Have to Accept.

"It depends on what happens at the Garden," declared Hoffman. "If they name us a suitable opponent, we will have to accept. If not, we will take the next best bet."

Asked if Baer had any objections to meeting a Negro, Hoffman emphatically said:

"Certainly not. Baer is willing to fight anybody if the financial arrangements are right. I had understood that Louis did not want to meet Baer yet, but if he does, and the bout can be arranged to suit us, Max will fight him."

Hoffman explained that while Baer would like to fight two opponents this summer, his contract with the Garden calls for a bout not later than June 15.

Would Be Too Early.

"If the Garden sets a fight for that date," Hoffman said, "the suggested Fourth of July match in Pittsburgh will come a little too early."

Hoffman said he would send an immediate reply to Raymond, making the situation clear, but not refusing the offer outright.

He reiterated he is considering an offer from Walter Rotherberg, German promoter, for a bout in Hamburg or Berlin in August.

Germans Don't Want Too Much Ballyhoo

Berlin, March 13 (AP).—Although the German public is keen to have Max Baer, the heavyweight champion, come to Berlin to defend his title against Max Schmeling, Nazi sports leaders tonight were in the embarrassing position of not wanting to make too much ballyhoo of the match more than is necessary.

Baer is regarded as anti-Hitler in Germany. His quoted remark that "every punch in the eye I give Schmeling is one for Adolf Hitler" still rankles the Nazis. On the other hand, they appreciate the fact that if the bout is staged here it will be a good impetus for the 1936 Olympics, besides boosting the government's campaign to interest every German in sports.

Too Much Ballyhoo.

Ahearn Seeking Opponent for Green Monday.

LeRoy Dougan, rugged Arkansas featherweight who had been signed to do eight rounds of battle with Joe Green in a semifinal to the Frankie Wolfram-Pete DeGrasse bout at the Auditorium Monday night, pulled up with a bad hand yesterday. Matchmaker Goldie Ahearn is seeking an even higher ranking opponent for Green.

Roddy Davis and Sid Silas have been signed in another promising six-rounder. Davis, who recently conquered Roy Manley, was held to a draw by Silas in a previous bout at the Riding and Hunt Club. Another six and a four-rounder are in the making.

Nearby Racing Dates Now Conflict

Special Dispatch to The Post.

HAGERSTOWN, Md., March 13. The Hagerstown Fair Association has been informed that the State racing commission has granted a request for the ten-day spring racing meet, with the following dates: Opening Tuesday, May 21, until June 1, inclusive, with a layoff on May 26 and 27 which fall on Sunday and Monday. The fair association is expected to accept the dates, as they will give it two Saturdays and a holiday, May 30.

Edward J. Brennan will act as secretary and Mortimer M. Mahoney in charge of pari-mutuels, Vice President Harold Bester announced today. The size of the purses may be increased from $300 to $350, he said.

The decision of the fair association to accept the dates is expected to alter plans of A. J. Boyle to operate at Charles Town from May 13 to June 22. Charles Town draws heavily from Hagerstown and could not hope to draw the local crowd while the racing meet is in progress here, fair officials feel.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Charles Town, W. Va., March 13. General Manager A. J. Boyle, of the Charles Town Jockey Club, advised tonight that the dates of the Charles Town meeting would not be affected by the decision of the Hagerstown association in electing to hold their meeting May 21 to June 1. The latter track being outside of the State, the West Virginia racing commission has approved the dates of May 13, running through June 22, and plans are rapidly being completed for one of the best meets yet held.

Campbell Plans Slow Test Today

To Make Trial Regardless of Beach's Condition.

By the Associated Press.

Daytona Beach, Fla., March 13.—Sir Malcolm Campbell was recovered enough today from an attack of influenza to decide on a test run tomorrow morning regardless of the condition of the beach.

He said he would take out Bluebird, which set a new record of 276.816 a week ago, and merely run her for adjustments at no more than 150 miles an hour, probably in first and second speed all the way. He has asked no timing traps be set up, and he wants flags along only 3 miles of the course.

Beach conditions still were bad, though a northeast wind was blowing. Campbell said he was prepared to stay here as late as March 23, possibly later, waiting for his 300-mile-an-hour beach.

Maureen Orcutt Wins Her Way to Semifinals

Belleair, Fla., March 13 (AP).—Maureen Orcutt, Englewood, N. J., struck a real stride today after taking a six on the first hole of her match with Marian Miley in the Belleair women's golf tournament and defeated the Lexington (Ky.) girl, 7 and 5.

Miss Miley, the defending champion, had little chance against the 39 Miss Orcutt shot on the first nine and was five down at the turn.

By defeating Dorothy Gardner, 17, of Steubenville, Ohio, 5 and 4, Bernice Wall, experienced tournament player from Oshkosh, Wis., earned the right to meet Miss Orcutt in the semifinals.

Jean Bauer, Providence, R. I., and Frances Hadfield, Milwaukee, Wis., are the other semifinalists. Miss Bauer won a 3 and 2 victory over Peggy Wattles, Buffalo, N. Y., after leading by four holes at the turn.

Eddie Tolan Captures World's Sprint Crown

Melbourne, March 13 (AP).—Eddie Tolan, former University of Michigan track star and Olympic 100 and 200 meter champion, won the world professional sprint championship today by finishing first in the 220-yard dash, final event of the meeting, in 21½ seconds.

Three victories and one third-place finish gave the Negro speedster a total of 16 points. Austin Robertson, of Australia, who previously held the title, finished second to Tolan in the 220 today to become runner-up for the meeting.

Whitney's Rod and Gun Wins Chase in England

Cheltenham, England, March 13. J. H. Whitney's Rod and Gun, at 100 to 8, won the National Hunt Steeplechase, worth £1,000, today. Rod and Gun finished ahead of T. Holland Martin's Evasiomon, at 10 to 1; C. R. Taylor's Kirkwall, at 5 to 1, and 19 others over the 4-mile course.

By the Associated Press.

MIAMI, Fla., March 13.—A home run, with the bases full, by Arthur "Skinny" Graham, rookie outfielder, gave the Boston Red Sox a 7-to-5 decision over the New York Giants in an exhibition baseball game today.

The circuit blow came in the seventh inning with Al Smith, third of the Giant pitchers, on the mound and the National Leaguers leading, 5 to 3. The New Yorkers had their big inning in the fourth when they scored three runs as Hank Leiber and Hughie Critz poled out triples off Gordon Rhodess.

The Giants outhit the Red Sox, 12 to 5, with Dick Bartell getting three of the blows, all singles.

Bradenton, Fla., March 14 (AP).—Charley Gelbert, out of competition for two years with an injured leg, returned to the St. Louis Cardinals' line-up today as the Philadelphia Athletics, aided by eight bases on balls, defeated the world champions, 7 to 3.

Playing the last three innings, Gelbert handled the ball only once and then he dropped it on a throw at second for one of the Cards' four errors. At the plate he twice hit into forced plays.

The Cardinals did all their scoring off Vernon Wilshere, rookie southpaw, being held scoreless by Alton Benton and Bill Dietrich. Bill Hallahan hurled the first three innings for the champions and limited the American Leaguers to three hits and one run.

Stewart Hits Paying Own Expenses

Irked by Delay, Griffith Asserts That 'Matter Is Closed.

By Shirley L. Povich.

A Staff Correspondent.

BILOXI, Miss., March 13.—Walter Stewart's hold-out gestures are being made in a losing cause as a result of circumstances beyond his control. The veteran pitcher, who has refused to accept Owner Clark Griffith's demands that he train at his own expense, is fated to stay out of baseball or meet the Washington Club owner's terms.

Stewart's misfortune is that he is balking at a time when the pitching situation on the Washington Club is extremely gratifying, with his presence with the team no longer deemed vital—thus Griffith's insistence that Stewart pay the penalty for his delay in signing.

The pitcher's acceptance of Griffith's $7,000 salary offer failed to appease the Nats' owner, who, irked at Stewart's 12-day delay in reporting here, demanded that he train at his own expense until Manager Harris was satisfied he was in condition to pitch.

Is Flatly Rejected.

After dispatching a telegram to Stewart today, in which he said he hoped Stewart would change his mind and report, Griffith declared that the matter was closed, and that he was content to start the season without the southpaw's services. Griffith is fighting his battle with Stewart from the vantage point of increased pitching strength as a result of the addition of Ed Linke and Bump Hadley to the staff, and the near-sensational development of a batch of rookies.

Harris Not Worried.

"I'm not worried about a lack of left-handers," said Harris today. "With Whitehill and Burke in shape, and fellows like Syd Cohen and Leon Pettit coming along beautifully, we'll be left-handed enough. As a matter of fact, I don't care whether we have more than one good left-hander on the team. Those clubs that used to be so left-handed in the batting order like the old Yankees, aren't around any more. A right-hander figures to beat 'em as well as a southpaw."

The history of baseball hold-outs is distinctly against Stewart. Sooner or later the bulk of 'em begin to yearn for a job and the semi-monthly pay check. Griffith is confident that Stewart will report, but he sounds truly serious when he says he doesn't really care.

Bucky Harris took advantage of the best day in more than a week to work his ball players overtime

Feary, Extended, Wins In A. A. U. Ring Bout

Willie Feary, Olympic Club 135-pounder and favorite to win the lightweight championship in the A. A. U. tournament, came through with a close decision over Harry Dorn, of the Northeast Boys Club, last night at Catholic University. Dorn offered Feary more of a battle than the Southwest boy had anticipated.

Tardugno in Victory.

Billy Tardugno, of the perennial Italian tribe of punch pushers, opened the festivities auspiciously by hammering out a close decision over Harry Cecchini, Northeast Boys Club, in a rousing featherweight battle. Off to a flying start, the ring remained a hectic battleground for the rest of the night, with punches trading hands continuously.

Lyle Wright, brother of the retired local middleweight Cary Wright, and Bertrand France, Northeast Boys Club, were next in the fighting pit in one of the two three-round contests carded on the program. France carried off the decision after much excited swat swapping.

Bob Mathias, Olympic A. C., lightweight, and Joe Davis, of the Northeast Boys Club, staged a miniature Battle of the Marne. Davis disregarded Mathias' vaunted right-hand punch and waded in constantly to take the decision.

Feary Is Extended.

Willie Feary, outstanding contender for the lightweight championship, met with unexpected opposition at the hands of Harry Dorn, Northeast Boys' Club. The Olympic boy kept hammering away with both fists, however, until he finally slowed the rough and rugged Dorn down to a slow canter. Then Willie romped home to the well-deserved decision.

Mike Morton, Washington Boys Club, flurried his way to decision over Willie Bragg of the Olympics in an entertaining lightweight bout. Mike allowed Willie to punch himself out against his elbows and arms, then spurted with effective punches which entitled him to the award he received.

Barney Hopper, an unattached young gentleman desirous of fisticuffing in the welterweight division, lasted exactly 45 seconds against Max Miller in the night's first clean knockout bout. Miller floored Hopper with a long left hook to the jaw about 30 seconds after the battle began. Hopper took nine and rose to take a nicely-placed right hand to the jaw which laid him out colder than a police reporter's heart. Poor Barney was still out when they carried him from the ring.

Fort Myer Team Tops Fort Meade

Fort Myer qualified to meet Fort Monroe for the Third Corps Area basket ball championship last night by staging a whirlwind finish in the last six minutes of play to defeat Fort Meade, 34 to 25, at the Heurich Gymnasium. The winners will play Fort Monroe at 8 p. m. Friday at Heurich's.

Fort Myer was tied, 14-14, with Meade but slipped in the third quarter and with six minutes to play was trailing, 20 to 14. Gans and McKeever opened basket barrages at this stage and Fort Myer had the situation well in hand at the close. Bands from each post were in attendance as were the commanding officers, Col. John R. Brewer, of Fort Meade, and Col. R. A. Joyce and Col. J. L. Deeves, of Fort Myer.

Penn Downs Columbia For Court Title, 35-34

New Brunswick, N. J., March 13 (AP).—Pennsylvania won the Eastern Intercollegiate Basket Ball League championship tonight by defeating Columbia, 35 to 34, in a play-off game on the neutral Rutgers University court. The teams ended the regular season in a tie.

Eastern's Five Will Play at Glens Falls

Capital Champions Are Given Permission for N. Y. Tourney Trip.

EASTERN HIGH'S basket ball team, beaten only once in 25 games this season by a high school and holding a decisive victory over that team, was granted permission by Superintendent of Schools Frank W. Ballou yesterday to compete in the annual Eastern States championships at Glens Falls, N. Y., week after next.

Principal Charles Hart received a definite invitation to the tournament Tuesday morning and immediately asked permission of Superintendent Ballou to make the trip. All expenses are paid by the tournament sponsors. Superintendent Ballou conferred with Assistant Superintendent Stephen E. Kramer before giving his approval.

Accompanied by Coach Charlie Guyon and probably Assistant Principal John Paul Collins, the team will leave Washington a week from next Wednesday afternoon and arrive in Glens Falls Thursday morning. The tournament, bringing together the foremost State championship teams in the East, including four public high champions, two prep school champions and two parochial school champions, extends through Saturday. Eight players will make the trip.

While something of a surprise in view of Eastern's having been eliminated in the recent Washington and Lee University tournament, the decision to compete in the big Eastern classic is clearly justifiable. John Marshall High, of Richmond, the team which sprang a stunning upset at the W. & L. event by beating out Eastern in the second round by 3 points had already been defeated by the Lincoln Parkers, 34 to 24, on the Richmonders' home floor.

Capital Sees O'Mahoney Tonight

Irish Mat Ace Battles Grobmier; Check Your Shillelahs.

Rivals Are Specialists in Holds; Zaharias in Preliminary.

By George Considine.

SHURE, St. Patrick's Day isn't until Sunday, but Promoter Joe Turner will beat other shamrock parties to the punch when he throws his shindig tonight at the Auditorium.

In harmony with the general tenor of the occasion, Mister Daniel O'Mahoney has been selected as guest of honor. Inasmuch as there has been an epidemic of pseudo-Irishmen in mat circles, the public will be pleased to know that Danno is a bona fight Mick. Why, back thar in the ould country he is recognized as the strongest young feller produced by good old County Cork, begorrah.

Opposing the highly touted O'Mahoney is no less a personality than Fearless Fred Grobmier, elongated farmer boy out of Ioway. The story is going around that the fearless one boasts a personal peeve whenever confronted by a noble son of Erin. Be that as it may, Grobmier will provide the big, handsome Irisher with the warmest session of his American career. He said so himself.

Those Spectacular Holts.

The two most spectacular holts in the whole ear-scrambling industry will be brought into play as these stalwarts huff and puff in approved union manner. Whereas Freddy makes expert use of a devastating Japanese frog scissors, which is extremely effective and punishing, the O'Mahoney's famed Irish whip is said to be even more breath-taking and every bit as torturous. Needless to say, a bountiful display of blood and thunder seems inevitable. Aintcha glad?

Seeing as how it is such a special occasion, our genial host (Daddy Joe, to you) has lined up a semi-final of no small pumpkins. George (the Greek) Zaharias, king of naughty rasslemen, will match his wits and sinew against those of 315-pound Tor Johanson, the Swedish chumpeen. The latter is so ponderous that he was recently mistaken for a crowd of sight-seers.

Zaharias Is Serious.

Seriously, though, it might be said in behalf of the puny pachyderm that at one of Turner's recent shows he all but outmuscled his royal nibs, Ed (Don) George. That's all right, eh, Keed? At least Master George Zaharias won't be guilty of underestimation, for he has requested the powers that be to card this joust along one-fall-to-a-finish

Ticket Speculators a Worry; They're Cats, We're Mice!

By Paul Gallico.

A Special Correspondent.

NEW YORK, March 13.—This column might be entitled "Are we mice or are we men?" but the answer, "Mice," is unfortunately obvious in any column about ticket speculators, and would make the rest of the column unnecessary. And, my friends, when you do one of these a day you have no idea how important the rest of the piece is after you have written the first three lines. Therefore, we will pass up that apt title and tell you our troubles. We are, dear reader, ridden with speculator trouble, and ridden badly.

And the reason I am airing our troubles in this piece today is because this column is now syndicated nationally and maybe some of the folks from out of town, from Frisco, or Chicago, Harrisburg or Detroit, Boston or St. Louis, Buffalo or Washington can help us out and tell us what to do. Or don't they have speculators out in those parts? How, my worshiped and helpful readers, is one to sell tickets for a successful show and not have the speculators gouge the public by buying seats in advance and then selling them under your nose at piratical prices?

In our town, the speculator is king. I wonder if he has the same foothald throughout the country. Why is he king? Because, brethren, we aren't men, but mice. We've let him get a foothold here; we encourage him; we stand for him, and we patronize him. I do it myself. I never go to the box office to buy tickets to the theater. I call up my broker and tell him what I want to see and where I want to sit. I get the seats when and where I want them. And I pay the extra dollar or two dollars for the service. But then I've always been a mouse. So are you, my fellow townsmen.

I remember many years ago, when I was a boy, the ticket specu-

Purple Knight Is Easy Winner in Tropical Park Sprint Race

Quickly Fails After Fast Break

Wright Rides Chatuga to Win in Opener; Long Shots Score.

By the Associated Press.

TROPICAL PARK, Fla., March 13.—Good priced winners ruled here today as followers of the popular Jockey Wayne Wright failed to meet with their accustomed success. The Idaho boy's admirers began the day well enough when their hero rode Chatuga, a good thing, first home, but in the three remaining races that he rode, all astride favorites, Wright was unable to click.

The J. E. Widener contract rider was unplaced on Dnieper in the third; the same with My Purchase in the fourth, and finally second with Quickly in the featured graded handicap class "B," fifth on the card.

Quickly was unable to match the high speed of H. C. McGehee's Purple Knight, which ran the 6 furlongs of the headline attraction in 1:12 flat to beat the J. E. Smallman color bearer by four lengths. Elwood Sachsenmaier's West Main lost the place by a half length. The winner paid $15.30.

Quickly Breaks Ahead.

Quickly outbroke her field, but Purple Knight, ridden by Bobby Merritt, quickly joined the favorite and drew into a long advantage after the first quarter-mile. Quickly had all she could do to save the place from the slow-starting West Main.

Jesse Spencer, veteran horseman from Louisville, Ky., put over one of the outstanding good things of the Florida season in the first race here today. The medium of the heavy play was the 3-year-old filly Chatuga, which had not started since last fall at Churchill Downs, Louisville. With Wayne Wright riding, Chatuga opened at 10 to 1 on the approximate odds board, but her price came down steadily until she paid off at $5.90 for $2. The daughter of Cherokee took an early lead, opened up a half-dozen lengths and was just coasting in the stretch to win by three lengths. Teddy Carl broke last and picked up all but the winner, saving the place by a half length from Seminole Queen. The Aenead ran below form.

Newell went postward a heavy favorite for the second race, a mile test for ordinary 3-year-olds. The gelding finished in the ruck while two old-fashioned long shots were disputing the issue. Broken Up, ridden by Apprentice Lindberg, scored by a length to pay $65.80, while Rare Ben was an easy second over Winged Flight, returning $29.10 for place. Newell flattered his backers until approaching the stretch turn, where he stopped. Rare Ben assumed a daylight lead, only to succumb to the closing bid of Broken Up.

Edward Riley Bradley's silks were borne to an easy score by the Blue Larkspur filly Banish Fear in the graded handicap class C, a dash of 6 furlongs that occupied fourth position on the card. Don Meade hustled the $11.80 hazard along from the start and never was in danger, winning by four lengths. Hank MacTavish closed with a rush to take second money by a head from Erebus. My purchase faded after threatening around the bend.

Reds Beat Colt Team.

Tampa, Fla., March 13 (AP).—Hitting its stride, the Cincinnati Reds team of rookie-regulars today banged out a 4-to-3 victory over a so-called Colt team in a practice game. The Colts had seven of last year's regulars in the lineup.

Each team gathered seven hits, but Mize doubled and Sammy Byrd tripled to help the Rookie-Regular cause.

Manager Chuck Dressen watched fromthe stands, still groggy from the blow on the head suffered yesterday as a bat slipped from the hands of Harlan Pool.

Burnett at Shorstop.

West Palm Beach, Fla., March 13 (AP).—Rogers Hornsby, who is trying to find a place in the St. Louis Brown infield for Johnny Burnett, because of the latter's hitting ability, today watched the former Cleveland player work out at shortstop.

"Hitting is what we want on this ball club," quoth the Rajah after pondering on yesterday's game with the Giants, lost 1 to 0 when the Brownies made but six scattered hits. Manager Hornsby spent most of today's practice period schooling his men in base running.

Urbanski Hits Two Homers.

St. Petersburg, Fla., March 13 (U.P.). Bill Urbanski led a home-run attack with two circuit smashes in a wild baseball game today between the regulars and Yannigans of Boston Braves. The regulars won by 11 to 1. In all, five circuit smashes were pounded out. One by Joe Mowrey in the ninth saved the rookies from a shutout.

Howell Will Start.

Lakeland, Fla., March 13 (U.P.).—Millard (Dixie) Howell, former football star at Alabama, today earned a starting berth with the Detroit Tigers against the Philadelphia Phils in their exhibition game tomorrow.

Howell drove in one run and scored the other of two made by the rookies in losing by 8 to 2, and looked so good that he will play regularly for at least a week, although Third Baseman Marvin Owens will report tomorrow.

Derringer Shows Form.

Tampa, Fla., March 13 (U.P.).—Pitcher Paul Derringer made his first start of the spring for the regular today and pitched three innings of hitless ball

Leland, Agriculture, Sherwood and Bethesda Girls Winners

J. C. C. Loses In Upset, 32 to 14

Young Democrats Drop Thriller, 21 to 18; Virginians Routed.

The big upset of the night was provided by the yellow-clad girls of Leland, an aggregation of Chevy Chase School players, who eliminated the favored Jewish Community Center lassies, 32 to 14.

Bethesda-Chevy Chase, with Elsie Winkler scoring 15 field and 5 foul goals for 35 points, routed the Virginians, 39 to 19, displaying great ability in all departments of play.

The Sherwood team, entry from Sandy Spring, Md., walloped United Typewriter Grays, 25 to 7, and the Agriculture girls put out Young Democrats of Falls Church, Va., 21 to 18, in the most thrilling game on the program.

Hamas last Sunday, particularly since the negotiations for Baer's coming have not been completed. Failure there would be as embarrassing as would success in view of Baer's Jewish blood and the banning of his picture, "The Prize Fighter and the Lady."

Walter Rothenberg, who promoted last Sunday's fight, told the Associated Press today he and Baer have agreed on $300,000 as Baer's price.

Ross-Ambers Fight Sought in New York

New York, March 13 (U.P.).—The Twentieth Century Sporting Club, arch rival of Madison Square Garden for control of the Metropolitan fight game, will ask the boxing commission Friday for permission to stage the Barney Ross-Lou Ambers lightweight title battle at the Polo Grounds early in June.

This permission probably will be granted, according to present indications, but only after the Garden's claims to the big money match have been battered down.

The Twentieth Century Club, formed recently to promote for the powerful Milk and Christmas Funds, has Ross wrapped up tighter than a Nile mummy with contracts assuring his sole services. But Jimmy Johnston, of the Garden, has first call on the performances of challenger Ambers.

Funkstown, Company B Clash in Crucial Game

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Hagerstown, Md., March 13.—Funkstown, by virture of its victory over the Woodman of the World in an overtime contest, won the right to meet Company B next Tuesday in a contest which will go a long way toward deciding the winner of the second half in the Washington County Basket Ball League.

If Funkstown wins, the regular season will end in a tie, with another game necessary between the two teams to decide the winner of the second half. The winner will meet the Woodmen of the World, winner of the first half, for the county championship.

Cumberland's Boxers Win in Casey Program

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Cumberland, Md., March 13.—Cumberland's amateur boxing colony, led by the Parker brothers—Delton and Joey—performed with credit in the SS. Peter and Paul gym as the Casey A. A. staged the second of its "New Deal" ring cards.

Not all of the local glovemen came through with victories in their bouts with out-of-town foes, but the Parkers copped the feature battles and Gilbert Becker and "Chick" Harbell punched their way to decisions in other inter-city tussles.

Hamas Visits Hitler.

Hamburg, Germany, March 13 (U.P.).—Steve Hamas, New Jersey heavyweight, who was technically knocked out in nine rounds by Max Schmeling Sunday, will visit Reichsfuehrer Adolf Hitler at Obersalzberg tomorrow. Hamas, accompanied by Fred Kirsch, German newspaperman, will leave by plane tomorrow.

Girls Defeat Boys.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Cumberland, Md., March 13.—The Celanese A. A. girls' basket ball team defeated the Hi-De-Ho boys, 35-32, at Lonaconing last night. Half the game was played under boys' rules and the other under girls'.

Maryland Nine Opens Drill Today

BASEBALL practice begins in earnest for Maryland diamond squad this afternoon at College Park, after a lengthy delay because of unfavorable weather. The Terps open with Cornell on the home lot April 3, and there is much work to be done in the interim.

The team was hit hard by the temporary loss of Lyman McAboy, who broke a hand boxing and will not be available for a month at least, and Coach Zurt Shipley also could use a flock of pitchers. Steve Physioc is the only dependable hurler back.

Chumbris Is Shifted.

The situation has been alleviated to some extent by Pete Chumbris' switch from the outfield to the box. Young Chumbris twirled infrequently on the sandlots and may prove valuable as a relief worker. He'll divide his time between fielding and pitching.

Shipley hopes to plug the gap at first, caused by "Spider" Chase's graduation, with "King-Kong" Keller, a promising sophomore with a fair-sized batting average. With Dick Nelson back at shortstop and Bob Love returning to pitch, the Terps have the nucleus for another strong team.

April 6 Meeting Set By Virginia Golf Body

Richmond, Va., March 13 (AP).—Secretary F. J. D. Mackay announced today that the annual meeting of the Virginia State Golf Association had been set tentatively for April 6.

With more than the usual doubt about the awarding of tournaments, the meeting is expected to draw more than usual interest. It has been indicated that the State amateur probably will go west, with Roanoke and Hot Springs both willing to stage it. Richmond probably will get the women's amateur.

Problem Offered By Speculators

lator used to be a seedy-looking individual who stood outside the doors of the theaters with a bundle of 10 or 12 tickets that he had managed to dig out of the box office by some subterfuge or other. Today the ticket speculator owns whole shows that he has bought in advance for six or eight months. Today he buys blocks of seats months in advance, if he can, for every kind of sporting event. He has baseball tickets, football, boxing, bicycle, tennis. He has become an important and powerful industry, mainly because of mice. The mice are us. People prefer to go to the specs than to stay home.

One good three-month session of staying home and the speculators would be out of business. But mice don't stay home. If they did there wouldn't be any use for cats, except to string fiddles with, and I will debate that point with you some quiet Sunday afternoon. (Note to the friends and lovers of cats of the United States, Inc.: Please don't write me an indignant letter abusing me as an anticat fiend. I was merely trying to make a point. A columnist has to be so careful about treading on people's toes.)

No, when the girl friend drops the hint that she wants to see this show, or that, we call up the spec and that's that. I wonder is it that way in other towns. Recently we concluded our ninth Annual Golden Gloves at Madison Square Garden with another sell-out. And the speculators were there with their bundles of tickets, gouging the citizens on the street and getting as high as $2.50 premium on a single ticket. Where did they get them? We checked. We knew where every section had been allocated.

In response to our plea during the contests in Madison Square Garden, victims mailed us their stubs so we could check and find out whence these tickets came. And with but one exception, they were in sections and locations sold through the box-office window. The one exception was a mail reservation that came in on what looked like legitimate business stationery. When the window sale was opened, the hungry speculators sent their diggers to the window and bought them in pairs of two.

West Virginia Sets Boxing Tourney

Evenly Balanced Event Is Predicted for Annual Card Next Week.

MORGANTOWN, W. Va., March 13.—"The most evenly balanced tournament we have ever had," is Coach Eddie Vacheresse's prediction for the fourth annual boxing event to be staged at Men's Field House here Friday and Saturday, March 22 and 23.

"West Virginia, with a Conference championship team, has only two favorites among her probable seven entrants," continued Vacheresse. "These are Puglia, 115-pounder, and Welch, 125-pounder. Puglia has never lost a fight and is probably the best collegiate bantamweight in America today." Welch, according to Vacheresse, has won decisively in his 125-pound-class bouts this year, from some high-class competition.

Pitt Stars Compete.

Pitt will have five or six boxers, and among them Giannatti, 135-pounder, Spiegle, 145-pounder, have been consistent winners during the present season. Staughton, 175-pounder, won from Temple and Wisconsin, and Paslowski, 125-pounder, won from W. & J. and Navy. These four are real contenders for individual titles.

W. & J. is the real "dark horse" of the tournament. The Presidents beat Bucknell 5—2, the same margin as West Virginia secured over the Bisons. Likewise, they best Carnegie Tech 5—2, as compared to a 6—1 decision by West Virginia over the Plaid.

Duquesne has a favorite in Roseto; Bucknell a conference champion in Pethick, and Capt. Kulesz, of Carnegie, who took Eddie Salerno, the Mountaineer "knockout" artist into camp here last week, is one of the finest boxers ever to show his wares in the Field House.

Dixie Tourneys Report Boost In Receipts

14,815 Paid $9,401 to See Four Title Events in Conference.

By the Associated Press.

RICHMOND, March 13.—While the shekels are still being counted down at Raleigh, where the Southern Conference basket ball tournament was held, receipts from four other loop tournaments totaled today almost $2,000 more than last year's gate.

Four conference shows lured 14,815 persons, who paid $9,401.50 to watch Virginia's Cavaliers win their fourth consecutive boxing championship, North Carolina's Tarheels take their second straight in indoor track, V. M. I. upset Washington and Lee for the team title in wrestling, and Washington and Lee win the swimming championship. The four tournaments grossed $7,462.17 last year.

Led by a vast crowd of 10,000 persons, who paid approximately $8,000—the gate was $7,000 last year—to witness the boxing tournament at the University of Virginia, the crowds were bigger and better, financially, at all of the conference shows.

New Wrestling High.

Wrestling hit a new high with 1,718 persons who paid $859 to see Virginia Military's cadets upset Washington and Lee's mat supremacy, while 2,000 persons—double last year's crowd—paid $494 to witness the record-toppling track meet at Chapel Hill. Wrestling grossed $193 last year and indoor track $254.

A change of locale helped swimming. Shifted from the University of Virginia to Duke at Durham, the tournament drew 97 persons, who paid $48.50, as compared with a gross of $14.25 last season.

If basket ball followed the trend of the other tournament sports, the conference will have a tidy sum in the treasury when the next report is made.

More Seats Provided.

The increased attendance at the boxing tournament wasn't due to any increase in interest—there was a capacity crowd for the finals a year ago—but to the fact that additional seats were provided for the last big night of punch trading.

Wrestling's rising importance was shown by the unprecedented crowd of 1,718 persons who more than paid the bill for the tournament and left a tidy net profit of $263 after all tournament expenses and traveling expenses of the athletes were paid. It was a far cry from the early history of wrestling in the conference, when some of the shows were conducted at a loss.

Massanutten Tankmen Swamp Western Team

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Several pool records were smashed. Joe Nunzig, back-stroke ace of the Cadet team, bettered Charlie Diehl's record of last year, while Bob Hytowitz, captain of the Purple and Gold team, covered the 100-yard free-style distance by three-fifths of a second.

220-yard free style—Won by Hytowitz (Massanutten); second, Hewrinchuck (Massanutten); third, Brown (Western). Time, 2:42.4.

100-yard back stroke—Won by Nunzig (Massanutten); second, Moynelo (Western); third, O'Brien (Massanutten). Time, 1:04.1. (Pool record.)

Fancy diving—Won by Lacombe (Massanutten); second, Gabriel (Massanutten); third, Harding (Western).

The Central Y. M. C. A. junior swimming team will swim the junior team of the York (Pa.) Y. M. C. A., Saturday afternoon, at York. Washington was defeated earlier in the season by the Pennsy youngsters and are out to even the count. Those to make the trip are Kenneth Kinsella, George Hutton, Edgar Sheppard, Edward Griffin, Charles Gastrock, Richard Baker, Robert Grissett, Bruce Etchison and Chris Mallady.

3 Indoor Captains Named at V. M. I.

Basket Ball, Wrestling and Ring Teams Elect.

By the Associated Press.

Lexington, Va., March 13.—Three captains of V. M. I. indoor teams elected today are: Basket ball, Frank MacLaughlin Raffo, guard, of Richmond. Wrestling, Archie Hanna Witt, 135 pounds, of Birmingham, Ala. Boxing, Robert Watkins Boyd, 145 pounds, of Covington.

All three leaders are members of the junior class who did not compete regularly as sophomores, but developed into regulars during the past season.

Raffo was the defensive star on the basket ball five and Boyd boxed well as a welterweight after starting the season in a heavier division. Witt engaged in no dual meets last year, but was runner-up in the Southern Conference tourney. This season he won four out of five bouts in dual meets and captured the 135-pound title by scoring two falls in the conference meet.

Waynesboro Five Takes Loop Title

Defeats Martinsburg High by 22-to-21 Score.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Hagerstown, Md., March 13.—Waynesboro High School won the Cumberland Valley Athletic League basket ball title here tonight by defeating Martinsburg High, 22 to 21. The game was a play-off, the regular season having finished in a tie.

The half ended 12 to 10, and at the beginning of the last quarter Martinsburg had increased its lead to 21-16. Martinsburg failed to score another point from then on, while Waynesboro scored 6.

Lefty Jewett Signed By Winchester Team

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Winchester, March 13.—Lefty Jewett, of Washington, who for five seasons managed a winning team at Front Royal, has been signed by the Winchester Park Association to serve as field manager of the local nine next season, it was announced today. Jewett last year was a member of the Culpeper squad.

Paul Carper has been elected business manager of the Park nine and announced that play is expected to open on April 27. The Park nine last year turned in a creditable record, and it is believed a strong team will be in the field for the curtain raiser. The presence of Jewett is expected to strengthen the local pitching staff.

Celtics to Meet Columbia Five

Alexandria Rivals Play in Benefit Game.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

ALEXANDRIA, Va., March 13.—St. Mary's Celtics clash with the Columbia Firefighters Saturday night at Armory Hall in a benefit game that unofficially will decide the unlimited basket ball championship of this city. The preliminary, at 7:15, features a senior loop game between the Alexandria Light Infantry and Post fives.

The Celts originally were scheduled to travel to Manassas, but canceled when it was revealed that the proceeds of the Columbia game would go toward the education of an Alexandria boy now in college.

Previous attempts to get the two teams together in a city championship series have failed due to financial differences.

The Washington Post Juniors tightened their grip on first place in the city junior loop today, when they defeated the Celtics in a well-played game, 14-10. In the other league game the Pirates upset the Times-Herald five, 18-13.

Sophomores Annex Shepherdstown Event

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Shepherdstown, W. Va., March 13.—The first intra-mural basket ball tournament of Shepherdstown Teachers College was held here today. The tournament was sponsored by the Y. M. C. A. The championship game was won by the Sophomore A. B. class, which defeated the Freshman Normal class by the score of 19 to 18. Dearmont was the outstanding player for the winners, while Heines and Crook starred for the losers.

All-Star Fives Are Picked in Maryland

Mt. St. Mary's Places Trio on Collegiate Loop Selections.

By the Associated Press.

BALTIMORS, March 13.—Mount St. Mary's College, now tied with Loyola in the play-off championship series, placed three men on the first quintet of the All-Star players of the Maryland Collegiate Basket Ball League.

Tom Carney, Loyola star guard, however, stopped the vote of all the players and the Greyhounds got two men on the second team. St. John's College, tied with Johns Hopkins for the foot of the league, captured the other first team selection and placed one of the second, with Washington and Western Maryland completing the line-up.

The selections were made from a censensus of nominations given the Associated Press by the coaches of the league and the sports writers of the State. Earlier in the day the selections of all State teams by all the Maryland coaches and sports writers were announced.

Carney Gets 11 Points.

Carney was given 11 points, being picked for the first team on all but one of the lists of nominations submitted. He easily demonstrated his right to the position, being a strong defensive player throughout the season, an important part of his team's offensive and third high scorer of the league.

The choice for the other guard position was close. Red Lynch, of Mount St. Mary's, and Pete Mergo, of Western Maryland, were given seven points each for the position. Lynch, however, had three nominations for the first team and also three points for forward. Mergo had two first-team designations and two more points for forward.

Vince Hopkins and Joe Sagadelli, the other two Mount St. Mary's stars, were predominating choices for center and forward, respectively. Each received nine votes, Hopkins getting four nominations for the first team and Sagadelli three.

Tie For Other Berth.

Lambros, of St. John's, and Salter, of Washington, ended in a tie for the other forward berth with five points apiece. Lambros, however, was given two nominations for the first team to Salter's one. Donohue, of St. John's, got the second team guard post. Taneyhill, of Loyola, was runner-up to Hopkins for center and Colvin, of Loyola, took the second forward position.

Siegel, of Johns Hopkins; Fowble, of Western Maryland, and Ward, of Washington, were given one nomination each for forward on the first team and Benjamin, of Western Maryland, had one for center. Washington and Western Maryland had full teams of five men mentioned.

The all-league guard assignments on both teams were identical to the selections for the all-State teams, but Sagadelli was the only league player to get a forward position.

Buzz Borries Choice.

Fred (Buzz) Borries, Navy's All-American football back, was a unanimous choice of all the State coaches and writers for the first all-State team. He got three nominations for center, his usual position, and the others evenly divided between forward and guard. Hopkins, of Mount St. Mary's, was the second team center.

Dusty Dornin, Navy's star forward, was rated for the first team on all but one list of nominations, while Vic Probst, University of Baltimore star and leading scorer of the State, got the other forward berth. Al Waters, of the University of Maryland, paired up with Sagadelli on the second team.

Mergo was the high scorer of the league, finishing the season with a total of 116 points. He and Sagadelli each got 47 field goals, but the former added 22 fouls and the latter nine. Foul shooting honors went to Siverd, of Johns Hopkins, with 24, one more than Salter, of Washington.

Gonzaga, G. U. Prep Place Two, St. John's One on Star Five

By John R. Vosburgh.

TRUSTING in the belief that the finest players do not always make the champion, The Post has selected on its 1935 All-Private High School Team only one member of the title-winning aggregation from St. John's, while the runners-up, Gonzaga and Georgetown Prep, are given two selections apiece.

So well balanced were the fast-traveling Johnnies that only Bill Counselman, its high-scoring forward, stood out as an individual sufficiently to be given the call for the All-Star five. Billy Dettweiler, Georgetown Prep's baseball and golf captain, was selected to pair up at the other forward position with Lloyd Rice, of the Prep, at center and Phil Roache and Jimmy Durkin, of Gonzaga, at the guard assignments.

Though a center, Roache, accomplished at any position, was too good to overlook and would go as well at guard as at the pivot post. Counselman, Dettweiler, Roache and Rice were considerably easier choices to make than Durkin, who was given a close battle for the fifth position by Jim Hanley, of Gonzaga; Bob O'Shaughnessy, of Georgetown Prep, and Mike Simone and Regis, of St. John's.

Durkin's superb defensive work, however, and his top-notch floor game offset the fact that his scoring was considerably less than some of the other competitors. Each of the three coaches, Joe Gardner of Georgetown Prep, Orrell Mitchell of Gonzaga and Irving Holbrook of St. John's, spoke well of him.

Hughes Spalding, of Georgetown Prep, was another outstanding guard, while Hanley, of Gonzaga, a sophomore forward, was one of the best scorers in the league. Vincent McHugh and Simone, of St. John's, were other good guards.

There was little difference between Roach and Rice at center and Rice was given the call largely because of jumping proclivities, outstretching his rival consistently on the tap-off. Roache was the highest scorer in the series, with 41 points for 6 games, an average of 8.2 points a game. Counselman tallied an average of 8.16 points a game, with Hanley third, with 26 in 4 games.

Dettweiler, who kept Gonzaga from the championship by scoring the winning basket for Georgetown Prep in the last league game between the schools, was another able scorer, making 26 points. Fast and shifty, the young three-sport star, would pair nicely at forward with Counselman.

St. John's in six games scored 26 points, a few decimal points better than did Gonzaga per game.

Stocks Record Slight Gains In Day's Trade

U. S. Steel Dips to 29, Low Since 1933, but Later Recovers.

By the Associated Press.

New York, March 13.—The stock market managed to end today's session with a small net gain, as measured by price averages, for the first time within a week. Nevertheless, the market was a nervous, fretful affair, and its recovery was uneven and lacked vigor. Considerable selling in isolated issues had to be absorbed during the earlier hours before an upward tendency in leading issues became apparent.

Several stocks again penetrated new lows for the past year or two, and declines outnumbered advances at the finish, for the recovery in more active issues did not get under way decisively soon enough to pull the bulk of the list up before the close.

Trading was relatively active. The turnover of 1,076,320 shares was the largest since last Thursday. The Associated Press price average of 60 leading issues gained 0.2, closing at 35.4, which was 0.5 above last year's low. Improvement in stocks was attributed chiefly to sympathetic action with staples and the fact that it had probably become oversold.

Grains Advance Excepting Rye

Cotton Prices Firm; Liverpool Cables Carry Prices Up.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, March 13.—Surprising strength shown by the Liverpool wheat market today did much to assist a general upward trend of grain values here excepting for rye. Cables said Liverpool wheat prices were advancing because of larger demand for wheat in Great Britain and the Orient, and that Britain millers had bought 1,500,000 bushels of Australian wheat today. Reports that further shipments of rye from Poland were headed toward the United States caused rye to register a new low price record for the season.

Wheat closed firm, ¼ to 1 cent above yesterday's finish, May 93¾@93⅞; corn, ⅜@⅞ up; May, 79⅞@80; rye, ⅜@⅞ down; oats at ⅛ decline to ⅜ advance, and provisions showing 10 to 20 cents setback. Transient dips of wheat, corn and oats prices were ascribed in the main to sympathy with rye weakness.

New York, March 13.—Cotton rallied to net gains of $1 to $1.50 a bale in the late trading today, following early irregularity. Spot houses were the principal buyers, with offerings more restricted. Sharp Decline in Cotton Futures Is Not Likely to Obstruct Normal Flow of Cotton Into Markets of the World.

By a Special Correspondent.

New York, March 13.—The decline in cotton futures quotations of more than $5 a bale this week is not likely to "break the jam that has for some time been obstructing the normal flow of American cotton into the markets of the world, in the opinion of the best-informed merchants and traders here.

The cotton trade underwent an experience bordering on panic when futures dropped almost the full 200 points, or $10 a bale, allowed for one day's trading on Monday, and then recovered about half the lost ground. The weakest speculative positions were eliminated then, and the subsequent recovery, reflected chiefly assurances from Washington that no change in Government policy was contemplated. Now that the break is over and future quotations are stabilizing about 1 cent below the Government loan offer of 12 cents a pound to eligible cotton in growers' hands, the question arises as to whether this lowering in the market price will give the needed stimulus to consumption of the American staple by domestic mills and importers abroad.

This country entered the present season with a heavy carryover. Hence, despite the small crop of 9,700,000 bales raised last season, the total available supply was more than 20,000,000 bales, at the beginning of the current crop year. The bulk of the new crop was eligible for the 12 cent a pound Government loan offer. Actually, the Government holds more than 4,000,000 bales as security for such loans, and farmers are holding the bulk of the balance. Hence, there has really been available for sale during the current crop year only the 10,000,000-odd bales of old crop cotton which was not held back because of the loan offer.

Little Cotton Sold At Lower Prices.

In point of fact, therefore, despite declines in the futures market, very little actual cotton is changing hands at the lower prices thus established. In fact, there is room for serious doubt whether, if foreign demand for American cotton should revive at the lower price level now prevailing, there is anything like an adequate supply of such lower-price staple available to meet it.

Merchants so far have been willing to deliver cotton to mills at currrent spot prices, which are about ¼ cent a pound higher than futures quotations. However, it is not believed that they can long continue to do so under the unusual and abnormal conditions now prevailing. In the first place, current stocks of cotton in merchants' hands are abnormally low, since the latter have been fearful of stocking up under the unstable conditions prevailing. Growers, since they are able to obtain 12 cents a pound as a loan, have naturally been unwilling to sell freely at that price, and certainly not at all at any lower figure.

There are now estimated to be around 5,500,000 bales of American cotton in this country which are not in the possession of the Government, and which are not serving as collateral for 12 cents a pound loans from the Government. The bulk of this cotton is held, however, by farmers entitled to the loan offer, or cooperatives who also enjoy the benefit of Government credit.

Only a relatively small proportion of this is low-grade cotton not eligible for the loan. A portion consists of long staple cotton quoted, until the last day or so, at premium prices well above the 12-cent level. This premium cotton is now quoted at about 12 cents a pound in Southern spot markets, but merchants and others report that it is impossible to buy any material amounts of it at current prices, especially since it is mostly held by the strongest of the cooperatives.

Exports May Drop To Less Than 5,000,000 Bales.

Consumers both at home and abroad thus can not now obtain large amounts of actual cotton at the lower prices quoted in the futures markets. If futures quotations stay down, then the Government will doubtless get the bulk of the remaining supplies of cotton by lending 12 cents a pound on it. Hence, our exports of cotton will probably fall to less than 5,000,000 bales this year and domestic consumption of the staple has also developed a distinct downward trend in recent weeks.

Idle Freight Cars Show Sharp Drop During February

Class I railroads on February 14 had 306,940 surplus freight cars in good repair and immediately available for service, the Association of American Railroads announced yesterday. This was a decrease of 34,978 cars, compared with January 31, at which time there were 341,918 surplus freight cars.

Surplus coal cars on February 14 totaled 61,417, a decrease of 22,997 below the previous period, while surplus box cars totaled 194,357, a decrease of 12,645 compared with January 31.

Reports also showed 27,591 surplus cars, an increase of 1,185 compared with January 31, while surplus refrigerator cars totaled 9,210, a decrease of 223 for the same period.

Stocks—A late upturn boosted most stocks to small net gains at the close, while some failed to come within a point of the day's top. Sales for the day were 1,076,320.

Bonds—Federals were in good demand, while corporates sagged on slack support. Rails closed up from the highs while utilities were under steady pressure all day.

Curb—Irregular through most of the session, but a rally toward the last found active support. Sales were moderately active at 188,000 shares against 157,000 the previous day.

Grain—Rye weakness failed to substantially affect grains and most quotations closed higher. Wheat closed at 93¾ for the May futures while May corn closed at 79⅞. May rye opened at 60 and closed at 59½.

Cotton—Futures were calmer and rose on an average of $1 a bale in early trading, losing some of it toward the last. Close was steady at net advances of 12 to 19 points. May closed at 11.26.

Sugar—Raw sugar was steady at 3.05, while refined was unchanged at 4.30 to 4.50 for fine granulated.

Coffee—Spot coffee was barely steady. Rio No. 7 closed at 7¼ to 7½, while Santos No 4 was sold last at 9¼ to 9½.

Silver—Bar silver was unchanged in New York at 58.58 cents per ounce. In London it sold at ⅛ penny higher to close at 27 15-16 pence (United States equivalent 58.35 cents).

Gold—Bar gold was up 6 pence to 148 shillings (United States equivalent $35.09).

Redress Asked For Victims of Wildcat Surety

By R. Karl von Lewinski.

Legal redress for victims of wildcat insurance companies which have for years been preying on medium-salaried workers through the mails, will be secured under the terms of a bill that has been introduced into the House by Representative Hobbs, of Alabama.

The act makes it unlawful for any insurance company to use the mail to solicit insurance and collect or transmit premiums in any State, without first complying with the insurance laws thereof.

At a hearing held before the House sub-committee on postoffices and post roads yesterday, District of Columbia Insurance Commissioner John A. Marshall termed the bill a long-felt need to protect Government employes and other permanently situated workers in the District.

"Since my induction into office last spring," Marshall testified, "we have been trying unsuccessfully to curb the wild mail-order insurance companies that have been tempting the public by ridiculously low premium rates.

"They solicit and collect premiums through the mails without any thought of ever paying off. These companies very seldom do business in the State in which they are originally incorporated."

"When victims of the wild insurance companies attempt to seek redress, they must sue through the high courts of the State in which the company is incorporated," he said. "As these companies have in the majority of instances set up their offices far removed from that State, the difficulty in securing service of the suit is apparent. As the majority of losses range between $500 and $1,000, the cases are seldom brought to completion."

Marshall declared that Washington had long been a mecca for illicit operations of mail-order insurance companies, as they found a fertile field among the Government workers. Under the guise of offering special reductions to this group they have lured thousands to buy the worthless policies.

Representative Frank G. Ashbrook, chairman of the House Postal Committee, also heard pleas by representatives of several religious and fraternal insurance companies to be exempted from the act, which provides a penalty of $5,000 and one or two years' imprisonment for any participant in a violating firm.

After testimony by delegates of the Presbyterian and Episcopal Ministers Insurance Organizations, further discussion on the bill was adjourned until Monday. Chairman Ashbrook said that in the interval an amendment excluding these purely service organizations would be added to the bill.

Stock Trading.

Capital Transit moved to a new 1935 low of 23 in opening trading on the Washington Stock Exchange yesterday. Liberty National Bank stock was sold at 85, while Capital Traction 5s moved at 97. City and Suburban Railway 5s crossed the board at 81½.

Walker Promoted by I. B. S.

Oliver Walker, assistant divisional manager in the local office of International Business Machines Corporation, has been promoted to divisional manager of the Philadelphia office, it was announced yesterday.

Walker has been with the company since 1929, having been connected with its tabulating service bureau in New York until a year ago, when he was elevated to the Washington post.

Industrial Wages Showed Advances for Last Year

Pay of 90% of Employes Was Higher, Reports National Conference Survey Covering 800 Concerns and 811,308 Workers.

Ninety per cent of industrial employes were receiving higher wages in December, 1934, than during January of 1933, according to a report by the National Industrial Conference Board.

In a study covering 800 business and industrial organizations with an aggregate of 811,308 workers, it was found that some salaries and wages had been decreased in the period, but that the preponderance of representative companies had put increases into effect.

Of 717 manufacturing concerns covered in the board's study, the following tabulated increases were shown: 41 per cent have increased executive salaries, 63 per cent have increased non-executive salaries, and 88 per cent have advanced the general wage rates.

Nearly one-half of the increases in pay rates were made during the second half of 1933, says the board, a third occurred in the first half of 1934, and an eighth came in the second half of 1934.

At the same time, 80 per cent of the pay cuts occurred in the first half of 1933, showing the period of greatest readjustment as during that interval.

Increases in wages accounted for the greatest proportion of the general compensation rises recorded in the second half of 1933, while the largest increases in the nonexecutive salaries was reported in the second half of 1933. Increases in executive salaries saw their greatest boost during the early part of 1934.

During the last half of 1934 the number of increases in all groups of employes showed a substantial drop. Segregated into their individual classifications, the average percentages of increase in wages and salaries for the two-year period showed the following:

Executive salaries in the manufacturing industry, 15.6 per cent; in the extraction and refining industry, 16.4 per cent; in the public utilities, 8.3 per cent; in the wholesale and retail trade, 14 per cent; in the railroads, 2.6 per cent; in finance, 13.4 per cent.

Nonexecutive salaries in the manufacturing industry were boosted 16.1 per cent; in extraction and refining, 9.5 per cent; in public utilities, 8.3 per cent; in the wholesale and retail trade, 14 per cent; in the railroad, 2.6 per cent; in finance, 11.3 per cent.

Wage rates in the manufacturing industry were increased 30 per cent; in extraction and refining, 16.5 per cent; in public utilities, 14.6 per cent; in wholesale and retail trade, 20.4 per cent; in the railroads, 2.6 per cent, and 15.4 per cent in finance

Executive salaries, in 24.1 per cent of the companies, suffered an average reduction of 21.1 per cent; nonexecutive salaries, in 20.8 per cent of companies, were reduced an average of 11.0 per cent; wage rates, in 15.1 per cent of the companies, sustained an average reduction of 11.0 per cent.

In a small minority of companies neither increases nor decreases in salary or wage rates had been made since January, 1933, according to the conference board's analysis.

Manufacturing companies in this category employed 13,309 persons, or 2.5 per cent of the total number covered in the board's survey. The highest proportion of employes in an industry employed by companies which made no changes in rates was 27.5 per cent in the furniture industry.

In agricultural implements, iron and steel, paint and varnish and rubber, all reporting companies had made at least some changes in compensation rates. In most other industries only a small minority of employes were in companies that had no change in compensation rates.

Practically 90 per cent of all employes of the manufacturing companies covered benefited by increases in their rates of compensation, the conference board's study showed.

General Motors Overseas Sales Rise 98 Per Cent

New York, March 13.—Overseas sales of General Motors cars and trucks from all sources in February totaled 23,446 units, an increase of 22 per cent over January, and 110 per cent over February, 1934. Total sales for January and February combined were 98 per cent over sales in the corresponding period of last year.

These figures include the products of the corporation's American, Canadian, English and German factories sold outside of the United States and Canada. American-source sales of Chevrolet, Pontiac, Oldsmobile, Buick, LaSalle and Cadillac vehicles reflected gains in practically all of the 104 countries comprising the overseas market. The most substantial increases, however, were recorded in the South American, Far Eastern, Australasian and South African areas, where the active recovery from the low volume levels of 1930-1932 is in marked contrast to the moderately stimulated automotive demand existing in several western European countries.

Foreign Markets.

By the Associated Press.

London—Quietness prevailed on the stock exchange today. Gilt-edged securities were strengthened further by investment buying, and foreign bonds met with support. Speculative business, however, did not expand, and gold mining shares showed no effects of the higher price for bar gold. Transatlantic issues were unsettled. The market closed irregular.

Paris—Business on the bourse was slow and prices showed a general decline due to the drop in Mexican Eagle oil shares. The closing was heavy.

Dried Fruits Steady.

Foreign Exchange.

By the Associated Press.

A slight firmer tone in the pound sterling contrasted with easiness in the gold currencies in foreign exchange trading yesterday.

In Paris the dollar was somewhat firmer at an equivalent of 6.628 cents to the franc and in New York francs were .01¼ of a cent lower, at 6.63 cents. Other gold currencies ruled easier.

Federal Bonds Strong; Other Issues Decline

Treasury Offerings Readily Absorbed in Active Bidding.

By the Associated Press.

New York, March 13.—United States Government obligations turned the tables on other divisions of the bond market today and rallied smartly, while corporate loans continued reactionary.

Distinctly heavy since the beginning of the week, Treasury bonds of all classifications were readily absorbed as fast as they were offered, and when there were too few offerings active bidding brought advances ranging from 6-32 up to ½ point in the case of the 3¼s of 1940, which closed at 107.2. While Libertys were a trifle narrow, the indirect obligations shared generously in the upturn.

Secondary corporate bonds presented an altogether different picture. Continued liquidation of utilities carried some of these bonds 2 to 3 points lower, and the secondary railroad loans again were sympathetic and some of them lost nearly as much.

The Associated Press averages of 20 rails and 10 industrials dipped to a new 1935 low at 78.5 and 92.9, respectively, while 10 utilities averaged .9 of a point lower at 86.3 and the average of 10 low-yield bonds was unchanged at 109.5.

Foreign bonds were quiet. Bonds of the English dominions again showed improvement, and South American issues were lower.

Am. Sugar Asks Protection for Domestic Trade

By the Associated Press.

New York, March 13.—Protection by the Government for domestic sugar refiners against Cuban, Puerto Rican and Philippine competition was asked today by the American Sugar Refining Co. in its annual report.

"It is earnestly hoped that our Government will afford early relief to domestic cane refiners," the report stated, "so that this essential American industry will not be crippled irreparably.

"Refined sugar prices in this country are determined by domestic competition, which is always severe," it said. "If tropical refined sugar were excluded, domestic refiners' volume would increase and their unit costs would go down. Restoring domestic refiners' volume would increase employment for American labor.

"This would reverse the present situation, where, with millions of Americans out of work, and billions of dollars being appropriated to provide relief for them at the expense of the American taxpayers, including the domestic sugar refiners, the United States in effect subsidizes Cuban, Puerto Rican and Philippine refiners and permits their tropical labor to take away the jobs of American citizens heretofore normally employed in sugar refineries in this country."

Curb Stocks Rally at Close

Peperell and Singer Are Weak Features, Losing 3 and 4 Points.

By the Associated Press.

New York, March 13.—The curb market was irregular today, but a late rally gave the list a better appearance at the close. Dealings were moderately active, transfers approximating 188,000 shares compared with 157,000 yesterday.

Peperell Manufacturing and Singer dropped 3 and 4 points, respectively, in thin dealings, while other losers of around a point included Pan-American Airways, Murphy company and Lake Shore Mines. A. O. Smith & Co., Montgomery Ward "A" and Pittsburgh Plate Glass gained around a point each.

Sears, Roebuck To Pay Special 75c Dividend

Net Profits Increased $3,771,256 Over Total for 1933.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, March 13.—A special dividend of 75 cents per share was declared today by the directors of Sears, Roebuck & Co., payable on May 1 to stockholders of record as of April 1.

Gen. Robert E. Wood, president, made the announcement in connection with the annual report of the company for 1934, which disclosed net profits of $15,020,551, an increase of $3,771,256 over the 1933 total of $11,249,295. The company reported a loss in 1932. Gen. Wood stated that the working capital of the company had increased $11,272,000 during the year.

In announcing the special dividend, Gen. Wood said that the directors feel it is not yet the proper time to establish the stock of the company on a regular dividend basis. "The present situation of the company and the future prospects warrant a conservative distribution to stockholders," he declared

Harvester's Net Up $5,834,000

Chicago, March 13.—After several years of losses International Harvester's annual report, issued today, shows a net profit of $3,948,000 for 1934, as compared with a net loss of $1,886,000 in 1933.

Notwithstanding the unprecedented drought, which greatly curtailed the business anticipated from a good spring trade, there was a substantial increase in volume over 1933, chiefly in tractors, power farming equipment and motor trucks.

Looking to the future, the statement by President Addis E. McKinstry, incorporated in the report, says that the present indications point to an increas in the total volume of business in 1935.

A significant paragraph in the report says: "The improvement in the company's trade has enabled it to make a substantial increase in the number of employes on the pay roll. At the end of 1934 there were approximately 10,000 more employes than at the close of 1933."

American Sugar Earns $3.56 a Common Share

New York, March 13.—The report of the American Sugar Refining Co. for 1934 shows consolidated income from all sources of $6,656,175.80 which, after interest and charges on bonds, preferred dividends and depreciation, leaves $3.56 for the common stock against $3.67 last year. Earl D. Babst, chairman of the board, says the refining earnings after depreciation were less than one-fifth cent on each pound of raw sugar refined.

Taxes totaled over $2 per share of common. Increase in costs of labor and supplies, due principally to NRA and AAA, amounted to over $3 per share of common, without a corresponding increase in the spread between raw sugar costs and receipts from refined sugar sales. Maintenance and repairs of $759,823.20 were charged to operations. The Cuban investment, after depreciation, showed a loss of $41,652.57.

Besides the regular $7 dividend on preferred stock, there was paid on the common $2 as against an annual average of about $7 since the company was organized in 1891.

Phillips Petroleum Co. reports a net income of $5,757,308 for the year ended December 31, 1934, compared with a net of $1,500,695 the preceding year.

Midland Steel Co. has declared a dividend of $2 a share on the 8 per cent cumulative first preferred stock. This disbursement clears up all arrears on this issue. The dividend is payable April 1 to stock of record March 22.

Treasury Receipts.

By the Associated Press.

The position of the Treasury for March 11 was:

Receipts, $28,421,169.96; expenditures, $40,196,327.28; balance, $2,038,652,563.66; customs receipts for the month, $11,489,290.34.

Receipts for the fiscal year (since July 1), $2,402,146,009.67; expenditures, $4,723,778,708.88 (including $2,449,022,770.30 of emergency expenditures); excess of expenditures, $2,321,629,697.21; gold assets, $8,548,831,053.36.

On the Air Today

By Katherine Smith.

SINCE Sunday afternoon Washingtonians have been talking, and in some instances writing, a protest against the musical battle: National Symphony versus Brahms Requiem. More specifically, music lovers who hovered over the New York Philharmonic's beautiful performance of the Brahms classic found the finale swept away from their ears by the local breezes of Dr. Hans Kindler.

When the National Symphony's plan was announced, WJSV people said hopefully, "Perhaps the Philharmonic's concert will run short. It sometimes does." Further, these radio folk expressed a very "real fear that the concert would not run short. They realized that the curtailment of one of their finest broadcasts would be unfortunate, and at the same time, as broadcasters, felt that they couldn't refuse Dr. Kindler's request for that half-hour of air time.

It was the only spot available on any station at the time Dr. Kindler wanted it. Dr. Kindler's motives in obtaining an air program were of the best. Yet, considering the fact that the listeners he wanted to reach would be those likely to be most indignant at the Philharmonic's cutting, his selection of time was unwise.

Couldn't Dr. Kindler select an appropriate and comparatively non-conflicting hour, and put on a special broadcast. Was it necessary to broadcast the regular Sunday concert?

If it seems impossible to squeeze 17 Irish speakers into a half-hour's time, remember that each will be limited to 17 words. That's what happens on WRC today at 1 p. m. when the Irish celebrate St. Patrick's Day. Among the speakers: Irish Minister MacWhite, Senators Duffy, O'Mahoney and Murphy; Representative O'Connor, Frank Riley, of the NRA; Abner Drury, the brewer, and Vincent Callahan, of NBC's Washington staff.

SPEECHES:

Parent-Teacher Congress, with George D. Stoddard, on "Curiosity and the Growth of Interest," WRC, 5 p. m.

Col. John Thomas Taylor, on "The Bonus," WRC, 7:05 p. m.

Charles F. Bauder, on "Educating Through the Arts and Crafts," WMAL, 6:15 p. m.

Sumner Welles, Assistant Secretary of State, on "Pan-American Cooperation," WMAL, 8:15 p. m.

Bishop Francis J. McConnell and Prof. Herman W. A. Gray on "Old-Age Pensions," WMAL, 10:30 p. m.

Lammot duPont is heard on the Forum of Liberty program, WJSV, 8:30 p. m.

Ted Husing summarizes the men's indoor tennis championship on WJSV, 4:45 p. m.

More sporting news: Arch McDonald, WJSV sports commentator, leaves for Biloxi Sunday morning to look over the Senators. While he is gone, Joe Judge, famous Senator player and rule expert, will take his place at the mike. Judge's first talk will be Sunday night, and Clarence Q. Graham, radio executive of Peoples Drug Stores, will explain the whys and wherefores.

Arch, however, doesn't intend to lose contact with his air spot. He'll send daily reports about the Senators for Joe to turn over to you via the air.

HERE and there today:

Music Guild offers the "Dumky" Trio, of Dvorak, 2 p. m., WMAL.

Eastman School of Music program features Beethoven's "Eroica" Symphony, WMAL, 3:15 p. m.

An all-American basket ball team, based on information from 60 leading coaches, is announced on College Prom, WMAL, 7:45 p. m. Ward Lambert, Perdue's coach makes announcements.

Dennis King and Victor Moore headline Vallee's bill tonight, WRC, 8 p. m.

Leading music maestros gather for a banquet tonight to celebrate Paul Whiteman's twentieth year as jazz king. Speakers: Paul Whiteman, Richard Himber, Rudy Vallee, Abe Lyman, and Jack Dempsey, in whose restaurant the affair is being held. On WMAL, midnight.

Walter O'Keefe and another stupendous drama, WJSV, 9 p. m.

Phil Spitalny's all-girl show, 8 p. m. WJSV.

Fred Waring Pennsylvanians with college songs and hit tunes, WJSV, 9:30 p. m.

American School of the Air's presentation of the music and life of Beethoven, WJSV, 2:30 p. m.

Capt. Dobbsie's music playing Ravel's "Bolero," WJSV, 10:30 p. m.

Chinatown's orchestration "Roadways of Romance," WJSV, 3 p. m.

You'll hear a new voice and several old ones, all from the same person tonight. Pat Chandler is a comic who, in appearance and vocal expression is a combination of Cantor, Georgie Price and Jackie Green. Pat's appearing with Art Godfrey on WJSV, 6:30, and judging from what Art says about him he's good—very good.

Pat's career has been limited to vaudeville, until now, and this is to be his first mike experience. Might give him a dial twist and see how you like the new mimic and impersonator.

PROPOSALS

COMMISSIONERS, D. C., WASHINGTON, March 15, 1935. Sealed proposals will be received at Room 509, District Building, until 2:00 o'clock p. m., April 3, 1935, and then publicly opened, for the construction of approximately one thousand two hundred and sixty-five (1,265) linear feet of pipe, varying in size between 24" and 11'-3" in diameter; same being designated as Relocation of Easby Point Interceptor and incidental work in vicinity of Virginia Avenue and O Street, N. W. Bidders are hereby notified that all bids shall be submitted in strict accordance with the provisions of Bulletin No. 1 and Forms Nos. 80 and 81 of the Public Works Administration as modified for use by the District of Columbia, and that the minimum hourly rate for skilled laborers (skilled mechanics) employed on the contract shall be one dollar and ten cents ($1.10), and that the minimum hourly rate for unskilled laborers employed on the contract shall be forty-five (45) cents. Liquidated damages—$300.00 for each calendar day of delay. Apply at Room 427, District Building, for proposals, specifications and specimen contract forms.

COMMISSIONERS, D. C., WASHINGTON, March 12, 1935.—Sealed proposals will be received at Room 509, District Building, until 2 p. m., APRIL 9, 1935, and then publicly opened, for constructing a sewage pumping station, grit chambers and raw sewage meter for a sewage treatment plant at Blue Plains, D. C. A more complete description of the work and full information for bidders is given in the drawings, specifications and in other contract papers, which may be obtained at Room 427, District Building, upon deposit of a CERTIFIED check payable, to the Collector of Taxes, D. C., in the sum of $100 to insure return in good condition. NOT MORE THAN THREE complete sets of drawings, specifications and contract papers will be furnished to any one GENERAL contractor. No proposal will be accepted unless accompanied by a guaranty of not less than five per cent (5%) of the amount of the bid in the form of a certified check made payable to the Collector of Taxes, D. C.; U. S. bonds or the bond of an approved surety company. Security for the faithful performance of the work shall be in the form of a surety bond in a penal sum equal to the estimated total contract price. A labor bond in an amount equal to the largest estimated aggregated payroll for any one month is required. Public liability insurance in the sum of $5,000 and $10,000 is also required. The work called for by this proposal is to be performed in accordance with an agreement dated October 18, 1934, between the Commissioners of the District of Columbia and the Federal Emergency Administrator of Public Works and is subject to the provisions of Title II of the National Industrial Recovery Act and the rules and regulations prescribed by the President and the Federal Emergency Administrator of Public Works. The Director of Reemployment for the District of Columbia is Edgar B. Young, 490 Indiana avenue northwest. No bids will be considered unless accompanied by the bidder's certificate of compliance, properly executed, to the effect that the bidder is complying with and will continue to comply with each applicable code of fair competition, or, in the absence of such code or codes, with the President's Reemployment Agreement. Copies of this certificate may be obtained at Room 427, District Building. The Commissioners reserve the right to reject any and all proposals and to waive informalities as they deem best for the interest of the District of Columbia. Final award of contract subject to approval of the Federal Emergency Administrator of Public Works. Attention is called to the fact that not less than the minimum wage rates prescribed by the Federal Emergency Administration of Public Works must be paid on this project. 12,13,14,15,16,18

Reg. U. S. Pat. Off.: Copyright, 1935, by Publishers Syndicate
COULD YOU COME WITH US, BILL? I FEEL SORT OF NERVOUS.
SURE, I WILL!
WHILE THE SPECIALIST EXAMINES DENNIE, APPLE MARY IS TORTURED BY ONE THOUGHT, "SUPPOSE IT IS TOO LATE." BILL BIFF IS CLUMSILY TRYING TO QUIET HER FEARS.
AW, MARY, YOU'LL WEAR OUT THE CARPET PACIN' AROUND. THEY AIN'T GONNA HURT DENNIE.
BUT, BILL, IT'S BEEN SUCH A LONG TIME SINCE HIS ACCIDENT. MAYBE THEY CAN'T DO ANTHING FOR HIM.
WELL, MRS. WORTH, I HAVE GOOD NEWS FOR YOU. I'M SURE WE CAN FIX LITTLE DENNIE UP AS GOOD AS NEW. OF COURSE, ONE CAN'T BE SURE IN SUCH CASES, BUT IT LOOKS VERY PROMISING.

DICK TRACY Right in His Mitt

Taking a Hint.

SOME visitors won't take a hint, however strong it's made; the hosts use words unfit to print, the guests refuse to fade. "One time I asked my aunt to come," said Charles H. Beeswax-Bore, "and bring her cat and chewing gum, and stay three weeks or four. She came with all her ancient traps, to make a six months' stand, with parasols and knitted caps, her bird cage in her hand. When she had been around a week, I murmured to my wife, 'How can we stand that queer old freak who burdens human life?' And when a fortnight had been passed, my grouch was greatly nursed; 'I see the old girl must be gassed or othewise dispersed.' I gave that woman all the hints I could invent or frame, and still she sat and sewed her chintz and plied her quilting frame. And still she talked a yellow streak as when a trumpet blares, and still she pushed her crimson beak in other folks' affairs. At first my hints were sweet and mild, becoming to a man, but after six weeks I got riled and took a drastic plan. I stretched a rope across the stairs, she came in single file, and ran against it unawares and bumped down half a mile. I fixed her bedroom window sash, it fell with quite a din, and gave her dome a frightful crash, and caved her topknot in. All this was long and long ago; my aunt's still seated there, and as I watch her darn and sew, it doesn't help to swear."

Three Men and Diana

By Kathleen Norris.

Diana Carmichael's grandmother kept a boarding house down where the town trailed out into empty lots and railway fences. Diana suffered at being poor. She could not dress as the other girls dressed. She longed, too, to go to college. Then she met Bruce Palmer, and fell in love with him. After finishing high school, having no money for college, she went to work in a hardware store. For a while Bruce worked in the store, too, as the store belonged to his family. When he went away, Diana was lonelier than ever—until she met Neal Tressady, who, with his mother, was taking rooms in the house. They began to go out together.

BY THE time the Tressadys had been two weeks at the Chamberlain house Neal was desperately in love with Diana. Reluctantly, she had to admit to herself that she was not in love with him. But, nevertheless, it was gratifying to know that he was there.

Just before Christmas, Miss Adler came into the Bayhead Hardware Store as a holiday extra. Five clerks were added to the regular staff for the rush; by December 1 the shop was crowded every day, and lamps, china, radios, iceboxes, toasters, skates and knives were being bought in scores marked for delivery Christmas Eve, wrapped as gifts, put into the "hold" bins to wait for the 24th.

May Rogers, nervous, veiny-handed old Mrs. Olsen, Mrs. Race, bland and kindly, with her white ribbon always in view, were kept flying. Diana was everywhere, and Margaret worked swiftly and steadily with bills and silver in the cashier's cage.

But it was soon to be seen that Miss Adler, affectionately known to a large circle of friends and relatives as "Jackie," was outstriving the best of them. Diana did not like her.

Jackie Was Officious.

Jackie Adler made much of the obnoxious Morey, for one thing. She listened to him, quoted him, obeyed him enthusiastically. She talked with him humbly, as a disciple with a master; might she try to sell off that extra stock of flowerpot jars on a table by the door? Had he noted that every one of those lamps he had gotten in San Francisco had sold right away?

Officiously, Jackie always appeared to be right in Diana's way. No matter what she did she found Jackie there first, opening packages, storing stock, marking prices.

Christmas was past, and the first weeks of the New Year, when practically every Christmas gift was credited or exchanged, went by, and still Jackie remained complacently in the employ of the Bayhead Hardware Store and assisted the admiring Morey. Everything she did was as inevitably right as everything Diana did was wrong.

In mid-January, when Diana was half kneeling to arrange a tower of trays that had cascaded to the dark oiled floor, Mr. Morey, passing, asked to speak to her for a moment. They stepped to the comparative privacy of the office.

Her Job Gone.

"Miss Carmichael," said Mr. Morey, "I thought I'd like to tell you before discussing it with the other young ladies. We are making some changes in here; as you know, my one object is the welfare of the shop, and what I feel I owe to my employers. I'm an employe with the rest; that's all. I was telling the boys this morning that it's as much up to me as to anyone else to make good.

"We hope very much to have you back with us some day. But for the present we must make some changes—dispense with your services—for the present, that is. When things pick up, you may be very sure that we'll let you know. Meanwhile I have made a different distribution of work, I'm dividing yours between Miss Rogers and Mrs. Race. Miss Adler feels that she can take on Mrs. Olsen's department—perhaps she can't. Perhaps we'll have to try some other arrangement——"

There was a great deal more, but Diana did not hear it. She was concerned only with the desperate need of not showing him the shock and amazement that were shaking her to the soul.

Peter Was Indignant.

Fired! Fired from this little one-horse hardware store. It was not thinkable! She felt sick with anger, her mouth was filled with salt water and her hands were cold, but she could remain outwardly calm—she must——

"You mean from the first, Mr. Morey?"

"I thought from Saturday."

Saturday would be the sixteenth. Two weeks' salary less. Diana walked away from him and over to Margaret's cage.

"I'm fired," she said, with a shaky little laugh. Margaret's conscious eyes met hers; Margaret knew.

They went to lunch at Sticky's and told Peter, and his indigation and their own made them all feel better.

Diana kept repeating that she did not care about herself, but when she thought that that rotten Alder had gotten poor Mrs. Olsen out, too, it made her mad.

Pay Was Small.

She told the family about it at dinner that night; Mrs. Tressady had persuaded Gram to give her and Neal dinners—breakfast was late, luncheon neither one ate, dinner was the only meal they needed, and the Virginia had been closed for repairs.

So there were four of them at dinner in the big kitchen. Neal helped cook it with his own amazing expertness and minimized the calamity in his own convincing way.

"What of it? You weren't going to stay in a hardware store much longer, Di?"

"No-o-o. Of course not!"

"Twenty a week after three years! A three-dollar raise in three years!"

"They only pay Margaret twenty-five."

"It's silly! I'm glad you're out."

"But it's that snake Jackie that makes me mad."

"Oh, forget her!"

Leisure Was Nice.

"In six months," Neal assured her roundly, "you'll forget the whole bally thing! That isn't life; that's marking time!"

And when they were alone together he expanded it.

"You're so exquisite, Butterfly, you're so different! How could a bonehead like Morey do anything but hate you!"

This was consoling. And it was restful not to have to hurry on Monday to see other clerks moving along Mason avenue, and be idle and at ease; to loiter over coffee and toast with Neal, who was very bright and amusing, and full of preposterous suggestions for a new start.

Also, prettily dressed, it was fun to walk with him into College avenue, feeling so oddly free with the clocks showing half-past eleven, and to have him buy her a brass idol and a china bowl in the Japanese store, and caramel corn at the corner. They looked at fresh rolls in the Women's Exchange, loitered past the banks and the real estate offices, studied the photographs of suburban homes for sale, and the shoes in Philliber's.

Neal's Way Was Pleasant.

"Let's just get on the trolley, Di, and see where it goes. I've never really known. And my car's laid up today."

"Oh, let's!" Di told herself that she was tired of struggling; much better to do things Neal's way and let the idle, happy current of life carry one along in its flood. Ride aimlessly on a trolley, come aimlessly back to buy a 10-cent book in the second-hand book store, buy cookies for dinner and lie down and read for two hours before it was time to prepare it.

She had not tried to lose her position, she was more than willing to help Gram and carry her share of the load, but if things turned out this way, then it was just silly to wonder and worry; Neal didn't worry, and he had a lot more fun than Peter did.

The evening paper, twisted into a projectile, was always flung on the garden earth. Diana, returning from her happy truant afternoon with Neal, picked it up and carried it into the house. Neal was going to practice; she was going to lie down. But she would be up for tea with his mother at 5.

In Love With Diana.

Mrs. Tressady had by this time perceived clearly how the wind was blowing, but her own enthusiastic fondness for Diana had preceded Neil's, and she rejoiced that she and her adored boy shared this wonderful thing, like so many others. Diana was "our girl," "our marvelous Papillon," and "you Delicious!"

"But of course he's head over heels, poor infant," said Bess Tressady. Diana laughed. "But he is, you bad girl," the mother persisted.

Diana refilled her teacup. What did Mrs. Tressady expect her to say or do? Obviously, until Neal declared himself formally, there was nothing for her to say, and he would hardly do that until he had a job.

Bridegroom of Weeks, Samuel Orr Kills Self

A certificate of suicide was issued yesterday in the case of Samuel Orr, who died several hours after he was found in his home, in the 1500 block of Lamont street northwest, with a bullet wound in his head.

Orr was found by his 16-year-old wife, Doris, whom he married early this month. He left a note addressed to the police saying, "It's suicide, boys." The note also said he was killing himself because he had nothing to live for, and requested that his wife and children be taken care of. Orr, who was 27, had two children by a previous marriage.

Prison Slaying Suspect Will Fight Extradition

Jefferson City, Mo., March 13 (AP). Bennett (Pat) Casey, arrested here on a motor car theft and named as the slayer of a guard in a wholesale break from the Granite (Okla.) State Reformatory February 17, denied the crime tonight. He refused to discuss the delivery, in which 32 convicts escaped.

Dave McConnell, superintendent of the Oklahoma Bureau of Criminal Identification, who named Casey as the killer, said he would come after the fugitive. Casey will fight extradition.

Broadway

Manhattan Promenade.

Abe Lyman is now Rudy Vallee's boss, but it cost him $75,000 to win the distinction. That is what Lyman paid for 55 per cent of stock, the controlling interest, in the Hollywood Restaurant, where Vallee plays, and controlling interest in Pavilion Royale. Thus ends a Broadway partnership feud between Jacob Amron and Joe Moss. Amron, instead of selling out to Moss, spited him by signing with Lyman.

Dodging between cars at street-crossings in the East 50's are to be found the most remarkable street merchants in the whole world . . . No vendors are as quick in their sales as these, for they rush from car to car and complete their sales before the traffic light changes from red to green . . . In the daytime, these street merchants sell chewing gum, shoe laces . . . At theater time, they concentrate on gardenia corsages, the price varying from 10 cents to 25 cents, the youthful vendors establishing the price after they take one penetrating look at the occupants of the cab . . . They always ask me for a dime, although each time they rap on the glass of the cab, I make a conscientious effort to look like the 25-cent type.

These street merchants, who operate between traffic lights, are the outgrowth of the beggars who once infested every corner in the East 50's . . . The professional beggars were first to see the possibilities of cars stalled in traffic, just as the professional beggars were first to sense the psychology of standing near night clubs and tapping incoming and outgoing night club guests . . . Just how the merchants won the best spots in the East 50's from the beggars I do not know . . . Undoubtedly, the street merchants, with a clearer grasp of economics, won the cops on beat to their side with gardenias for the Missus.

Lunched at the Tavern with Capt. Eddie Rickenbacker this week . . . He was all steamed up over Sir Malcolm Campbell's feat of driving a car 276 miles per hour, and fearful that Campbell would refuse to be satisfied until he had reached his goal of 300 miles per hour . . . Rickenbacker, himself a famous racing driver in the old days before he became an American war ace, sent a telegram to Campbell asking him not to try again . . . "A racing driver forgets that he gets older, and that each year, the cars get faster and faster," he said . . . Campbell, the speed demon, is 50 years old.

Bridge experts have fattened on society folk for years and years . . . Joseph Elwell made a comfortable living between lessons and gambling, before he was mysteriously murdered . . . Since then, others have risen to teach the society card experts a lesson . . . This week, one of the nationally known bridge experts won $8,400 in a single night's game . . . I don't blame him . . . The "400" chumps, who are silly enough to pit their card sense against a Jacoby or a Culbertson or a Lenz aren't entitled to sympathy . . . They need guardians.

Two ex-"Follies" girls descended the gangplank of the S. S. Olympic when it docked recently . . . One was Ruth Martin, hurrying here to attend the funeral of her estranged husband, who had died in Savannah, Ga. . . . Accompanying her was Dorothy Dilley, ex-"Follies" dancer, who understood Miss Martin's emotions better than anyone else . . . Last August, Miss Dilley hurried West to Marquette, Mich., on a similar mission, reaching the bedside of Louis Kaufman, jr., her estranged husband, just before he died.

New Yorkers who have been to Florida are now reaching Broadway in vast numbers . . . Each one of the returning pilgrims is proudest of his or her tan . . . The men, jealous of the tan they picked up, rush immediately to their clubs or their barber shops to reinforce it with sun lamp treatments . . . The girls are cleverer . . . They use a bronze make-up lotion as a base, and when you see them in the streets they appear shades darker than the male of the species.

The Federal Diary

(Trade-Mark Applied For.)

By Morgan Baker.

PRACTICALLY no expense will be involved in restoring the practice of granting 30 days' leave to Federal employes, it was pointed out to the House Civil Service Committee by E. Claude Babcock, president of the American Federation of Government Employes, in urging passage of the Ramspeck annual leave bill, H. R. 5152.

BAKER.

It is customary in all offices, the employe leader emphasized, to permit leave at seasons of the year when work is least pressing, and when one employe can take on part or all of another employe's duties without excessive hardships. Only in the case of a few manual workers would actual replacement be necessary.

"When the increased efficiency of workers is taken into account," Mr. Babcock continued, "it is my own opinion that leave restoration is an economy rather than an expense."

As we have previously pointed out, Europe is far ahead of America in high standards of government personnel practices, particularly in regard to leave. Mr. Babcock reminded the committee of this fact, as he has made a wide study of employe conditions abroad.

From conversations with various Capitol Hill leaders, we find the statesmen recognize the acute need for restored leave. But, each one pauses and says, in effect—"How much will it cost the taxpayers to restore the 30 days' leave?"

When Mr. Babcock and other employe leaders convince the economy-minded Representatives that the cost of restored leave will be nothing—or at most a negligible sum—the bill will sail through both branches of Congress and the White House. Mr. Babcock is going further than efforts to convince Congress that there will be no additional cost, insisting also that the Government will save through increased efficiency of the employes provided with adequate leave.

New employes at Government Printing Office are urged by M. R. Speelman (P), president of the GPO Group Life Insurance Association, to communicate with E. C. Mellor (F), association secretary-treasurer, to obtain membership.

$1,320 to $4,600 Jobs.

Assistant Credit Union investigator, $2,600 a year, for service in Farm Credit Administration.

Assistant keeper, $1,320 a year, for service in National Zoological Park, Washington.

Lyman Carrier, chief agronomist, and T. B. Chambers, assistant to chief engineer, Soil Erosion Service, are on an extended trip through Southern and Western projects of the service. They will pay particular attention to wind erosion demonstrations at Dalhart, Tex., Colorado Springs, Colo., and Huron, S. Dak.

Diary Guest Tickets.

IF (F), (P) or (C) follows your name in this column call in person on the Federal Diary editor today between 4:30 and 6 p. m. You will receive tickets to one of the following Loew's theaters: (F) Loew's Fox (stage, Casino de Paree Revue and other acts; screen, Helen Hayes and Robert Montgomery in "Vanessa"); or to (P) Loew's Palace (Claudette Colbert in "The Gilded Lily"); or to (C) Loew's Columbia (stage, Mr. and Mrs. Martin Johnson in person; screen, "Baboona").

A Question of Color.

"I think it's simply terrible,"
Said a typist young and fair,
"The way the Government dictates
What colors we shall wear.

"Now there's that bill that Congress passed,
It's quite absurd I think,
I understand it puts a ban

"Of course I'll try to keep the law,
I'm a patriot, good and true.
I wonder could I dye my slips
A pretty shade of blue?"

Gala Benefit Dance Near.

Heading an imposing array of Broadway night club and radio stars, Harold Knight and his orchestra will appear in the Continental Revue to be staged Saturday night at the Washington Hotel. The revue, to be followed by a dance, is sponsored by the Sick Benefit Association of the American Federation of Government Employes.

Leading representatives of the diplomatic and legislative corps are expected to attend, to augment several thousand Government employes and their friends. Proceeds from the show will be used to carry on the work of the Sick Benefit Association. Reservations can be made through any of the A. F. G. E. officers, who are found in practically every office in Federal Washington.

Kansas City Massacre Perjury Case Closed

Kansas City, March 13 (AP).—The Federal Government's prosecution of perjury charges against three Kansas City police officers in connection with the Union Station slayings of 1933 is ended. A Federal jury was out only 18 minutes last night in returning a verdict of not guilty against Eugene C. Reppert, former police director.

Maurice M. Milligan, United States district attorney, announced today indictments against Thomas J. Higgins, detective chief, and George L. (Jeff) Rayen, detective lieutenant, would be dismissed. He said evidence against them was similar to that in the Reppert case.

Solution to "What Would You Do?"

"MORE THAN ETHICS"

Broadcast Wednesday, at 10:30 P. M., from WJSV

The doctor's eyes gazed around the comfortable room—at the flowers, the fire, the books, the piano. From the room next door came the sound of children's voices. They were romping, laughing—too young to understand that death had taken their father. What would happen to them if the insurance company did not pay Ted's policies? Would they romp and laugh in an orphan asylum or in a day nursery—while their mother worked?

"There's nothing the matter, Celia. I just came back here to write a letter. I want to tell the insurance company that Ted's death was perfectly natural. You see," he forced a laugh, "I'm not as clever a physician as I thought I was."

Celia didn't answer. She was listening to the voices of her children. They were saying their prayers. They were saying, "Give us this day our daily bread."
